LOS ANGELES (OCT. 26) UPI - Adult humor magazine National Lampoon, a 1970s success story that has fallen on hard times, acquired a new owner who promised to revive and expand the publication.

''We have a great franchise name in National Lampoon, and we're going to build on that,'' said James Jimirro, president and chief executive officer of J2 Communications, a comedy video company that announced Thursday that it had completed its previously announced $4.7 million buyout of National Lampoon Inc.

Jimirro, who founded the Disney cable channel in 1986 during his 16 year stint at Walt Disney Co., promised that the Lampoon, currently being published six times a year, will return to monthly publication in February.

The magazine currently has a circulation of about 250,000, less than a third of its peak a decade ago. ''I think that the magazine has been under-managed '' Jimirro said.

Jimirro has installed George Barkin as the magazine's new editor, but said that there are no plans to boost the staff of 15.

Jimirro also said that the Lampoon will move into areas such as theater shows, merchandising, videos, radio and television. He noted that Disney has been successful in such diversification moves because of the ''synergy'' that can be built in seemingly disparate areas.

''Quite frankly, the Disney marketing thrust is going to be our model,'' Jimirro said.

The Lampoon was first published in 1970 largely with alumni of the Harvard University humor magazine, the Harvard Lampoon. It became a success by appealing to baby boomers' humor with off-beat features, such as ''True Facts '' a monthly collection of bogus news called ''The Yellow Pages,'' the diary of the wife of former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew and conversations with a foul-mouthed New York cabbie named ''Bernie X.''

Its most notorious cover featured a dog with a gun pointed at its head and the message: ''If you don't buy this magazine, we'll kill this dog.''

In the early 1970s, the magazine also backed a theater show that helped launch the careers of several stars of ''Saturday Night Live,'' including Bill Murray and the late John Belushi.

The company hit its peak in the late 1970s, following the release of its smash hit movie, ''Animal House,'' starring Belushi. It also lent its name to three National Lampoon ''Vacation'' movies, each starring Chevy Chase.

The magazine's monthly circulation peaked at about 850,000 about a decade ago, but then began a steady decline throughout the 1980s.

(OCT. 26) UPI - Philippine President Aquino is ordering the filing of criminal charges against those behind strike-related violence that left four more people dead today. Aquino also wants government workers who took part in the walkout punished.

Officials and news reports say an earthquake measuring six-point-two on the Richter scale hit the southern Philippines last night, causing cracks in buildings but NO injuries. The quake was centered 895 miles south of Manila.

Police in New York say more violence erupted early today in a strike that may decide the fate of the nation's biggest daily tabloid newspaper. One NON-union driver was hurt and several Daily News trucks vandalized.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 26) UPI - Senate Republican leader Robert Dole cautioned Friday that budget negotiations were ''creeping along'' and warned that the long-sought agreement could fall short of the five-year $500 billion goal in deficit cuts.

''The budget process is still creeping along,'' Dole said. ''There are a number of issues, major issues, still to be resolved.''

In brief Senate remarks, Dole said, ''We're losing some of our savings in the last days of the budget negotiations.

''Some are saying we can't reduce spending,'' Dole said. ''If we're going to reduce cuts in spending, we may not wind up with this magic $500 billion in five years.''

''We are going to insist, OK, if we fall short on the savings side, let's also take some taxes out,'' Dole said.

Dole cited among the issues that have not been settled some problems with the proposed new tax rate of 31 percent for the wealthiest taxpayers and at what stage they should lose deductions and exemptions.

The Senate Republican leader, however, remained optimistic that an agreement could be reached by nightfall and that Congress would quickly pass the package and adjourn for the year.

Negotiators failed to reach an agreement despite late-night talks Thursday, putting together the crucial details to the framework of a package that seems to have the backing of Democrats and the administration.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, worked into the early hours of Friday morning on tying up loose ends in taxes and Medicare cuts.

While President Bush appeared willing to embrace the plan, White House Chief of Staff John Sununu warned congressional leaders against hiding any surprises among the final details.

''There's a lot of mischief that can be done in the details and we don't want to commit to something and discover an accumulation of mischief that undermines the agreements that have been made,'' said Sununu after spending 2 1/2 hours trying to rally support for the package among rebellious House Republicans.

Sununu sounded positive about the chances the House and Senate would approve the package once it is finished.

''I have faith all the time,'' Sununu said. ''I'm an optimist.''

Asked about the unfinished deal while jogging on the grounds of the vice presidential residence in Washington, Bush told reporters he was ''feeling good about it.''

''The president does believe this budget report is a historic bipartisan agreement,'' White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said. ''Although the process has been somewhat tortuous, we can believe there has been solid achievement.''

Earlier, Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas said ''at least two dozen issues'' remained unresolved, including some spending cuts, ''a number of issues on the tax side'' and agriculture.

Bentsen said that ''we've got a lot of work to do'' before the deal is set. He did say the Senate had agreed to cut Medicare by about $42 billion over five years, embracing the House proposal and slicing $7 billion in cuts from the Senate bill.

Among outstanding issues, Panetta said, were ''a huge number'' of tax issues, whether to extend some expiring business tax breaks and whether to agree to language in the Senate bill granting new tax breaks to encourage oil drilling.

''I have a feeling it may be more controversial than some of the other stuff '' Panetta said of the oil-drilling breaks.

Senate tax negotiators also sought to raise the deduction limitation on income over $125,000 to 4 percent, up from the 3 percent for income over $100,000 contained the House version, and sought alterations in the House personal exemption phaseout plan.

Panetta said, ''I sense that there is a drive toward conclusion'' of the budget process - a 10-month partisan tug of war that began in January when Bush unveiled his fiscal year 1991 budget plan and included a bipartisan budget summit that produced a deal the House rejected earlier this month.

(OCT. 26) UPI - Diplomatic sources said Secretary of State James Baker is expected to travel to Saudi Arabia to obtain permission for a military strike against Iraq if that option is deemed necessary, while Defense Secretary Dick Cheney confirmed the present U.S. force in the desert may be increased by 100,000 troops.

The sources said Thursday the latest decision regarding Baker is a strong signal to Iraq that the United States is deadly serious about its stand that Saddam must unconditionally withdraw his troops from Kuwait.

Prince Bandar Bin Sultan, the Saudi ambassador to the United States, met with Undersecretary of State for Political Affairs Robert Kimmitt and the State Department's top expert on counter-terrorism, Morris Busbie.

As he left, Bandar said: ''The question of war and peace is in the hands of Saddam Hussein.''

Meanwhile, Saddam said Thursday that some 700 Bulgarian hostages can leave Iraq. The decision came in a joint communique issued after talks with Bulgaria's visiting vice-president, Baghdad Radio said.

''All Bulgarians in Iraq can now leave the country freely,'' the state-owned radio said. There was no explanation why the Bulgarians were allowed to leave.

Former Japanese Prime Minister Yashuhiro Nakasone said Friday he will travel to Baghdad next week to meet with Saddam in an effort to convince him to release of Japanese hostages. Former British Prime Minister Edward Heath secured the release of 54 British and American hostages this week after a personal appeal to the Iraqi president.

Nine of the 14 Americans released by Iraq this week arrived at Dulles International Airport outside Washington Thursday evening. The other five had arrived in New York Wednesday, the same day 40 British captives celebrated their own arrival in London.

Officials at Paris's Charles de Gaulle airport said 25 Portuguese hostages arrived in the French capital from Baghdad via Jordan Thursday.

Some 330 French hostages also were expected to leave Iraq soon.

Iraq is holding some 5,000 Western hostages as human shields against Western attack. Baghdad is also preventing some 5,000 Soviet nationals from leaving the country though neither Iraq nor the Soviet Union have classified the Soviets as hostages.

A senior exiled Kuwaiti government official in Cairo said up to 7,000 Kuwaiti nationals were known to have been killed or missing in the aftermath of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

''The Kuwaiti government does not know the exact number of people killed because Iraq has not allowed any international humanitarian organizations to investigate its illegal actions in Kuwait,'' said the Kuwaiti official, who asked his name not be used.

''We know that up to 7,000 Kuwaitis have been killed or are missing after the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait'' on Aug. 2, the official said.

Cairo Radio and Egypt's Middle East News Agency quoted officials at Kuwait's Embassy in the Syrian capital of Damascus as saying 4,200 Kuwaitis were killed in the aftermath of the Iraqi invasion.

The state-owned radio said Iraqi forces also took 12,000 Kuwaiti soldiers and civilians into custody.

It was the first time Kuwaiti officials were quoted as giving specific figures of casualties after Saddam ordered his tanks and troops to occupy the emirate and crush all resistance.

At least half of Kuwait's 20,000-strong armed forces fled to Saudi Arabia after the Iraqi invasion, according to Kuwait's exiled defense minister, who said units of the remaining Kuwaiti army were now deployed on the front-line on the Saudi-Kuwaiti border.

A spokesman for the Cairo-based Arab Organization for Human Rights also estimated that 7,000 Kuwaitis have been killed or are missing in the aftermath of the Iraqi invasion, but warned the figures could be an ''underestimate.''

Cheney said as many as 100,000 additional U.S. troops could be sent to the Persian Gulf, an increase military leaders were seeking to enable them to launch an attack.

The Pentagon said there were already more than 210,000 U.S. ground, air and naval troops in Saudi Arabia and the surrounding region, facing an Iraqi force of 430,000 in Kuwait and southern Iraq.

Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was believed to have received a request for another three heavily armored or mechanized divisions during his visit to Saudi Arabia Monday and Tuesday from the commander of the U.S. Central Command, Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 26) UPI - Former Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell says he may have been wrong to vote with the majority in a split-decision upholding a Georgia statute criminalizing sodomy between consenting adults.

Powell's thoughts on the subject are to be published in The National Law Journal Monday and are based on a speech he gave before a group of law students at New York University School of Law Oct. 18 and in an interview with the Journal on Oct 23.

In his appearance before the students, Powell was asked how he reconciled the 1986 decision in Bowers vs. Hardwick, which limited the right to privacy, with his vote in Roe vs. Wade, which extended a woman's right to privacy to include the decision to have an abortion.

''I think I probably made a mistake in that one,'' Powell said of the Bowers decision, the Journal reported.

In the interview with the Journal, Powell said, ''I do think I was inconsistent in a general way with Roe. When I had the opportunity to reread the opinions a few months later, I thought the dissent had the better of the arguments.''

Powell also told the Journal that his vote was the swing vote that allowed his conservative colleagues to win. ''My vote was the deciding vote that made the decision 5-4,'' he said.

Lawrence Tribe, the Harvard law professor who presented the losing argument before the Supreme Court, told the Journal that Powell's admission is ''certainly noteworthy and gratifying, even though it comes a bit too late.''

The case involved Michael Hardwick of Georgia, who was charged with criminal sodomy with a man in his bedroom. The charge was dropped, but Hardwick sued, challenging the statute's constitutionality.

Powell, in his concurring opinion, wrote, ''I agree with the court that there is no fundamental right - i.e., no substantive right under the due process clause - such as that claimed by the respondent.''

The majority opinion, written by Justice Byron White, relied on historical proscriptions of homosexual activity in Western law. White wrote: ''Against this background, to claim that a right to engage in such conduct is 'deeply rooted in this nation's history and tradition' or 'implicit in the concept of ordered liberty' is, at best, facetious.''

HONG KONG (OCT. 26) UPI - Less than a month after establishing full diplomatic ties with China and making an official visit to the communist country, Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew said Friday a shake-up of the Beijing government is inevitable.

In a speech at the Hong Kong Foreign Correspondents' Club, Lee also staunchly defended his nation's restrictions on the Western press while about 25 students protested outside against the measures.

Lee, who just completed a nine-day visit to China, said he was convinced that many younger Chinese leaders thought the country needed to dramatically increase its limited free-market system to solve the communist nation's economic problems.

These leaders ''realize that you cannot solve China's problems with a state plan for the big industries and a free-market system for the smaller industries,'' he said. ''It just won't work.

''I think there will be a shake-up when the old guard leaves the scene. I think it must happan. It is invevitable.''

Lee, who is scheduled to step down next month after 31 years as prime minister defended his policy of restricting the circulation of foreign publications that commented on Singapore's domestic issues without giving the government the right of full reply.

Two Hong Kong-based Dow Jones publications, the Asian Wall Street Journal and the Far Eastern Economic Review, had their circulations slashed in Singapore after refusing to grant Lee space to dispute reports they printed about the island republic.

Both have suspended all circulation in the Southeast Asian city-state in response to the restrictions.

''If these publications are so committed to publishing the facts and furthering the market place of ideas, than why are they so against printing what I have to say?'' Lee asked. ''Since you (foreign media) are entering my game, you must play by my rules.''

The protesters, mostly students, confronted Lee when he arrived at the FCC, waving signs and chanting slogans critical of the press restrictions.

The students said Singapore's restrictions could set a dangerous precedent for similar measures in Hong Kong after the British colony returns to Chinese rule in 1997.

''We will fight for press freedom in Hong Kong,'' said university student Monina Wong. ''We need to send a message to people that economic prosperity cannot be earned at the expense of freedom.''

DUBLIN, IRELAND (OCT. 26) UPI - A tape recording of Deputy Minister Brian Lenihan saying his party used questionable tactics to get more government power eight years ago has caused a controversy that threatens to topple the coalition government of Charles Haughey.

Lenihan is considered the front runner in a three-way race for the Irish presidency on Nov. 7, and the tape recording of an interview he gave to a political science student named James Duffy last May has brought about a vote of confidence on the government next Tuesday.

Lenihan denies any role in the affair, even though the tapes were aired Thursday at a televised news conference.

The controversy which is being compared to the Watergate scandal involves political maneuvers after the Jan. 27, 1982, collapse of the 7- month-old center-left coalition government led by Prime Minister Garrett Fitzgerald after a vote of no confidence in the lower house of Parliament.

It has been repeatedly alleged senior members of the then-opposition party, including Lenihan and incumbent Prime Minister Charles Haughey, phoned President Patrick Hillery to dissuade him from dissolving Parliament and calling an election.

They wanted the president - who aside from being able to dissolve parliament holds an otherwise largely symbolic post - to let Haughey form a new government by simply proving his strength on the floor of the house.

Hillary apparently rejected the scheme, which broke constitutional precedent by trying to use the head of state to enhance political careers, but has refused to comment on the controversy.

Earlier this week, Fitzgerald resurrected the controversy when he said on a television program that he was in the president's home when Lenihan and other members of the Fianna Fail Party made the calls.

Lenihan, who is also defense minister, has denied the whole episode as ''fiction.''

''I did not ring President Hillery,'' he said. ''I want to put my reputation on the line in that respect.''

A government spokesman said Thursday before the tapes were aired that no members of the Fianna Fail had placed any calls to the president.

But later Thursday, Sylvester Barrett, a junior minister, said he had made the calls.

''I rang possibly two times, but definitely not more than three,'' Barrett said. Fitzgerald claims at least eight calls were made.

In the taped interview, however, Lenihan was quite frank about placing calls and actually speaking with the president, saying, ''Oh yeah. I got through to him. I talked to him, but he wanted us to lay off.''

Lenihan, explaining why he had made the statement, clarified, ''on mature reflection, I was mistaken. It was a rushed interview. It was supposed to be a private interview. I obliged (Duffy) because I wanted to help him with his thesis.''

Opposition leaders have called for Lenihan's withdrawal from the presidential race, but under Irish law, candidates cannot step down.

However, public belief that Lenihan tried to pressure the president could lessen his chances of reaching that office.

The Fianna Fail is six seats short of a parliamentary majority and is in power because it formed a coalition government with the six-member Progressive Democrats Party, which has not said how it will vote on the confidence motion.

The other candidates for president - - are Mary Robinson, an independent supported by the Labor Party, and Austin Currie of the Fine Gael.

It is the first presidential elections in 17 years because Hillery took the seven-year term twice in an uncontested bid.

SALT LAKE CITY (OCT. 26) UPI - Members of a state panel reviewing the status of controversial ''cold fusion'' research at the University of Utah have charged the scientists in charge of the work have failed to cooperate.

Neither E. Stanley Pons nor Martin Fleischmann attended a meeting Thursday of the state Fusion Energy Advisory Council, which is overseeing the state-funded National Cold Fusion Institute.

Pons and Fleischmann startled the scientific world in 1989 when they claimed they had achieved nuclear fusion in a jar at room temperature. If true, the reaction could provide a cheap source of safe energy.

Their claims, however, have been largely disputed by the scientific community, which has been generally unable to duplicate their claims.

The pair's claims prompted the Utah Legislature to appropriate $5 million to establish the institute. Pons and Fleischmann have received more than $1 million of the $2.2 million spent by the institute.

Committee member Karen Morse of the Utah State University said it was time the scientists became more forthcoming.

''They have been funded by the state for a lot of money,'' Morse said. ''The state has committed to them, we have coddled them and been very reasonable.''

After about 90 minutes of discussions Thursday, the council demanded to know why Pons and Fleischmann were not present, why they had refused to cooperate with the panel and where the $2.2 million had gone.

''We've listened for over an hour to some interesting observations that some of you aren't willing to hang your hat on,'' Randy Moon, Gov. Norm Bangerter's science advisor, told Fritz Will, the institute director.

The committee is tired of a lack of cooperation from Pons and Fleischmann, Moon said.

Joe Tesch, the attorney representing Utah in the cold fusion matter, said he spoke with Pons' attorney Wednesday, and was told the two researchers are willing to accommodate the panel when they return to the United States next month. Both were out of the country, with Fleischmann undergoing medical treatment for an undisclosed ailment in England.

Tesch said the pair did not want to expose themselves to the media. Also, he said, they were close to completing a patent application and did not want to talk about it for fear of disclosing confidential information.

''I take issue with that statement (of not standing by their claims), '' Will told Moon. ''I hope I can instill in you the institution is doing a very good job. This is a very ticklish situation. We are all suffering. We should all hang together.''

The committee also criticized Pons and Fleischmann for refusing to share any of their research results with their colleagues at the institute.

SINGAPORE (OCT. 26) UPI - The Persian Gulf crisis has not halted investments in the oil, gas and petrochemical industry of the Asia-Pacific region, representatives of key companies said Friday.

Oilmen planning on participating in the 8th Offshore South East Asia Exhibition, the largest petroleum forum in Asia, said the oil and gas industry has been enjoying an upswing in the region for the past two years, with increased exploration activity and downstream projects coming on-line.

The recent events in the gulf plus higher oil prices following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2 are expected to result in an even greater upsurge of activity in the Pacific Rim, identified as an area of high potential by exhibitors at the four-day conference starting Dec. 4.

Alan Killingsworth, a manager of the FMC Corporation with headquarters in Chicago, said the firm regarded as a market leader in oil wellheads intends to increase its activities in Malaysia, Burma, India and Australia despite the long-term uncertainties caused by the tension in the gulf.

''The gulf situation won't change our direction or commitment to this region in any way,'' Killingsworth said. ''We will continue to promote our involvement in the Pacific Rim and maintain our long-standing relationships with our customers in this region as well as in the Middle East.''

A higher than average number of exhibitors planned to attend the conference - more than 300, including groups from the United States, Britain, Canada, Australia, Norway, Holland, Italy, France and other EC countries.

Higher oil prices have made companies more willing to invest in new technology to conserve their supplies, representatives said.

Anthony Yeo, sales manager of Conocco specializing in the latest technology to separate oil from water in drilling operations, said, ''We find that more companies are approaching us to improve their efficiency in oil production.''

Suppliers to the major oil and petrochemical sectors cited positive gains for the industry in the short term.

NORFOLK, VA (OCT. 26) UPI - The Navy decommissioned the battleship USS Iowa Friday, retiring the World War II-era ship that fell to Pentagon budget cuts after an April 1989 gun turret explosion killed 47 crewmen.

''We thank you for those now living or dead, who gave Iowa her life and made her the great symbol of freedom, peace and strength she will always be,'' Cmdr. Joseph Cappar, the command chaplain, said during a shipboard ceremony at Norfolk Naval Station.

Hundreds of former Iowa crewmen, their families and loved ones of those who died in the explosion gathered on the battleship's wooden deck. The ceremony was held under gray skies as wind and rain whipped the crowd.

Many crewmen who served aboard the ship as far back as World War II said they were saddened the Iowa was being mothballed.

''It's like burying one of your people,'' said Dusty Curtis, 67, of Lansing, Mich., who served aboard the Iowa from 1943-45.

The Iowa is being retired along with the battleship USS New Jersey, based in Long Beach, Calif., which is slated to be taken out of service next February. Retirement of the two vessels will leave the United States with two active Iowa-class battleships, the USS Wisconsin and the USS Missouri.

The Wisconsin, based in Norfolk, is currently deployed in the Persian Gulf region. The Missouri is stationed in San Diego.

The Navy has said the Iowa, which at full strength carried 1,500 sailors, is not being retired due to the April 19, 1989, gun turret explosion that killed 47 sailors.

But the explosion, which remains under investigation, hastened its return to mothballs. The Navy estimated it would have cost about $12 million to repair the gutted No. 2 turret.

The Navy initially concluded the explosion was likely the result of sabotage carried out by Gunner's Mate 2nd Class Clayton Hartwig. But after a series of congressional hearings and additional explosive tests showed the blast may have been accidental, the Navy reopened its probe.

The explosion occurred while the Iowa's crew was firing the battleship's 16-inch guns during military exercises off of Puerto Rico.

The Navy is decommissioning the Iowa for the third time since it was commissioned in 1943. It was most recently brought back into service on April 28, 1984, after undergoing $348.7 million in renovation.

The New Jersey, also recommissioned under the Reagan administration, was returned to service on Dec. 28, 1982, at a cost of $332.7 million.

Critics have argued the ships are strategically outdated and should have remained in mothballs. But Navy officers staunchly defend the old battlewagons and point to the Wisconsin's service in the Persian Gulf as proof they remain a viable force.

The Iowa's keel was laid on June 27, 1940, and it first went out to sea on Feb. 24, 1943. It took President Franklin D. Roosevelt to the Tehran Conference with Winston Churchill and Joseph Stalin and a square white bathtub installed for Roosevelt remains aboard the ship.

The Iowa sailed in the Pacific during World War II, then was decommissioned on March 24, 1949, going into mothballs in San Francisco. The battleship was recommissioned on April 1, 1951, as the flagship for the 7th Fleet in Korea and was retired again on Feb. 24, 1958.

The Iowa will be towed to the nearby Norfolk Naval Shipyard next week, where it will remain until next year, when it is moved to the inactive ship facility in Philadelphia.

MIAMI (OCT. 26) UPI - Two alleged members of a Jamaican drug, robbery and murder gang were killed and two were injured in a shootout between the suspects and federal and local police in a sting operation, the FBI said Friday.

No law enforcement agents were injured during the 15-second exchange of gunfire outside a warehouse Thursday night between the four suspected drug dealers and at least 20 members of a joint task force of federal agents and Metro-Dade County police.

One of the suspects died at the warehouse, one died en route to the hospital, and two were in stable condition at a local hospital Friday, said FBI spokesman Paul Miller.

Names of the suspects were not released. The two injured men will be charged with possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, conspiracy and assault on federal officers. More charges could follow, Miller said.

Miller declined to say whether other gang members were being sought, but said the investigation was continuing.

The four men - armed with automatic weapons and posing as police officers - were alleged members of a ''Jamaican Posse'' linked to home invasion robberies drug ripoffs and murders, said William Gavin, FBI special agent-in-charge of Miami.

''These guys have been active throughout Dade County,'' Gavin said. ''We believe they have been involved in a number of murders.''

Undercover agents had told the suspects ''multi-kilos'' of cocaine were stashed in the Dade County warehouse, Miller said.

''They fired indiscriminately and immediately,'' Miller said. ''They were shooting their way into the warehouse. They were prepared to kill anyone who was there, but they were posing as police.''

More than 20 officers hid inside and around the facility as the suspects broke into the warehouse, he said.

''These four individuals arrived heavily armed, posed as police officers, and attempted to grab a federal undercover agent outside the warehouse,'' Miller said. ''The agent (posing as a drug dealer) was able to get into the warehouse.''

The men fired at the warehouse door, broke a window and ''one of them entered the warehouse, grabbed the cocaine and left,'' Miller said.

The FBI agents identified themselves with a bullhorn, told the suspects they were under arrest and ordered them to ''freeze,'' Miller said.

The suspects fired on the officers, and police returned shots. The men were carrying weapons that included an AK-47, a MAC-10 equipped a silencer and various handguns, Miller said.

''We're talking about very dangerous individuals,'' he said. ''They were there posing as police. They were there to steal the drugs. They were there to kill anyone who got in their way.''

The confrontation was the result of a two-month joint investigation by Metro-Dade County police, the FBI and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

CAIRO, EGYPT (OCT. 26) UPI - Egypt is refusing to allow some Sudanese planes to cross its airspace in an escalation of a bitter feud between the two neighboring African countries that has been made worse by the Persian Gulf crisis, it was reported Friday.

The Saudi newspaper Asharq al-Awsat quoted officials from Sudan Air in Khartoum as saying they had received an official memo from Egyptian authorities informing them that Egyptian airspace would be closed to flights from Sudan to Jordan.

Officials in Cairo had no comment on the report and Captain Sheikh el Din Mohammed Abdullah, a deputy director general at the airlines, said the company had no idea why Egypt ordered the ban.

But both Sudan and Jordan have taken a sympathetic stand toward Iraqi President Saddam Hussein in the gulf crisis triggered by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, while Egypt has been an Arab leader in efforts to oust Iraqi troops from Kuwait.

Western diplomats in Cairo said Egypt may have decided to hinder the flights because it was concerned a U.N.-imposed economic embargo against Iraq was being broken with shipments through the Jordanian port of Aqaba, but they could not for sure name the motive.

Sudan Air officials said they had been operating two flights a week to Aqaba to pick up Sudanese nationals fleeing Iraq and occupied Kuwait via Jordan. They said 11 more flights between Sudan's capital of Khartoum and Aqaba had been scheduled for November, but it was not clear if they would be canceled or it they would skirt Egyptian territory.

Egypt and Sudan have had deteriorating relations in the past year but the ongoing crisis has escalated the tension between the two Arabic- speaking, Moslem countries, which share a 750-mile border that cuts across the Nile.

Cairo has accused the Sudanese military government of Gen. Omar Hassan el Bashir of harboring Moslem fundamentalists antagonistic toward Egypt, including a blind 40-year-old Egyptian preacher named Sheikh Omar Abdul Rahman whose followers were convicted of assassinating former Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in 1981.

Egyptian newspapers reported earlier this week that the Moslem Brotherhood fundamentalist movement had established three camps in Sudan where Egyptians, Algerians and Yemenis were being trained in terrorist tactics.

The newspapers charged the Sudanese-linked fundamentalists had assisted suspected pro-Iraqi terrorists who gunned down Egyptian Parliament Speaker Rifaat el-Mahgoub in Cairo two weeks ago.

Tension between the two countries was also heightened by reports Iraq had deployed Scud missiles in Sudan that were aimed at Cairo.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak took a tough line toward the unconfirmed reports, vowing Egypt would destroy any such missiles and suggesting that if Iraq could invade Kuwait, he could invade Sudan. Observers said the comments were more of a scare tactic than a real threat.

''It's certainly nowhere near the point where fighting is going to break out, but the situation is definitely becoming more uncomfortable between the two,'' said a Western diplomatic source in Cairo who did not want to be identified.

Still, Cairo and Khartoum maintain diplomatic relations and are both members of the Arab League and other, African groups.

''Sudan and Egypt are just another casualty of the gulf crisis,'' the diplomat said. ''It is indicative of a wider split in the Arab world as a whole.''

KARACHI, PAKISTAN (OCT. 26) UPI - A U.S.-based organization which observed Pakistan's elections said Friday TV coverage was biased but it had ''no evidence'' to substantiate charges of mass vote rigging leveled by dismissed prime minister Benazir Bhutto.

''It is our opinion that the safeguards in the system would make tampering on on a scale sufficient to affect the overall nationwide result difficult,'' said a statement by the National Democratic Institute.

The Washington-based NDI sent a 40-member international delegation to observe last Wednesday's National Assembly elections.

It said NDI came to the conclusion election workers apparently were ''impartial and effective.''

The statement said, however, the election ''was not without problems.'' It complained of biased news coverage by the state-run television and said corruption charges filed against Bhutto and members of her administration ''complicated the pre-election atmosphere.''

The Islamic Democratic Alliance, a loose army-backed coalition of parties opposed to Bhutto, scored an unexpected and decisive victory over her Pakistan People's Party in the polls.

Bhutto, whose government was dismissed by President Ghulam Ishaq Khan in August on charges of corruption and nepotism, has charged the opposition's win was achieved as a result of ''gross rigging.'' She alleged that ballot boxes had been switched after the votes were cast.

But Bhutto has agreed that her party would still contest Saturday's elections to Pakistan's four provincial assemblies.

''The delegation ... received allegations about tampering with the vote count by switching ballot boxes and by expelling polling agents,'' the American group's statement said. ''Our delegation saw no evidence on election night to support these allegations.''

It said that before the elections the candidates were free to communicate with the voters at rallies and other campaign activities.

''But despite these positive conditions, the election process was not without problems,'' the NDI said. ''The delegation believes that the ongoing tribunal process during the campaign and the selective filing of references before these special courts complicated the pre-election atmosphere.

''In the same way, the caretaker government views of the perquisites of incumbency were controversial and seem to have given advantage to one of the contesting parties.''

When Ishaq Khan sacked Bhutto's 20-month-old government on Aug. 6, he also accused it of failing to control law and order, and dissolved the National Assembly. He appointed opposition leader Ghulam Mustafa Jatoi to head an interim government until the elections.

The president also set up Special Disqualification Courts to try Bhutto and members of her administration on corruption charges. If found guilty they could be barred from politics for seven years.

Many believe Ishaq Khan's actions were inspired by the army, which has run Pakistan for more than half of its 43-year history and which had been in conflict with Bhutto's democratic government.

NDI's statement said the delegation also ''heard several complaints about bias in the electronic media. The delegation concludes that Pakistan television news coverage of the campaign was not balanced.''

It said it had received ''credible reports of specific and serious problems'' in certain constituencies on election day, including ''attacks by armed men on polling officers, agents and voters and the arrests of party workers.''

But it said ''the elections as we observed them at the local level were generally open, orderly and well-administered. The election personnel appeared to be impartial and effective.''

A 16-member non-governmental delegation from countries belonging to the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation, of which Pakistan is a member, also observed the election process in polling stations in and around the northeastern city of Lahore.

In a brief report, it said polling ''appeared to be free, fair and orderly in a majority of the polling stations visited.''

But it also complained that the corruption charges filed against Bhutto and members of her administration ''hindered a fair election campaign. Further, the partisan use of the electronic media was not conducive to a free and fair election.''

About 48 million of Pakistan's 110 million people were eligible to vote. Pakistani reporters said turnout appeared lower than in the 1988 elections, when 43 percent of voters cast ballots.

TORONTO (OCT. 26) UPI - The Toronto Maple Leafs, off to one of their worst starts ever, Friday fired Coach Doug Carpenter.

General Manager Floyd Smith ''relieved'' Carpenter of his coaching duties after a morning meeting. No interim coach was immediately appointed and Floyd indicated it would be several days before a new coach was named.

Assistant coach Tom Watt was expected to run the team's practice session Friday. The Maple Leafs are last in the standings with just three points after 11 games.

Thursday night the team lost its second straight game to the St. Louis Blues 8-5. Wednesday the Blues won 8-3.

Toronto has been outscored 54-28 so far this season.

MOSCOW (OCT. 26) UPI - President Mikhail Gorbachev issued a decree Friday increasing the annual interest return on bank savings accounts to as much as 9 percent, representing a jump of as much as 300 percent.

The decree, published in the official government newspaper Izvestia, set investment rates of 5 percent for deposits maintained for 1 to 3 years, 7 percent for 3 to 5 years and 9 percent for money deposited for more than 5 years.

The current maximum return on long-term deposits is 3 percent.

Soviet citizens have an estimated 300 billion rubles ($516 billion at the ''official rate'' set by the government) withdrawn from circulation, much of it not held in banks.

Gorbachev's order, one of a series of presidential decrees and legislative acts in the country's slow transition to a market economy, is partly aimed at drawing the excess rubles into legal channels and away from black-market purchases or speculation.

SAN DIEGO (OCT. 26) UPI - Nate Colbert, the career home run leader for the San Diego Padres, was indicted Thursday on eight counts of bank fraud and four counts of making false statements on loan applications.

The U.S. Attorney's office said in a release that Colbert fraudulently obtained $138,000 in loans from a San Diego County bank by listing real estate he did not own among his assets on four loan application and understating the amount of money he owed on other land.

Colbert, 44, played for the Padres from 1969 to 1974. He was the Padres' all-time home run leader with 163. He was fired Thursday as a coach in the team's minor-league system.

The former first baseman was among the first stars the expansion club boasted had when they joined the National League in 1969. He spent four years with the Houston Astros before joining the Padres.

The Padres said his dismissal as hitting instructor with their Class A team in Riverside was part of a front office overhaul and was not related to the indictment.

On August 1, 1972, Colbert set a major-league record when he hit five home runs and drove in 13 runs in a doubleheader in Atlanta.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Bill Hayes said Colbert listed 16 acres of land in Maine that he didn't own as assets on four loan applications at Cuyamaca Bank in Santee, Calif. between Feb. 10, 1988 and December 1989.

''The indictment also alleges that Colbert understated the liability owed on 50 acres of Texas real estate,'' the release said.

Hayes said Friday there were no other suspects in the case and declined to say if Colbert had defaulted on any of the loans.

Colbert faces a maximum of 48 years in prison and $3 million in fines if convicted on all 12 counts. Hayes said a surrender date for Colbert to report for arraignment would be set for sometime early next week.

NAIROBI, KENYA (OCT. 26) UPI - Heavy fighting was reported in northern Rwanda Friday as the presidents of Rwanda and Uganda continued their efforts to find a diplomatic solution to the nearly month-old civil war.

''We always expect good things,'' one Rwandan diplomat in Kenya said of the scheduled meeting Friday between President Juvenal Habyarimana and Ugandan leader Yoweri Museveni in neighboring Zaire.

As the leaders met, however, state-run Rwanda radio Friday reported government troops had killed 320 rebels in battles in Gabiro and Mutase, in northern Rwanda.

''The battles are continuing until the last rebel is crushed,'' the radio report said.

The fighting began Oct. 1 when thousands of armed Rwandan rebels, previously exiled in Uganda, stormed across the border into Rwanda determined to overthrow the largely Hutu-tribe government.

Led by trained guerrilla fighter Maj. Gen. Fred Rwigyema, the rebel Rwandese Patriotic Front is made up mainly of Tutsi tribe refugees whose families fled to Uganda during tribal killings in Rwanda.

Extensive shuttle diplomacy between Belgium, Rwanda's former colonial ruler, Rwanda and Uganda, France, Zaire and Kenya, has so far failed to end the conflict.

A cease-fire coordinated between Belgium and Rwanda last Wednesday has also failed. Belgian Prime Minister Wilfried Martens said at the time, however, he did not know if the rebels had been aware of the agreement.

France and Belgium have sent troops to Rwanda to protect their nationals working in the tiny East African nation. On Friday, however, the Belgian Cabinet was to decide whether or not to keep its forces there.

There are some 500,000 Rwandans living in the countries around Rwanda, with an estimated 80,000 in Uganda alone.

Responding to calls to allow these refugees to return home, Habyarimana said earlier this year that Rwanda - the most densely populated nation in Africa - had no room for returning exiles.

Habyarimana's position on the exiles is one of the RPF's main complaints against the Rwandan government, which it has accused of being corrupt and regionalist.

BALTIMORE (OCT. 26) UPI - Passers-by staged an impromptu protest after a heart attack victim was removed from a grocery store and left outside because employees and the owner thought he was drunk, witnesses said.

The man, identified as 57-year-old James Drumwright, lay on the sidewalk outside the B&M Market in West Baltimore for about 20 minutes Thursday before an ambulance was called. He was pronounced dead later at Liberty Medical Center.

The incident sparked a protest by passers-by who urged shoppers to boycott the grocery. It also worried community leaders that neighborhood residents would see racial overtones in the incident because the store owner is of Korean ancestry and the heart attack victim was black.

''We want a thorough investigation into what occurred here,'' said Leslie

Howard, president of the Alliance of Rosemont Community Organizations. ''This kind of thing can cause tension in the community.''

Store owner Kenny Kang said the incident was an unavoidable mistake, which started when the store's manager, Marcus Gaffney, was told that a man was slumped over the meat case at the back of the store.

Gaffney said he saw a liquor bottle in the man's pocket. When he tried to rouse the man, he left the store on his own, the manager said.

''I feel bad now, but I thought he was drunk,'' Gaffney said.

A witness said it was Kang who told the manager and another employee to drag the man outside.

''If we had any idea he had had a heart attack, we would have called the paramedics,'' Kang said. ''They (the protesters) have a false assumption that they (store employees) dragged him out knowing he had a heart attack.''

WASHINGTON, IL (OCT. 26) UPI - If there were a ''10 Most Wanted List'' in the town of Washington, an abandoned dog that has roamed through a cornfield would be on it.

The mixed-breed, long-haired dog is being sought by the law and by people who claim they own him. But the dog apparently wants to remain a fugitive.

The dog first showed up in a cornfield near an elementary school three months ago and has been seen there ever since. At least four people claiming to be the owner have called the local newspaper, the Peoria Journal-Star, or local residents to try to get the dog.

Residents are not sure if the animal is male or female, but the four alleged owners have claimed his name is ''Schnapps,'' ''Lady,'' ''Domino'' or ''Digory.''

Thursday, 15 people gathered around the field and brought other dogs and food, hoping that the other animals or the chow would coax the animal to come to them.

All of their efforts failed as the dog continued to roam. Dog owners found five empty food containers with teeth marks on them, evidence that area residents had been taking care of the animal.

One resident, Karen Pierceall, said she thinks the only way the animal will be captured is if he is ''tranquilized.''

Besides people who want to take the dog home and feed him, there have been other area residents who have flocked to the cornfield to tell people to leave the dog alone.

Animal control officer Bob Marshall said all the attention the dog has gotten has made his effort to catch the canine more difficult.

''I know the people have the best intentions, but if they would just quit feeding him, he would go into a trap,'' said Marshall, who has tried to catch the dog for more than a month.

Marshall said he is worried because even though people care about the dog now, they may forget about him in several weeks.

MADISON HEIGHTS, MI (OCT. 26) UPI - A 71-year-old woman is taking Michigan's largest supermarket chain to court over a 7-cent pricing mistake in a case that is becoming a rallying point for consumer groups.

Evelyn Hoff is suing Farmer Jack, claiming she was overcharged for a Stouffer's Lean Cuisine spaghetti entree and the store refused to pay her a $1 penalty as prescribed by Michigan law.

Consumer groups rallied around Hoff, charging that the law is widely circumvented. Representatives of 15 to 20 consumers groups planned to meet Friday in a ''war council'' to discuss her case and other concerns.

Hoff, who says she checks her receipts regularly before leaving the store, complained to the store manager on Sept. 5, 1989, that she was charged $1.85 for a $1.78 item. The manager gave her a 7-cent refund.

Two days later, after Hoff learned about the state law, she returned to the store, seeking the $1 penalty charge, but the manager refused to grant it.

Under Michigan's item-pricing law, a store can avoid legal action by paying shoppers overcharged by automatic cash-register scanners a refund plus a penalty of 10 times the overcharge. The payment must be at least $1 but not more than $5.

After a flurry of letters to Farmer Jack, the supermarket chain sent Hoff a $25 gift certificate as an apology. But Hoff returned it, deciding instead to fight for the amount she was owned, according to the Michigan Consumers Council and other consumer groups monitoring the case.

Next month, Hoff's case goes before a judge. She is seeking $250 in damages.

Farmer Jack officials said the law is onerous, impossible to fulfill and unevenly enforced. They will seek to have the suit dismissed.

(OCT. 26) UPI - A number of loose ends apparently still need to be cleaned up but it appears as if Congress is finally ready to approve a budget for a fiscal year that is already almost one month old. Negotiators worked into the wee hours of this morning, and Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas says at least two dozen issues remain unsolved. They include spending cuts and what he calls ''a number of issues on the tax side.'' The White House indicates that President Bush is ready to sign whatever Congress approves, as long as there are NOT any last-minute changes.

Members of Congress haven't passed the budget bill yet but they have already got their bags packed and are ready to get out of Washington as fast as they can. It's NOT on fears of reaction to the budget but because the 101st Congress is almost over. The Senate is looking at a House-approved measure to spend 268-BILLION dollars for defense in fiscal 1991. It includes the largrest single-year cut in defense spending since the Vietnam war ended. The Senate also passed a two- point-one-BILLION-dollar bill that funds Congress for another year.

The military option is still wide open when it comes to getting Sadam Hussein out of Kuwait. And diplmatic sources report that Secretary of State Baker is expected to fly to Saudi Arabia soon to get the kingdom's permission for a military strike. Iraq still holds five-thousand Westerners as human shields against any attack. But it has decided that the 700 Bulgarians in that figure are now free to leave the country if they wish.

Storm winds above hurricane strength blasted into the North Carolina coast this morning, damaging a bridge to the Outer Banks and causing flooding and beach erosion in low-lying areas. Seas were reported running as high as 16 feet, and thousands were reported without power in the storm. The storm reportedly packed wind gusts of up to 92 miles an hour. The winds ripped a barge from its moorings and slammed it into the only bridge link to Hatteras Island, tearing down a 300-foot section. Five-thousand people were isolated.

The Moldavian Parliament declared a two-month state of emergency today in the southern Gagauz region. The region declared its independence from the republic and held secret night-time elections to form its own legislature. The official news agency Tass reported that Moldavian police reinforcements held back angry crowds of majority Moldavians at the border to the break-away region. The state of emergency was declared after negotiations between the republic and the region broke down.

PARIS (OCT. 26) UPI - Saddam Hussein has sent a message to President Francois Mitterrand saying he is ''ready to discuss'' problems in the Middle East, including Kuwait, a French television network reported Friday.

The network La Cinq said the Iraqi president sent a similar message to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev. A spokesman for the network said later the messages were relayed through the French and Soviet embassies in Baghdad ahead of a Franco-Soviet summit scheduled to open Sunday in Paris.

A spokesman for Mitterrand said she had ''no information'' about any such message. ''Maybe one was sent. But we didn't receive one.''

La Cinq quoted Saddam as saying in the message he was ''ready to discuss the problems of the Middle East including Kuwait'' and hoped the two traditional allies of Iraq would work to find solutions to the crisis triggered when Baghdad invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2.

A foreign ministry spokesman said he was unable to confirm any message was relayed to Mitterrand through the French Embassy in Baghdad.

Since the announced release of all French hostages held in Iraq and Kuwait, French officials this week have been cautiously trying to avoid intimations they were involved in negotations with Baghdad, asserting no talks can be held until all hostages are freed and Iraqi troops are withdrawn from Kuwait.

Several high-ranking French officials, sensitive to suggestions Iraq was trying to use France to break the anti-Iraq coaltion, have insisted French policy is unaltered by the hostage release, which they called ''unilateral.''

According to La Cinq, the Iraqi leader said he ''appreciated the French position'' in the Persian Gulf, which he termed ''different from that of the United States,'' and expressed hope a dialogue could be opened on the situation in Kuwait as well as the problem of a Palestinian homeland.

In all his comments on the subject, Mitterrand has rejected any effort to link the crisis in Kuwait with that of a Palestinian state. But he told the U.N. that once Iraq pulls out of Kuwait and foreign hostages are released ''everything becomes possible.''

French officials have sought to reassure their allies the Iraqi effort to court France does not reflect any yielding. In fact, they maintained France's firmness in refusing to negotiate prompted Saddam to release the French hostages.

More than 300 French nationals, representing all the hostages from France, were expected to arrive ''before the end of the weekend,'' according to a foreign ministry spokesman who declined to provide a specific timetable.

The spokesman said French officials still had not decided whether to repatriate six diplomats who are staffing the French embassy in Kuwait City, and who are suffering from a lack of food and water.

''It seems they might be able to hold out a little longer,'' the spokesman said.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (OCT. 26) UPI - NATO will continue to exist as ''the decisive cornerstone'' of European security regardless of the fate of the Warsaw Pact, Secretary General Manfred Woerner said Friday.

After meeting at NATO headquarters with Hungarian Defense Minister Lajos Fur, the NATO chief listed the main reasons why the Western alliance should be maintained.

''First there is a political reason,'' Woerner said. ''NATO represents the political cooperation of 16 sovereign democratic nations. If they stick together, they can influence the historical process of transformation toward our vision of a Europe whole and free. So politically it is needed.''

Second, he said, NATO is needed as a transatlantic link - ''the main transatlantic link.''

Woerner also said Europe could not do without the democracies of North America.

He added that ''of course, we need NATO as a defense alliance.''

''The classical threat has gone,'' he noted, but risks to European security still remain, including uncertainties and instabilities in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe and the current crisis in the Gulf.

''So we have to maintain a credible defense at reduced levels after successful disarmament talks in order to make sure that whatever happens the security of our member nations remains untouched,'' Woerner declared.

''These are the reasons why our alliance will continue to exist and will form one if not the decisive cornerstone of a new security structure in Europe.''

On Thursday, the chief of the Soviet military staff, Gen. Mikhail Moiseyev, made a landmark visit to NATO headquarters and called for a ''Europe free of military blocs.'' Moiseyev met with the 16 NATO chiefs of staff, who were assembled to draft the alliance's post-Cold War strategy at a meeting of the NATO Military Committee.

''It was a very lively, open and frank exchange of views,'' said the chairman of the Military Committee, Norwegian Gen. Vigleik Eide.

NEW YORK (OCT. 26) UPI - The two-week presentencing hearing of former junk-bond king Michael Milken may draw to a close Friday afternoon after prosecutors on Thursday said they would not call any further witnesses.

Milken's attorneys said they would inform U.S. District Court Judge Kimba Wood at Friday's session whether they intended to call any witnesses.

The big wild card is Milken himself. Defense attorneys tried to persuade Wood to grant the former Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. financier immunity from further prosecution in exchange for his testimony, but the judge denied the request, saying: ''It appears to me it's up to Mr. Milken to decide that he wants to testify.''

Milken, who headed Drexel's junk-bond department, pleaded guilty in April to six counts of insider trading. He faces a maximum jail term of 28 years.

In damaging testimony Thursday, the portfolio manager of a Boston mutual fund company accused Milken and another member of the junk-bond department of trading on insider information in connection with the sale of Caesars World Inc. bonds.

The portfolio manager, Prescott Crocker of Colonial Group Inc., said he agreed to swap $1.2 million of Caesars World bonds for another bond issue in July 1983 after James Dahl, then a Drexel junk-bond salesman, offered to buy the Caesars World issue for an above-market price.

But Crocker said he canceled the deal several days later, when he learned that Drexel was underwriting an offer to exchange the bonds for stock in the gaming company. The exchange offer sharply increased the value of the bonds.

''I called Jim (Dahl) and expressed my extreme outrage. I accused him and Drexel of trading on insider information,'' Crocker said.

When he confronted Milken directly about the questionable trade, Crocker said Milken told him that the exchange offer had been handled by another Drexel department. Milken said he knew nothing about it, Crocker added.

The government contends, however, that Milken had met with Caesars World executives two weeks before Drexel purchased the bonds from Crocker's fund and that Milken had urged the gaming company to make the exchange offer.

After Crocker cancelled the bond swap, he said Milken offered to compensate the money manager for the profit his fund would have made on the deal by selling him other bonds at below-market prices and buying them back at a later date at above-market value.

But Crocker said he declined the offer because he considered the proposal ''irregular and possibly illegal.''

LONDON (OCT. 26) UPI - Stock prices closed broadly lower in cautious trading Friday across Europe as higher oil prices and worries over the Middle East crisis dampened investor confidence.

Stocks fell in London, Paris, Frankfurt and Zurich, hammered by an array of rumors, surging oil prices and renewed fears of a shooting war in the Middle East.

On the London International Stock Exchange the blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which fell 21.8 points Thursday, fell 25.6 points to 2,063.1. For the week, the key index, which measures the value of Britain's largest 100 companies in terms of market capitalization, posted a loss of 25.9 points.

The narrower top 30 industrial average lost 19.1 points to 1,598.4.

Volume amounted to around 368 million shares compared with 323 million shares changing hands Thursday.

London market watchers said fear that war was more likely to break out this weekend in the Mideast prompted local investors to dump stocks, driving prices lower across the board.

Analysts said news that the U.S was seeking the go ahead from Saudi Arabia for military action against Iraq, and was planning to send an extra 100,000 troops to the Middle East, hammered stocks.

A report in London's Financial Times that Iraqi troops had attached explosives to 300 of Kuwait's oil wells as a precaution against a possible attack also added to the unease in the region.

The increasing fears of a war in the Gulf also sent the price of December Brent crude oil up $3 a barrel to $36 in London, further increasing the squeeze on British company production costs.

Investors, still rattled from the Polly Peck crash and poor results released by Imperial Chemical Industries Thursday, centered their attention on Brent Walker through most of the day.

Brent Walker Group, a leisure centers company, plunged 51 cents to just 86 cents a share amid speculation the company may be burdened with a similar level of high debt as Polly Peck International and that a planned bond issue may be withdrawn.

Polly Peck went into Britain's high court Thursday to seek an administrator that will allow it to fend off its creditors, the U.S. equivalent of Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

PPI, one of the best performing stocks on the London International Stock Exchange in the last decade, owes banks $1.9 billion.

Meanwhile, Imperial Chemical Industries, considered to be a bellwether of British industry, which fell 30 cents Thursday after reporting its pretax profit for the first nine months fell 27 percent from a year earlier, slipped another 20 cents to $15.48.

Berisford International remained unchanged at 51 cents a share after announcing the sale of its Berisford Leasing Ltd. division for $11 million to help reduce its debt.

Glaxo which achieved British government approval for its asthma drug, added 12 cents to $14.65.

Among some of the day's other highlights, Guinness fell 33 cents to $13.01 amid worries of higher U.S. taxes. BPB Industries slipped 20 cents to $3.11 and British Aerospace lost 30 cents to $10.25.

Elsewhere in Europe, stock prices closed sharply lower in active trading on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which gained 3.76 points Thursday, plummented 40.46 points to 1,457.12. For the week the key index, which measures the value of 30 selective blue chip stocks, eased 12.95 points.

Analysts said stocks fell as traders sought to flatten their positions ahead of the weekend amid renewed fears of a Mideast war and higher oil prices.

Meanwhile, in Paris, stocks fell sharply in sluggish trading on the Paris Bourse. The French CAC 40 Index plunged 27.41 points to 1,618.58 and lost 25.58 points for the week.

Analysts in Paris said news that French television had announced that Iraqi President, Saddam Hussein had told French and Soviet leaders that he was ready to discuss Middle East problems was largely ignored.

Investors in Zurich sent prices broadly lower in nervous trading on the Zurich Stock Exchange. The Swiss Market Index plummented 33.1 points to 1,442.0.

NEW YORK (OCT. 26) UPI - It's goodbye Boston, back home to Stockholm for the Met's many splendored new ''A Masked Ball'' starring Luciano Pavarotti and Aprile Millo.

The Piero Faggioni production, which opened Thursday, returns to the intended Swedish setting of Verdi's great drama of frustrated love at the court of King Gustav III, a liberal who was assassinated in 1792 by aristocratic conspirators.

Because of the sensitivity of Italy's royal censors and the Vatican to the enactment of a king's assassination onstage, Verdi moved the action for his opera's 1859 Rome premier to 18th century Boston, where a British governor could safely substitute for the king.

It was not until 100 years later that the Paris Opera performed ''A Masked Ball'' in a Stockholm setting. The new production at the Met replaces one that was set in Boston and never popular with the public because of its Puritan bleakness and sets that looked like stockades.

Faggioni, who is director and set, costume, and lighting designer, has let himself go in recreating the extravagances of the court of the hedonistic Gustav. The production is a gift from the Annie Laurie Aitken Charitable Trust set up by Sunny von Bulow's late mother, and the money has been well spent.

The throne room of Gustav's palace is a baroque symphony of blue and gold and the study in his chief minister's residence is elegant in its neo-classic simplicity.

The final masked ball scene at the Royal Opera House extends the stage back to its firewall to make room for a grand staircase spilling between two balcony levels under a canopy of crystal chandeliers.

Faggioni has created a scene of swirling color for the ball, contrasting pale pastel chiffons worn by the dancers to the darker velvets and brocades of the nobility's costumes. His most amusing conceit is six revelers costumed as towering topiary evergreens that gently whirl and sway to the music.

The warehouse scene is strangely transformed into an early industrial factory with a blast furnace and moving flywheels, but it is effective. Only the gallows hill scene is disappointing, depicting a fjord-like gorge with stagey looking rock steps that suggest a Wagnerian, not a Verdian production.

Pavarotti is in great singing form as Gustav, who toys with the affections of Amelia, wife of his first minister, Renato. The old fullness of tone is there from top to bottom and vocal production is unfailingly elegant, especially in the first act barcarolle.

If only Pavarotti could seem the least bit interested in Amelia instead of just going through the motions, the production would be magically strengthened.

Millo of the million dollar voice is lovely as the tortured Amelia, passionately in love with Gustav but remaining faithful to Renato even when she knows he is going to kill the king out of jealousy.

Her strong, masterfully colored soprano is a joy and her acting natural and affecting, recalling Regine Crespin in the role. She took the taxing Gallows aria with its near-hysteric climax in her stride and brought down the house.

Harolyn Blackwell couldn't be improved upon in the pants role of Oscar, Gustav's petted pageboy, sprightly in trilling soprano vocalism as well as in action. Juan Pons is stalwart as Renato, his generous baritone an impressive instrument in the great aria, ''Eri tu,'' and Elena Obraztsova makes a believable gypsy crone in the fortune-telling role of Ulrica.

Conductor James Levine brings out the brilliance of one of Verdi's most passionate and purling scores, making this revival a memorable musical experience aside from the singing of one of the finest casts assembled by the Met in recent seasons. The ironic contrast between romantic and tragic elements of the music are completely revealed.

''The Masked Ball'' will be broadcast live on many public television stations across the nation April 10, 1991. It is the first of five new productions at the Met in the current season.

PESHAWAR, PAKISTAN (OCT. 26) UPI - A strong earthquake that rocked northwestern Pakistan left at least 11 people dead, several hundred injured and damaged or destroyed hundreds of houses, officials said Friday.

The quake struck just before 10 a.m. on Thursday and measured 6.6 on the Richter scale. Its center was about 150 miles north of the western Pakistan city of Peshawar in the Hindu Kush mountains.

Reports from local officials reaching Peshawar Friday said 11 people died and about 300 were injured, most of them from falling masonry. Hundreds of houses, many of them mud-built, were damaged or destroyed, scores of cattle killed, and trees uprooted.

Several of the injuries occurred when a weapons store exploded in the Federally Adminstered Tribal Areas, a semi-independent region of Pakistan.

Officials in Peshawar said they believed the casualty toll may be much higher.They said they had received no information from many remote areas or from neighboring Afghanistan.

The temblor was felt as far east as New Delhi, India. People ran out of their homes in panic in towns and cities across northern Pakistan and northwestern India.

A PORT IN EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (OCT. 26) UPI - With shouts and cheers, the PFC James Anderson Jr. was nudged to the dock Friday by two yellow tugs and the men and women of the 24th Transportation Batallion set to work unloading their 100th ship since Operation Desert Shield began.

And when the ramps were down and the gear started coming off, the troops felt a little more at ease. Among other things the Anderson was hauling the 24th's forklifts - with capacities up to 10 tons - from Fort Eustis, Va.

Their arrival allowed the unit to return the Saudi gear they had been using in their stevedoring operation.

The ship, part of the military sealift command, arrived about a week later than the 22 days it typically takes. It had to put into a shipyard for several days and suffered the later embarrassment of running aground near Port Suez. When it arrived, there was about a 20-foot-long scrape at the starboard bow just below what would have been the waterline, rusting away with its exposure to the air. The hull did not appear to have been holed. The Adnerson rode high at the bow and low at the stern, apparently to keep the damaged area as clear of the water as possible.

Lt. Col. James Ebertowski, whose troops were at work lifting plastic- wrapped UH-1 Huey medevac helicopters, tank trucks and forklifts off the decks and out of the holds, said his forces have been working 12-hour shifts to unload about 40,000 pieces of equipment since their unit arrived.

''It's been busy. These guys have really been putting out,'' said Ebertowski, equating the workload to having 10 auto-ships tied up at a commercial port at any one time.

''We're kind of in the peak right now. Hopefully we'll see it decline. The guys are kind of hoping it slows down, and me too, but right now we're at the peak of what we've seen,'' he said.

The unit typically works on about five or six ships a day, but has hit as many as 13, and in a wartime situation could work on as many as 20 at a time. The time it takes to unload varies by ship, ranging from about half a day for a roll on-roll off ship carring trucks, tanks and the like, to the older ships which might take 30 hours.

Some cargos are easier than others, and 50-ton tanks are not the unloading problem they might seem.

''Actually a tank is easy because it's nice and boxy and square. The hardest things are road graders, earth packers and engineer equipment. They've got all kinds of wierd stuff,'' he said.

Many of the ships are now making their second or third visit to the port, particularly the fast sealift vessels that can make better than 30 knots.

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (OCT. 26) UPI - Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca parted the veil Friday on the carmaker's $1 billion Technology Center still under construction 30 miles north of Detroit, calling it the ''bedrock and foundation'' of the No. 3 automaker's future when it is completed by 1994.

Iacocca, standing before reporters in an unheated section of the massive 3.3 million-square foot research and development center as construction workers milled about, called the project ''a monument to the end of short-term thinking in this country,'' and chastised those who claim the money might have been better spent on new vehicle projects.

''This is the heart of it all,'' he said. ''How anybody could make that statement... and I know a few Wall Street goofs who have done it... we resent it and it's wrong.''

When completed in 1994, Chrysler's Technology Center will be the focal point of its car and truck development operations, employing about 7,000 workers in purchasing, engineering and manufacturing.

The center, described by Iacocca as an ''invention factory,'' will consolidate a wide array of Chrysler's operations, including a wind tunnel, scientific laboratories and a mini-production line. ''Now we don't have to wander the world anymore to do our testing,'' he said.

Chrysler, however, will not be using its own money to build the massive complex, which it claims is the largest construction project in the country. Last spring it sold bonds through a consortium of banks and arranged a 30-year leaseback agreement.

When asked if Chrysler could eventually make the sprawling center its world headquarters and move out of the Detroit enclave of Highland Park, Iacocca hedged slightly.

''We're going to consolidate probably everthing over time, but for the foreseeable future, our plan is to keep headquarters at Highland Park and move many of the finance company people there,'' he said.

Iacocca also sounded some pessimistic notes about the nation's economy and the auto industry in particular, which he said has been in a recession for 18 months and faces tough times in 1991 and 1992.

In a warning to Japanese carmakers, he said domestic carmakers ''have got to draw a line in the sand and say 30 percent (of the U.S. vehicle market) is it, guys. We're going to try to win some back, but you're not getting any more.''

But like General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co., Chrysler has and depends heavily on arrangements with Japanese automakers to supply it with fuel-efficient small cars and some sporty models that are either made in Japan or in joint venture plants with Asian carmakers in North America.

Iacocca also said it was possible for Chrysler to meet proposed tougher emission standards.

''We think we can do it as long as (federal officials) don't slap a 40-mile-a-gallon (corporate average fuel economy) standard on us,'' he said.

IRVINE, CA (OCT. 26) UPI - The public battle of blame over a budget not yet agreed to was waged from coast to coast Friday between President Bush, campaigning in California, and the Democrats in Washington.

A budget pact not even in hand yet Friday and the public battle of blame began in earnest between Democrats and President Bush.

Bush, stumping for the gubernatorial bid of Sen. Pete Wilson, R- Calif., in the state's GOP stronghold of Orange County, wasted no time in responding to the latest Democratic jibe issued by Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., who attacked the president for a lack of leadership in an interview with The Washington Post.

''I think George Bush can be beaten in 1992,'' Gephardt told the Post. ''In the last two months he has shown a real failure of leadership. He needed to explain to the American people why they were being asked to swallow strong medicine, but he didn't do it.''

The unusually harsh denunciation prompted the president to respond with passion at a morning fund-raiser on behalf of Wilson, whose race against Democrat Diane Feinstein has been targeted heavily by the GOP. The event kicked off a four-day drive of politicking, mixed with some diplomacy at a scheduled summit in Honolulu Saturday with Pacific island nations.

While continuing his near daily drive to win more Republican seats in the Democratic-controlled Congress, Bush shot back at Gephardt: ''Well, let me try once more. For 36 years his party - the Democratic Party - had control of the House of Representatives and year after year after year they have presided over these budget deficits. They appropriate every dime and they tell me how to spend every dime.

''And, yes, I have compromised ... but the president must at certain times put the overall good of the country first,'' said Bush, thumping the podium, ''and the American people known - all too well - that strong medicine, I refer back to that quote, is required because the Democratic-controlled Congress simply has been on an uncontrolled spending binge for years.''

Pressing a drive to put the budget mess behind him, Bush found instead intensified partisanship that is certain to affect the elections Nov. 6, as legislators up for re-election run for cover from the budget roller-coaster of the past eight months. Postponing his campaign swing by a day to be on hand in Washington Thursday, Bush had hoped to take the offensive and to minimize his own string of flip flops and loss of popularity during the months of negotiations to win a budget pact to trim federal spending by $500 billion over the next five years.

Forced instead to resort to finger-pointing of his own, Bush promised repeated appeals to the American people and a fight to the finish over who really is to blame for the spending package.

''The agreement we get won't be the best deal possible,'' he told the crowd, ''but in my judgment it is the best deal possible with this Congress.''

Bush also signed on for the first time to the idea to limit terms of incumbent congressmen, a message spearheaded in recent weeks by Vice President Dan Quayle. Noting that he was not ''just jumping on the bandwagon'' and that the Republican Party platform long has endorsed such a measure - as has Wilson in California in recent weeks - Bush said, ''I say it's an idea whose time has come.''

WASHINGTON (OCT. 26) UPI - The cost of the government's efforts to sell assets of failed thrifts could increase as much as $400 million should funding be delayed because of the budget impasse, the Congressional Budget Office said Friday.

The estimate came one day after the Oversight Board of the Resolution Trust Corp. approved an operating plan for the first six months of fiscal 1991 that calls for the sale or liquidation of 192 insolvent thrifts by the end of March.

The plan, though, depends on funding by Congress, which has been locked in a stalemate over the proposed 1991 federal budget. The CBO said inadequate funding could delay the sales or liquidations of failed thrifts taken over by the government.

"We expect that if the RTC experienced a three-month delay at this time, the federal government would have to spend, on a present value basis, an additional $300 million to $400 million to pay for insurance losses in failed thrfits," wrote CBO Director Robert Reischauer in a letter to Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich.

Riegle, who serves as chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, also received a written plea for additional funding from RTC Chairman L. William Seidman. "Without additional funds, the resolution process will grind to a virtual halt " Seidman said Thursday in a letter to Riegle.

Seidman said a two-quarter delay in the resolution process could cost the government as much as $950 million. "We urge you to provide RTC funding before the adjournment of the 101st Congress so that we can continue to operate," Seidman wrote.

WARSAW, POLAND (OCT. 26) UPI - Solidarity founder Lech Walesa and Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki will compete against four other candidates when they run in Poland's first free presidential elections in the post- World War II era, officials said Friday.

Two candidates who filed their paperwork with the State Election Commission just before the deadline at midnight Thursday met the minimum requirement of 100,000 signatures, said commission official Jan Piasko.

Four candidates previously were registered, including the two main rivals for the presidency, Walesa and his longtime close adviser Mazowiecki.

Early presidential elections were called for Nov. 25 after Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, a former communist and author of martial law imposed in Poland in 1981, yielded to pressure and agreed to step down one year into his five-year term. Jaruzelski, the first Polish president since World War II, was appointed by the National Assembly in November 1989.

The presidential election will be the first time since the war that Poland will hold a free and general vote for that post.

On June 4, 1989, a partly free election allowed Poles to vote for members of the Sejm, or lower house of parliament. However, 65 percent of the seats were reserved for communists as a result of a roundtable agreement.

The parliamentary election came after pressure from Solidarity and a catastrophic economy forced the communist-run government agree to power-sharing, becoming the first East Bloc communist regime forced to compromise under popular pressure.

The parliament in August 1989 named Mazowiecki prime minister.

The presidential candidates registered Thursday were Leszek Moczulski, the 60-year-old leader of extreme right-wing Confederation for Independent Poland KPN, and Stanislaw Tyminski, a 42-year-old millionaire expatriate who also is a citizen of Canada and Peru.

Tyminski, who emigrated 20 years ago, is a lawyer and businessman living in Canada where he is a leader of the Libertarian Party. Moczulski is a historian lawyer and journalist. As a dissident in the late 1970s, he founded the KPN in 1979 for Poland to regain its independence from Moscow.

Two candidates confirmed earlier were Wlodzimierz Cimoszewicz, fielded by Polands leftist forces, who was a member of the Communist Party until it was disbanded in January, and Roman Bartoszcze, leader of Polish Peasant Party, which formerly was aligned with the Communist Party.

One would-be candidate did not meet the signature requirement Thursday night. Piasko said Kornel Morawiecki, leader of radical anti- communist Freedom Party was disqualified with just 79,400 signatures.

Altogether 14 people were making bids to become candidates to succeed Jaruzelski.

Janusz Bryczkowski of the Polish Green Party, Boleslaw Tejkowski of the National Democracy and Gabriel Janowski of the Solidarity Farmers' Union withdrew, and the other four failed to gathered enough popular backing.

The two big losers were Janusz Korwin-Mikke of the conservative Union for Real Politics and Wladyslaw Sila-Nowicki of the Labor Party, who were close to meeting the 100,000 signature requirement.

Korwin-Mikke said his group, which claims membership of about 2,000, will support Walesa against any leftist candidate, alleging Mazowiecki was a leftist candidate, along with Cimoszewicz.

''We hope that the next government will break the monopoly of the left,'' Korwin-Mikke said in a statement.

The election commission has said each candidate will receive 15 hours of free time on two national television programs and 30 hours on four national radio programs. In the case of a televised debate in which all candidates take part, no time will be deducted from the total assigned to each candidate.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 26) UPI - Activists waging a campaign to make those who gained as a result of the savings and loan crisis pay for the multi-billion dollar bailout, said Friday just 13 of the 50 House Banking Committee members had voting records defending taxpayers on S&L-related issues. But, 17 committee members have earned enrollment in "The Sleazy 17" for what the activists call their strong anti-taxpayer and pro-S&L biases.

The scorecard, issued by the Financial Democracy Campaign, a coalition of labor, religious, civil rights, community, and rural reform groups, is "a timely reminder to all members of Congress of citizen outrage at the cost of the S&l bailout," said Maud Hurd, a co-chair of the campaign and national president of the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now (ACORN).

"As members of both Houses continue to wrangle about the president's latest request for more bailout money, the scorecard offers citizens a yardstick to assess whether banking committee members have voted for the interest of taxpayers or with the financial industries."

The scorecard examines ten votes by banking committee members from the first session of the 101st Congress, when legislators took up President Bush's S&L bailout legislation, the Financial Institutions, Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act.

The legislation was an effort by Congress to come to terms with the growing knowledge of the extent of the crisis - by some estimates a scandal that will cost taxpayers some $1 trillion to pay for - by re-regulating the industry.

"Each of the votes represented a clear choice for Banking Committee members," said Tom Schlesinger, director of the Southern Finance Project. "They either aligned themselves with taxpayers or with the S&L industry and the financial industry in general."

The votes cover a broad range of amendments offerred in committee to rollback deregulation, increase the capital standards for savings and loans, improve banking laws aimed at ending the practice of redlining, initiate new affordable housing activities in the industry and expand consumer participation in the industry.

Just four members received 100 percent votes - Chairman Henry Gonzalez, D-Texas, and Reps. Marcy Kaptur, D-Ohio; Bruce Morrison, D-Conn.; and Richard Neal, D-Mass.

Nine others had good enough votes, 80 percent or above, to be considered the "Thrifty 13" - Reps. Joseph Kennedy, D-Mass.; Gerald Kleczka, D-Wis.; Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio; Charles Schumer, D-N.Y.; Bruce Vento, D-Minn.; Peter Hoagland, D-Neb.; Richard Lehman, D-Calif.; Kweisi Mfume, D-N.Y.; and Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif.

The "sleazy 17" included three members who received zeros - Reps. Richard Baker, R-La.; Al McCandless, R-Calif.; and Norm Shumway, R-Calif. - and 14 who received scores under 25 percent, including Reps. Doug Barnard, D-Ga.; Steve Bartlett, R-Texas; Jim Bunning, R-Ky.; David Dreier, R-Calif.; John Hiler, R-Ind.; Bill McCollum, R-Fla.; Thomas Ridge, R-Pa.; Patricia Saiki, R-Hawaii; Bill Paxon, R-N.Y.; Frank Annunzio, D-Ill.; Elizabeth Patterson, D-S.C.; Stan Parris, R-Va.; Cliff Stearns, R-Fla.; and Stephen Neal, D-N.C.

NEW YORK (OCT. 26) UPI - Companies defaulted on more rated public debt in the first nine months of 1990 than in any previous full year, Standard & Poor's Corp. said Friday.

As of Oct. 24, $11.1 billion of public debt - debt issued by a company in the public markets as opposed to private placements - was added to debt already in default from previous years, the credit rating agency said. This exceeds the $9 billion of defaulted debt for all of 1987, which included the default of Texaco Inc. on about $7 billion of debt.

The total amount of rated debt in default is almost $16 billion, S&P's said, and most of the companies have been in default less than three years. The increase in the amount of public debt in default reflects an increase in the number of companies in that situation, which has risen from four in 1980 to 42 this year, said S&P's.

In the tough economic climate, increasingly large companies are defaulting on public debt, S&P's said, whereas the trend previously mostly affected small firms. Larger companies also sometimes file for bankruptcy, the credit rating agency indicated.

Recent examples include Federated Department Stores Inc. of Cincinnati, Farley Inc. of Chicago, and Southland Corp. of Dallas. But the majority of firms with rated debt that have filed for bankruptcy will not be liquidated, and will emerge as going concerns, although usually somewhat smaller, S&P's said.

The company added that the reasons for default have generally changed since the early 1980s, when defaulting companies were usually those that had once been strong, but whose credit quality had gradually deteriorated.

Now, defaults are more common among companies with viable operations, but which simply took on too much debt during the 1980s to finance acquisitions, buyouts or recapitalizations.

S&P's said it anticipates the number of companies defaulting on public debt will grow. "Even under favorable economic conditions, the number of defaulted bonds will continue to increase as more companies that underwent leveraged buyouts and recapitalizations encounter problems," the company said.

The number of defaulted bonds could also increase in the event of a severe recession or an interest rate spike. And leveraged companies may be unable to secure financing through the public bond market in the current environment.

In addition, private funding is less available because commercial banks and other institutions have adopted increasingly cautious lending policies. "S&P's believes that the inability to meet routine refinancing needs may trigger defaults for some companies in the years ahead," the company said. "Even though some firms will be emerging from bankruptcy, the number of additions will probably exceed subtractions in the years to come," S&P said.

PARIS (OCT. 26) UPI - Authorities confirmed Friday that a body found in a suburban forest was that of missing renegade homosexual pastor Joseph Douce, and charges mounted over the conduct of a secretive police intelligence unit that had been investigating the former clergyman.

The state prosecutor in Versailles, Roger Tacheau, said dental records were used in the examination, which showed the man died on or about July 20, the day after Douce disappeared from his Paris apartment.

''It is definitively the body of Joseph Douce,'' Tacheau said.

Meanwhile, Interior Minister Pierre Joxe distanced himself Friday from what he called ''morally damnable'' tactics allegedly used by Renseignments Generaux, the police intelligence unit that had Douce under suveillance at the time of his disappearance.

It is a specialized unit in charge of internal security and anti- terrorist investigations. It came under increasing fire this week for its role in the Douce case and a 1987 burglary at the headquarters of SOS Racisme, a civil rights action group.

An inspector considered a prime suspect in the death of Douce has charged that he is being used as a scapegoat to cover up the units attempt to use homosexual prostitutes to embarrass top government and business leaders.

Joxe said he was ''disgusted'' by methods allegedly used by the police unit.

''I will never order (policemen) to use methods of thugs to obtain documents of civil rights organizations,'' Joxe said. ''The police can function on a legal basis without using procedures that are morally damnable.''

Interior ministry officials have acknowledged that documents from SOS-Racisme were found in the files of Renseignements Generaux, further implicating police in questionable tactics.

Opposition leaders in the National Assembly have requested a parliamentary inquiry into the methods of Renseignments Generaux. The Socialist majority has blocked the request.

Witnesses said Douce was last seen the evening of July 19 leaving his apartment with two men carrying police badges who asked the pastor to follow them.

The inspector under suspicion, Jean-Marc Dufourg, had been assigned to surveillance of Douce. An investigation by a police internal affairs unit, however, has failed to turn up any concrete information about what happened to the pastor.

Dufourg, in a series of interviews with the daily Le Figaro, maintained that he was involved in a project by Renseignements Generaux to use homosexual prostitutes to seek to compromise former Justice Minister Pierre Arpaillange and Philippe Guilhaume, head of the state- run Antenne 2 television network.

''I received the order to recruit a young homosexual to seduce the two persons ... my superiors were aware of this,'' Dufourg told the Le Figaro newspaper. ''The plan was never put into effect, because we did not get the green light.''

Douce's body was discovered by a mushroom gatherer Oct. 18 in the Rambouillet Forest west of Paris. He had been defrocked by French Baptist and Protestant authorities because of his militant defense of homosexuals and other ''sexual minorities.''

The police unit reportedly began watching Douce as part of an investigation into alleged paedophilia.

DALLAS (OCT. 26) UPI - Former Dallas thrift executive Jarrett Woods, indicted on criminal charges of bank fraud in the $1 billion collapse of Western Savings Association, appeared before a federal magistrate Friday for arraignment and was released in his own recognizance. The prosecution did not object to the request from Woods' attorney that he be freed on a personal recognizance bond until a hearing Nov. 1.

U.S. Magistrate Jane Jackson ordered Woods to surrender his passport. She cautioned him not leave the United States but said he was permitted to travel freely within the continental U.S.

Woods was named Thursday in a 37-count criminal indictment, accusing him of diverting millions of dollars of depositors' money in an attempt to conceal bad loans Western made to real estate developers.

The indictment charges Woods with conspiracy to defraud government regulators, misapplication of Western's funds, bank fraud, making false entries in Western's books, illegally participating in a Western transaction himself and unlawfully receiving funds.

"The indictment of Jarrett Woods means that we have corraled one of the biggest savings and loan bandits in Texas," Attorney General Dick Thornburgh said in announcing the indictment.

"The free-wheeling lifestyle and fraudulent management practices that led to Western's collapse really helped to set the trend for this national thrift crisis that we are dealing with," he said. If convicted on all charges, Woods faces a prison term of up to 185 years and fines ranging from $8.2 million to up twice the amount of the loss.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 26) UPI - Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell indicated Friday Democrats will continue to demand higher taxes in future years on wealthy Americans, saying "there has been too much soaking of the middle class" over the past decade.

Mitchell said the issue of raising the taxes of the rich will come as part of the evolving debate over spending and revenues in coming years, not standing by itself.

He said the tax provisions in the budget package, which create a new top tax rate for the wealthiest taxpayers who would also lose some exemptions and some deductions, represented "modest progressivity" in evening-out the tax burden.

Talking to a group of reporters, Mitchell said, "Obviously, passing a budget this year doesn't mean the end of dealing with the budget and doesn't mean the end of dealing with revenues and expenditures."

"I don't think we should view this as some ending of the debate," Mitchell said. "It's going to continue and that (higher taxes on the rich) will be part of it."

Mitchell said that in the budget agreement, "What we've done really is simply just stop a trend tht developed in the past decade and to begin to reverse it.

"The reality is that between 1977 and 1990, the after-tax income of most Americans declined and the overall tax burden increased," Mitchell said. "The only ones in respect to that that is not true are those at the very top. Their after-tax income increased and their tax burden declined."

He said this produced "a most unfair .... socially unhealthy situation in that the tax burden is increasingly focused on the middle class" and largely exempts and benefits those at the very top of the income scale.

Mitchell said Republicans charged Democrats with a campaign of "soak the rich ... I say their policy is soak the middle class. We've already had too much of soaking the middle class in this country during the past decade. And that is the group that feels unrepresented, alienated, and, looking at it subjectively they have some reason to feel that way."

The Senate Democratic leader said the protracted budget debate "has really allowed us to bring into focus the sharp differences between the two parties with respect to that issue."

"The one thing the president did win on is that there will not be a surtax on those with incomes of a million dollars," Mitchell said of the provision that

Democrats were forced to abandon at White House insistence.

Mitchell said he expected some member of Congress to propose the surtax next year but added, "I imagine the president's opposition to such an increase will continue."

Asked if he were concerned Republicans will go on the campaign trail charging Democrats with raising taxes, Mitchell said, "They can say anything they want to. We'll tell them the truth."

MORRIS TOWNSHIP, NJ (OCT. 26) UPI - Industrial conglomerate Allied-Signal Inc., citing competition and higher oil prices, reported Friday third- quarter earnings of $105 million, or 76 cents a share, down from $121 million, or 81 cents a share in the same period last year.

Revenues for the quarter were $3 billion, up from to $2.8 billion in the year-ago period.

Allied-Signal stock was up 25 cents to $25.50 a share in early afternoon trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analyst Howard Rubel of C.J. Lawrence Inc. in New York said the earnings were in line with Wall Street's expectations.

''In general, aerospace was strong, automotive was weak and engineered materials was soft,'' Rubel said.

Rubel said he expects ''decent'' earnings in the fourth quarter, which will give Allied-Signal a flat-to-moderate performance for the entire year.

Chairman Edward Hennessy said net earnings were hurt ''by intense price competition'' and higher petroleum prices.

Each of our three core businesses attained slightly higher sales, although we are starting to feel the effects of recessionary conditions both here and overseas,'' Hennessy said. ''We are managing all our costs ''

In the third quarter, Allied-Signal's aerospace division reported a rise in profits, to $58 million from $55 million, and in revenues to $1.4 bilion from $1.2 billion.

The company said improvements in sales and profits for both avionics equipment and engines were partially reduced by continued increases in development spending for new engines, higher engineering costs and lower margins in the auxiliary power business.

The automotive business turned out smaller profits on higher revenues in the third quarter. Profits were $3 million on revenues of $961 million, versus $11 million on revenues of $873 million in the third quarter of 1989.

Engineered materials' earnings for the quarter was $54 million, down from $66 million in 1989. Sales were $637 million up from $612 million in the same period of 1989.

For the first nine months of the year, Allied-Signal reported earnings of $355 million, or $2.54 a share, down from $413 million, or $2.77 a share in the comparable period of 1989.

Revenues for the period were $9.2 billion, up from $8.9 billion in the first nine months of 1989.

ROME (OCT. 26) UPI - Leaders of the 12-nation European Community meet this weekend to discuss the Persian Gulf crisis, a common European currency and financial aid to the countries of Eastern Europe.

The ''emergency'' summit was initially called to provide financial aid of up to $20 billion to the Soviet Union, but EC officials have since determined the money would be wasted at this point due to chaos in the Soviet economy.

A far less ambitious program to provide food and medicine to the Soviets this winter may, however, be approved.

The summit focus has shifted instead to financial aid for other Eastern European countries hurt by the gulf crisis. Hungary, Bulgaria and other nations are suffering from both higher oil prices and the need to pay with hard currency due to collapse of the Comecon trading group.

The EC is considering establishment of a $8 billion stabilization fund to help those countries with balance-of-payment problems.

The two-day summit begins on Saturday.

Italy, which holds the rotating EC presidency, is anxious for the summit to reaffirm Europe's strong commitment to the U.S.-led sanctions against Iraq. The summit marks the first meeting of EC heads of state since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein should realize that ''holding hostages to avoid bombardment only increases western public opinion's hostility to him,'' said

Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti.

Italy also wants the summit to endorse a date, Jan. 1, 1994, as the beginning of Stage 2 of EC Economic and Monetary Union, leading to a common European currency.

Britain, which only this month joined the 11-year-old European exchange-rate mechanism, is not keen on rapid movement toward monetary union.

''We still haven't defined Stage 2 adequately, so how can we set a date for it at this point?'' says a British diplomat in Brussels.

A special EC constitutional convention on monetary union begins Dec. 14 in Rome, and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher says all important decisions should be delayed until then.

Jacques Delors, the powerful president of the EC executive Commission, seeks to avoid a weekend showdown with Thatcher over the monetary issue, so he also said the matter can wait until December.

Only Britain opposes the 1994 date, which was offered by Spain as a compromise and accepted by German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and other EC leaders. Many EC officials initially backed a 1993 starting date for Stage 2, which will include creation of a central European bank called the ''Eurofed.''

Britain views a common currency as a threat to its sovereignty, and has instead proposed a 13th currency, backed by a new European Monetery Fund, that would compete alongside the 12 national EC currencies.

A nagging issue, world trade talks, could supplant the gulf and monetary union as the summit's centerpiece.

EC governments have failed miserably in several recent meetings to agree on a plan to cut farm subsidies in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. Agriculture and trade ministers of the 12 member states met again in Luxembourg on Friday, hoping to finally adopt an EC position on GATT.

The 105-nation GATT talks conclude in just six weeks, and many officials say the EC's disarray over farm supports threatens four years of negotiations. The United States is pressing hard for substantial cuts in agricultural subsidies.

Delors said it would be ''disastrous'' for the summit to decide the GATT issue because meetings of EC leaders would then become devalued into ''appeals bodies'' for every vexing problem.

''I think it would be disastrous not to have GATT on the summit agenda,'' countered a top British diplomat.

''It would be disastrous for the Community's image,'' he said, for such an important matter not to be discussed by the heads of state. ''It would look very weird.''

COLUMBUS, OH (OCT. 26) UPI - The Ohio Supreme Court Friday reinstated the conviction of former Cincinnati financier Marvin Warner in the 1985 Ohio savings and loan scandal, but trimmed almost in half the restitution he must make to the state.

In a unanimous opinion, the high court reinstated Warner's conviction on six counts of unauthorized acts in connection with wire transfers, and three counts of securities violations.

Also reinstated were the convictions of David Schiebel, former president of Warner's Home State Savings Bank, on three counts of securities violations. The convictions, obtained two years after the collapse of Home State - which triggered a run on state-chartered, privately insured thrifts - were overturned in 1989 by the Hamilton County Court of Appeals.

Warner, who now lives in Ocala, Fla., was sentenced to 3 1/2 years in prison and ordered to pay $22 million in restitution and $250,000 in court costs. The $22 million figure was cut to $12.2 million by the Supreme Court, with the remainder still subject to discussion in lower court. Schiebel was sentenced to six months in prison and five years probation, and ordered to pay $25,000 in costs.

Home State lost $144 million in investments in ESM Government Securities of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., which went bankrupt. Following Home State's collapse, Gov. Richard Celeste closed 69 other Ohio S&Ls. Some were sold or consolidated but nearly all reopened within three months.

No depositors lost money. The state has spent at least $5.7 million investigating and prosecuting Warner, Schiebel and other Home State officials, but has recovered $134 million, compared with the $129 million invested in reopening the thrifts.

Warner's attorneys, in obtaining reversal of the convictions, argued that Warner had no knowledge he was not authorized to make the questionable money transfers.

They also contended one of the jurors "hated" Warner and another had a relative with money in the state S&Ls when the collapse took place. They further argued that jury instructions were changed at the last minute and that wire transfers were not covered by state law.

State prosecutors complained the convictions were overturned on technical, procedural issues and not the merits of the guilt of innocence of Warner or Schiebel.

"Warner was involved in almost every facet of the internal operations of the bank," said Justice Robert Holmes in writing the court's opinion. "He was kept informed of all policy decisions by the board of directors. Warner's actions were shown to be calculated and deceitful. "Therefore, any claim that Warner committed the act without the requisite knowledge is unsupported."

The court also supported the state's position that an electronic transfer of money was the equivalent of a written check, that the jury instructions were not prejudicial to the defendant and that the Home State deposits of a juror's mother-in-law should have no bearing on the outcome of the case.

DALLAS (OCT. 26) UPI - The flow of cash to pay topless dancers used at official functions of failed Vernon Savings and Loan was so great, executives considered setting up a special "ladies" fund or padding Christmas bonuses to hide the outflow, a convicted S&L officer testified Friday.

In the second day of testimony in the trial of thrift owner Don Dixon, former Vernon vice president John B. Hill said thousands of dollars in cash were expended to pay "party girls" brought by limousine or jet to entertain at company events.

"I told Dixon I was getting buried in all the cash," Hill testified. "All the executives at Vernon were grousing about the money. I told Dixon we needed to set up a special "ladies" fund or make up the cash in our (Christmas) bonuses."

Dixon rejected the idea, but encouraged Hill, who made $300,000 annually, to hide the payoffs by falsifying expense vouchers. "He told us just to expense it, make it up," said Hill, who served a six-month prison sentence on conspiracy charges relating to thrift fraud and prostitution.

On one occasion, when cash became tight, Dixon ordered Hill to extract the money from a legitimate commercial loan account, and return it before the absence was discovered.

"I thought that was a real stupid idea and I refused to do it," Hill said, speaking in a soft baritone and avoiding eye contact with Dixon, once a close friend. "So Dixon said he would do it himself." Hill said he didn't know if the loan account was ever tapped.

On cross-examination, Hill admitted the women recruited from a Dallas topless club were paid to attend Vernon parties, but not for sex. "I never told them outright we wanted them to go to bed with some client or some lobbyist," Hill said. "If they did, they did."

Sex, in fact, was an overriding theme at parties held aboard a Vernon-owned yacht, at hunting lodges or beach homes. "Usually the evenings opened with cocktails and dinner, perhaps some music and socializing," Hill testified. "Then if a couple found themselves mutually attracted, they would disappear, so to speak - duck into a bedroom."

Dixon attended all the parties and often took women to bed, Hill said. "He ended up in the bedroom at most parties," Hill said. Dixon's black-clad wife, Dana Dee, sat in court, stone-faced, listening to the testimony.

Hill, who served briefly as Vernon's president, said he was often solicited to contribute to politicians' campaigns. "I'd ask, 'who the hell is so and so,"' he said. "Then I'd have to write the check."

In a 38-count indictment, Dixon is accused of using depositor funds, filtered through false vouchers and expense documents, to pay for prostitutes, make political contributions and support his lavish lifestyle.

Regulators said the 51-year-old Dallas contractor purchased a small thrift in Vernon, Texas, in 1981 and rapidly expanded it through shaky acquisitions and commercial loans, some of which Dixon had a stake.

Eventually the thrift held assets in 15 states and several nations. Although the assets had a paper value of $1.8 billion, bank regulators said, upon examination, 95 percent of the assets were "dead cows," or non-performing loans. Vernon's collapse in 1987 cost taxpayers an estimated $1.3 billion.

Hill said he never told the accounting office the reason for his high expenses. "I knew if I put the true reason down on the vouchers, the (thrift) examiners would go nuts," he testified. "I wasn't about to put anything about party girls on the books and records of Vernon."

After submitting one heavily padded account, Hill said he cautioned Dixon not to look too closely. "There are lots of politicians in there," Hill said, referring to an expense account now laminated in a stack of court exhibits. "Don kind of shook his head like he understood what I meant. I got my money."

Witnesses scheduled to testify in coming weeks include Vernon jet pilots - there were six on staff - borrowers, regulators and a California madam.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 26) UPI - Congress worked through a long list of bills Friday as the lawmakers waited for final agreement on a budget plan that could clear the way for adjournment.

A revolt against the budget plan developed among members of the Black Caucus, who said they would vote against the plan in retaliation for President Bush's veto of the civil rights bill, which was narrowly sustained by the Senate.

''We're all prepared to accept the consequences of our act,'' said Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif., caucus chairman. ''We should stay here as long as necessary until we undo this (veto) madness.''

There was speculation that if business was not completed by Sunday, the lawmakers would take the day off in order to avoid being at the Capitol during a planned march by the Ku Klux Klan.

Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., protested the plan, saying members of Congress should ''take an hour break, go out on the street and tell this scum what we think of them ... tell these haters that they are not welcome in this beautiful federal capital.''

As the budget negotiators continued trying to nail down final details of the deficit-reduction package, the House and Senate spent the day voting on various bills.

The Senate prepared to give final approval to $268 billion defense appropriation and the House was expected to pass the compromise clean air bill.

The House passed and sent to the Senate for final action a two-year $1.14 billion authorization for homeless assistance programs. The bill includes funding for emergency shelter grants, housing rehabilitation, rental assistance, health programs, job training and education for the homeless.

Another measure sent to the Senate would ease restrictions on the export of U.S. high-technology products, such as computer-related equipment, that have national security value. Some members warned the bill faces a veto threat because it also directs the president to restrict exports to countries that attempt to develop chemical weapons.

The House also passed a bill to crack down on money laundering, including provision for tougher penalties against banks and bank officers who are convicted of money laundering schemes.

As the session crawled toward a close, Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell and House Speaker Thomas Foley said Congress had compiled a significant record of accomplishment, particularly if the deficit-cutting package is enacted.

Among the highlights they cited for reporters were the increased minimum wage benefits, civil rights for the disabled, oil spill and clean air legislation, housing and the five-year farm program.

Mitchell, of Maine, said the ''great dissapointments'' were Bush's veto of the civil rights and family leave bills and added that his ''principle dissapointment'' was failure to approve a campaign finance reform package.

Foley, D-Wash., said Congress ''has an extraordinary record. It is one of the most positive and strongest in recent years.''

Before adjournment, Mitchell said he expected passage of the clean air, child care, immigration bills and still held out the faintest of hopes for an anti-crime measure.

''If all those are enacted, I think we are justified in characterizing this as a highly succesfull Congress,'' Mitchell told a group of reporters.

Mitchell said in the budget agreement Congress will ''have dealt with problems accumulated over a decade and for five years. He acknowledged ''there is a lot to criticize'' in the lengthy process leading to the budget agreement but added it ''will be seen as a positive ''e seen as a pos

The Senate Democratic leader accused Bush of creating the protracted process on the budget, insisting that Congress, acting alone, would have finished weeks ago.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 26) UPI - The United States posted a staggering fiscal 1990 budget deficit of $220.39 billion, the worst showing in four years, the Treasury Department said Friday.

But in September, the last month in the fiscal year, the nation managed a budget surplus of $20.85 billion vs. a deficit of $6.15 billion in September 1989, the department said in its monthly budget statement.

The annual deficit was the highest since a record $221.2 billion shortfall in fiscal 1986, and follows an annual deficit of $153.31 billion during fiscal 1989, the department said.

Receipts totaled $1.03 trillion in fiscal 1990 while outlays totaled $1.25 trillion. In fiscal 1989, receipts totaled $990.7 billion and outlays totaled $1.14 trillion.

Interest paid on the public debt climbed to $264.85 billion in fiscal 1990 from $240.86 billion in fiscal 1989, while spending on the bailout of the nation's battered savings and loan industry was also up sharply - to $46.55 billion from $9.17 billion.

But American defense spending fell to $289.75 billion in fiscal 1990 from $294.88 billion in the previous fiscal year, despite the massive military mobilization in the Middle East.

Spending on Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid also increased during the 12-month period, according to the data compiled by the Treasury Department and the Office of Management and Budget.

Corporate tax receipts were off for the fiscal year, reflecting the weakening U.S. economy, while individual income tax receipts were up for the 12-month period.

In September, receipts totaled $102.87 billion while outlays totaled $82.02 billion.

Interest on the public debt totaled $17.30 billion during last month, and defense spending stood at $20.52 billion. More than $8.77 billion went toward the savings and loan bailout, while $759 million was spent on Social Security benefits.

MOSCOW (OCT. 26) UPI - The Moldavian Parliament declared a state of emergency Friday in the breakaway southern Gagauz region and planned to ask for Interior Ministry troops to prevent bloodshed, the Soviet media said.

Deputies in Kishinev voted 245-9 to impose the special rule after a failed attempt at negotiations between Moldavian President Mircha Snegur and leaders of the Gagauzi, a Turkic people who make up just 3.5 percent of Moldavia's population of 4.2 million.

In an indication, however, that the crisis may end quickly, the independet Interfax news agency reported negotiations began Friday between Gagauz representatives and Moldavian oficials. It said the talks were being held near the Gagauz town of Komrat.

Large groups of Moldavians, infuriated by the breakaway attempt, massed at the border of the Gagauz region but were being held back by police reinforcements sent to the troubled area, the official Tass news agency said.

All roads into the area were blocked by the militia and cars, trucks and tractors brought by Gagauzi, Tass said.

''The situation in the republic is threatening to go out of control in view of the Moldavian population's strongly negative attitude to the actions of the Gagauzi and attempts by the Moldavian Popular Front to organize teams of volunteers to prevent elections,'' the news agnecy said Thursday.

The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia, Tass and Interfax said the Moldavian parliament was planning to ask Soviet Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov to allow the use of an Interior Ministry regiment based in the Moldavian capital of Kishinev.

Interfax said: ''Moldavia is on the brink of civil war.''

The Moldavian Parliament declared the state of emergency in the Gagauzi-dominated southern regions of Chadyr-Lunga, Komrat and Bulkanesht, Interfax said.

The Moldavian crisis is tied to what conservatives have called an ''epidemic of sovereignty declarations'' in which local regions are proclaiming independence from republics that themselves have acted with similar defiance toward the Soviet government.

The Gagauz crisis began brewing on Aug. 20 when the tiny region declared itself an independent respublic within the Soviet Union. On Wednesday, the Gagauzi advanced their legislative elections from this Sunday to Thursday, sparking the current strife.

Police sealed off all roads into the southern area wedged between the giant Ukraine republic and Romania, the neighboring country from which dictator Josef Stalin carved most of Moldavia in 1940.

As the entrances into the Gagauz region were being sealed, busloads of angry Moldavians traveled from Kishinev to the tense area.

Hundreds of young Moldavians demonstrated in Kishinev late Wednesday, shouting ''Moldavians to arms'' and other slogans, the official government newspaper Izvestia said.

Stepan Topal, head of the self-proclaimed Provisional Committee of the Gagauz Republic, told Tass that Gagauzi in the regional capital of Komrat were terrified by the threats of violence.

Gagauzi, who speak their own language, number just 173,000 in the entire Soviet Union, with 138,000 in Moldavia, 27,000 in the Ukraine and the others scattered throughout the rest of the country.

Moldavians, who speak Romanian and retain strong cultural ties with their native land, make up nearly two-thirds of the Soviet republic's people. About one-quarter of the population is split between Ukrainians and Russians, with Gagauzi and other ethnic groups having much smaller numbers.

NEW YORK (OCT. 26) UPI - Striking Daily News workers early Friday firebombed delivery trucks and hurled rocks and bottles at non-union replacements during the second day of a bitter walkout that could determine whether the nation's largest daily tabloid survives.

Hundreds of workers picketed outside the paper's three printing plants and midtown Manhattan headquarters following the early morning violence that erupted after seven of the newspaper's 10 unions walked off the job Thursday night.

Union and management officials said no meetings were scheduled. News officials vowed to get out a paper with non-union employees.

The picket lines set up Thursday were honored by two of the non- striking unions - the Newspaper Guild, which represents some 800 editorial workers, and the Stereotypers Union.

Only the printers union said it would continue working, citing the need to protect their lifetime job guarantees - plans they made known months ago.

The strike left union representatives deeply pessimistic about the future of the financially troubled tabloid as management struggled to put out the newspaper with non-union replacements.

''One way or another, the News is dead,'' said Ted Kheel, the unions' chief lawyer. ''It's just a matter of time before the burial ceremony takes place.''

The walkout came after News officials fired 200 drivers who left their job at the News' Brooklyn plant during a pre-dawn dispute over whether a union member claiming a medical disablity could sit down while working on the job.

Less than an hour after the argument, the News sent in a busload of non-union replacements who were promptly attacked with by rock and bottle-hurling union workers in a confrontation that left delivery trucks burned or destroyed and a number of non-union workers and police officers hurt.

The violence was repeated later Thursday and early Friday in Brooklyn and at the paper's two other plants in Garden City, Long Island and Kearney, N.J., the striking workers tried to stop replacement workers from entering and delivery trucks from leaving.

Police said at least nine union workers have been arrested in the last two days on various charges in New York and New Jersey.

The strike brought to a boil a simmering dispute that began 10 months ago when the Chicago-based Tribune Co., which owns the News, opened contract talks vowing to seek millions of dollars in cost reductions and impose sweeping control of hours and working conditions.

The company has insisted union concessions are essential to keep the newspaper from drowning in red ink.

Labor leaders, from the outset, have claimed that the company wanted to provoke a strike to break the unions as part of a plan to either close or sell the tabloid - the nation's biggest daily tabloid and the second largest circulation newspaper in the country after the Los Angeles Times, with just under 1.2 million readers.

The unions have been working without a contract since Mar. 31.

The News, meanwhile, said it planned to put together a Saturday edition with permanent workers they hired to replace striking employees. In a written statement, the company said it published 611,000 copies of the newspaper Friday and intended to ''improve performance each day until normal distribution is reached.''

NEW YORK (OCT. 26) UPI - No. 1 U.S. bank Citicorp is putting off pay raises for some 45,000 executives until the middle of next year as part of an austerity drive that also could entail staff cuts, a bank spokesman said Friday.

But while Citicorp, like other New York money center banks, is adjusting for the soured real estate loans chomping into profits, it doesn't intend to do so with a Draconian layoff program, bank spokesman John Maloney said.

"We are vigorously cutting costs," Maloney said. "We're just not saying out front (that) we're cutting so many people." He added, "We'll make significant cost reductions, and cost reductions can be done in a number of ways." One of those ways is to postpone raises for bank officers, who number about 45,000 out of Citicorp's total staff of 92,000 worldwide.

"For officers of the institution, not for non-officers or hourly workers, instead of being reviewed for your (pay) increase on an annual basis, you will be reviewed on an 18-month basis starting in January," Maloney explained. He declined to say how much would be saved this way.

For weeks rumors have circulated in the financial community saying Citicorp was preparing to announce thousands of layoffs, after Chase Manhattan Corp.'s September announcement it would let 5,000 staff go. Citicorp said last month it was laying off 100 from its leveraged-lending unit.

Said Maloney, "We have put no number out and we have said we did not choose to do it in that way." Instead, he said, Citicorp is systematically examining its business units, particularly in worldwide corporate finance, "looking at what the prospects for revenue are and expenses are."

He said an estimate of needed job cuts could be made at the end of the year, but that the review process would go on into next. "It takes quite a long time to do something like this," he said. "We're not going to panic."

Maloney said Citicorp intended to maintain its strategic global position, not retreat as other U.S. institutions have done. "We've embarked on major economies, yes - not a downscaling," Maloney said. "We're not pulling out of many parts of the world like the other guys."

But some see this moderated cost-cutting approach as a refusal to address the bank's real problems and depart from past behavior. "I think Citicorp has historically been one of the most reluctant to control its expense lines," said PaineWebber Inc. bank analyst Frank DeSantis, adding that high overhead has long restrained the bank's profits.

"It's not surprising that when the (banking) industry's got their back to the wall, and everyone else around them is cutting jobs, they're taking the Band-Aid approach to cutting costs," he said.

DeSantis said he believed Citicorp would eventually be obliged to take larger cost-cutting steps, and possibly trim fourth-quarter dividends. "They've got themselves in a box and now they've got to work out of it,' he said.

In the third quarter, Citicorp posted a 38 percent profit drop, earning $221 million, or 56 cents a share, compared with $358 million, or 99 cents a share in the year-earlier period. Troubled commercial assets rose $1.1 billion in the period, to $9.2 billion from $8.1 billion.

(OCT. 26) UPI - Washington's patience in the Persian Gulf may be growing a little thin. In the past 24 hours there has been confirmation from Defense Secretary Cheney that 100-thousand more U-S troops may head to the area to beef up the numbers already there. And now diplomats are talking of Secretary of State Baker possibly heading to Saudi Arabia to ask its permission to get the tanks and troops rolling. All of this comes as Iraq says the 700 Bulgarians it holds as hostages are now free to go.

The budget compromise is reported to be slowly creeping along in Washington with Senate Republican leader Robert Dole warning that the results may yet fall short of goals. He says a number of major issues remain on the table and the target of 500-BILLION dollars in deficit cuts over five years may NOT make it. And there is still the question of getting the package actually passed by Congress, especially in the House, which has become the place where previous budget compromises went to die.

The government will now decide what jail Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry will be in when he serves six months on his conviction of misdemeanor cocaine possession charges. And he will remain free on personal recognizance until then. Barry also was given a five-thousand- dollar fine by a judge who commented on his ''breach of public service.'' Barry will remain as mayor until his term ends on January 2nd because he was convicted of a misdemeanor, NOT a felony.

The new issue of the National Law Journal due out next Monday has an article in which former Supreme Court Justice Lewis Powell says he may have been wrong in voting to uphold a Georgia law making sodomy between consenting adults a crime. Powell's vote was the deciding one delivered in the 5-4 decision that carried a conservative victory in the issue.

A shootout between alleged members of a Jamaican gang and federal and local police in Miami has left two suspects dead and two wounded. The F- B-I says NO law enforcement agents were injured in the 15-second exchange of gunfire outside a warehouse last night. The F-B-I says the suspects were alleged members of a so-called ''Jamaican Posse'' linked to home invasion robberies, drug ripoffs and murders... and were armed with automatic weapons and posing as police officers.

Careless smoking is being blamed for an early morning house fire that killed four people, including three young children. Officials say the blaze was sparked by a boarder smoking in bed. The fire killed him and the three children, who were trapped in a second-floor bedroom. Three people managed to escape the inferno. Officials say the house was completely engulfed in flames when firefighters arrived.

Hundreds of former crewmen gathered in Norfolk, Virginia, today as the Navy retired the World War Two-era battleship U-S-S Iowa. The vessel fell victim to Pentagon budget cuts after an April 1989 gun turret explosion that killed 47 sailors. Loved ones of those who died in the blast also were on hand for the ceremony on the deck of the battleship at Norfolk Naval Station. One crewman who served aboard the Iowa in the 1940's said mothballing the warship was ''like burying one of your people.''

SAO PAULO, BRAZIL (OCT. 26) UPI - Hundreds of marine animals were found slaughtered on a beach in southern Brazil - the apparent victims of commercial fishermen in whose nets they got tangled, officials said Friday.

''By my estimate, there are about 400 or 500 animals of all kinds - giant turtles, penguins, seals, sea lions, dolphins,'' said Moacir Schroeder, regional director of the Brazilian Institute on the Environment and Natural Resources.

''They are every where along the beach,'' he told United Press International in a telephone interview from Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil's southernmost state, about 700 miles southwest of Sao Paulo. ''This is a crime against nature.''

After a witness report, the animals were found Thursday during a helicopter search by government agencies. The corpses stretch for about 60 miles of coastline in Rio Grande do Sul, officials said.

Schroeder said some of the animals had their heads cut off, while others were still tied with rope and still others had been shot with .22 caliber bullets.

''We're very concerned,'' he said. ''These animals are of absolutely no commercial value to the fishermen. They get tangled in the nets (of shrimp or tuna fishermen), and they kill them to get them out of the way.''

He said there was a similar incident in the same area in 1988, but that this was easily the largest massacre of marine animals he had ever seen in Brazil.

''We are going to conduct a thorough investigation,'' he said. ''We will search by air, land and water.'' He said state biologists and zoologists were being brought in from Brasilia to determine how the animals had died and how long they had been dead.

Federal Police and several state agencies are involved in the investigation, he said.

NEW YORK (OCT. 26) UPI - Developer and casino-hotel owner Donald J. Trump, whose financial empire is showing signs of stress, Friday said LFC Real Estate Marketing Services will auction 45 luxury properties at Trump Plaza of the Palm Beaches in Florida on Dec. 16.

Also Friday, Trump set the minimum bid for the condominiums and townhomes at $150,000. Asking prices on the property previously ranged from $299,000 to $1.8 million, Trump said.

Real estate sales at the West Palm Beach development, acquired by Trump in 1986 with a $60 million loan from Marine Midland Bank of New York, have been slow to non-existent, according to real estate analysts. The auction, to be held at the Breakers Hotel in Palm Beach, was scheduled as part of an agreement with Marine Midland.

"We have selected LFC (of Newport Beach, Calif.) and their auction marketing technique because they have nationally demonstrated their ability to market luxury residential properties," Trump said in a statement. "The real estate climate is soft nationwide, indicating a need for more aggressive and innovative marketing approaches."

Forty-one condominiums, a penthouse and three townhomes in the development's twin 32-story towers will be auctioned, Trump said.

(OCT. 26) UPI - Media reports from France indicate that Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein has sent a message to President Francois Mitterrand saying he is ''ready to discuss'' problems in the Middle East, including Kuwait. There's NO formal confirmation from Paris. A similar message reportedly went to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev. All of this comes as the French and Soviet leaders prepare for a mini- summit in Paris on Sunday.

Israel is out with its own report on the Temple Mount riots and deaths on October 8th. It blames Moslem worshippers for starting everything. It also blames senior Israeli police officials for NOT keeping a lid on the violence that followed. They died when Israeli police switched from firing rubber bullets to using live rounds.

White House Chief of Staff John Sununu is warning congressional negotiators NOT to hide any surprises in the budget compromise they are trying to hammer out today. But he also sounds a note of optimism that Congress will approve the package once it is ready for a vote. Senate Republican leader Robert Dole says he feels an agreement could be ready by nightfall, allowing for a quick vote and then a quick exit from Washington as the 101st Congress finally spirals down to an end.

Three-term Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry stood before a federal judge this morning and said he was prepared ''to take full responsibility'' for the actions that brought him there in the first place. The judge then gave Barry a six-month jail sentence and a five- thousand-dollar fine for his conviction on cocaine possession charges. The charge was a misdemeanor, NOT a felony, and that means Barry will NOT have to step down before his term expires on January 2nd. And he can continue running for an at-large City Council seat in the November 6th Washington elections.

Emergency management officials in North Carolina report that five- thousand people have been cut off from the mainland after near- hurricane-strength winds slammed into the coast, knocking out a bridge to the Outer Banks. Officials say winds gusting up to 90 miles an hour ripped a dredge from its moorings and knocked the vessel into the Herbert Bonner bridge, tearing out a 300-foot section. The bridge is the only link between Hatteras Island and the mainland.

MADRID, SPAIN (OCT. 26) UPI - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev was given a red-carpet welcome to Spain Friday and began negotiations to receive about $1 billion worth of credits in Spanish consumer goods desperately needed by the troubled Soviet economy.

Gorbachev, accompanied by his wife Raisa, arrived shortly before 1 p.m. at Madrid Airport, where he was received by socialist Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez and Foreign Minister Francisco Fernandez Ordonez.

So rapid has been the political change in spain that there was not a dissenter to be seen or voice of protest heard against the visitors from the Kremlin.

''We are prepared and want to share actively in all European issues, including the new security structure, and pan-European system of interaction in the economy, ecology, energy, information and culture,'' Gorbachev told the Spanish newspaper El Pais in an interview also published in the Communist Party newspaper Pravda on Friday.

''The Europeans can solve these and many other issues, for that matter, only if they act together,'' Gorbachev said, making his first foreign trip since winning the Nobel Peace Prize.

Officials said the main subject of business would be a more than $1 billion credit package that would be used by the Soviets to buy Spanish consumer goods and industrial equipment.

The Soviet first couple were driven in a classic Rolls-Royce limousine in a motorcade through the Spanish capital to the Prado Palace, where they will stay during their weekend visit.

Gorbachev was received by King Juan Carlos and both stood to attention as national anthems were played. He inspected an honor guard and then traveled to the Moncloa Palace, where he embarked on his first bout of talks with Gonzalez.

From the same three-story, 18th century palace, set in its own gardens seven miles from the capital, Gen. Francisco Franco ruled Spain for almost four decades before his lingering death in November 1975.

A 21-gun salute boomed across the palace grounds and units on foot and horseback as well as a motorcycle unit mounting machines sent here by President in the 1950s swung past.

The veteran Harley-Davidsons and Franco's stately Rolls served as reminders that Spain was once ruled by a man who survived to become the last of Europe's dictators and who died loathing communism.

Since democracy, Spain has received many heads of state but the visit of the Soviet leader has captured the nation's attention more than any.

Newspapers front paged welcome headlines in Russian script and the state-run television network is giving the visit, the first Gorbachev has made since winning the Nobel peace prize, 20 hours of live coverage before he flies to Paris from Barcelona on Sunday.

The six-day European swing will also take Gorbachev to France, and to underline his intent on active European diplomacy, the Soviet leader was accompanied by Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

Socialist Prime Minister Gonzalez spent more than two hours in talks with Gorbachev covering peace initiatives to end the Gulf crisis, economic and technical help for Moscow and finalizing details of a $1.2 billion credit to help boost the Soviet Union's shattered economy.

As the leaders talked, Mrs. Gorbachev, who arrived wearing a striking mustard colored jacket, strolled through the main Plaza de Espana Square, in the city center, stopping to talk to those who could get near her.

Then she was driven to Madrid's famous Prado Museum and escorted around the gallery by Queen Sofia, looking at priceless paintings by such Spanish masters as Goya, El Greco and Velazquez.

Later, she teamed up with her husband for another colorful ceremony at the ancient city hall before moving on to Parliament to meet members of both theCongress and Senate from all political parties.

After a state banquet at the Royal Oriente Palace - now used exclusively for such occasions - the Gorbachevs were spending the night at the former seat of Franco power. It was lavishly reconverted into the guest house for visiting heads of state.

Installed was a direct link from his bedside telephone to the Kremlin.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 26) UPI - The crisis in the gulf is moving into a tense new phase with both sides building up their military forces, playing what diplomatic cards they have, and waiting for the other side to blink.

U.S. policy makers have found Saddam Hussein to be wily and unexpectedly resilient. But U.S. officials continue to believe that time is working against Saddam and he is being forced to deal with increasingly difficult economic problems that may eventually erode whatever popular support he may have.

Iraq has begun gas rationing and there are signs that spare parts - for military as well as civilian vehicles and aircraft - are in short supply.

Nevertheless, Saddam has added another 100,000 troops to those already in Kuwait, for a total of about 430,000, and the Iraqi troops are digging in. The United States has matched that with announced plans to send another 100,000 troops to Saudi Arabia, which would bring the total U.S. strength to more than 300,000.

U.S. officials believe that the international coalition against Iraq has held together better than anticipated, although there are the first rumblings from Capitol Hill from members of Congress who want to be consulted before the first shots are fired.

The administration has said it would ''consult'' but not let Congress be part of the decision-making process in case a quick response would have to be required.

The State Department and Pentagon have begun planning for the next phase in the crisis, which will include trips to the Middle East by Secretary of State Baker, probably within the next two weeks, and a brief tour by President Bush in late November.

On Baker's agenda is an understanding with Saudi Arabia that U.S. forces can be used with great flexibility and that they won't have to wait for an Iraqi attack on Saudi Arabia before moving into action. He also wants to set up a longer-term arrangement for Saudi financial support for the U.S. forces - now running at $1 billion a month.

The U.S. strategy is to keep up the diplomatic pressure, but to make it apparent to Saddam that the alternative - a full-scale military attack - will come if there is no response to the diplomacy and the U.N. resolutions calling for an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait.

Both sides are operating on the theory that the United States and its allies would hold air superiority within days of the first shot being fired. But both sides are also aware of another military fact: As Iraq found out in its eight-year war with Iran, air superiority doesn't win wars. Victory requires superiority on the ground as well.

Saddam, for his part, is trying to split the coalition against him, partly by the selective release of hostages, and partly by a confusing mixture of bluster, threats and reasonable-sounding approaches to some Western leaders.

The wild card in this contest is terrorism.

One nightmare scenario is an Iraqi truckbomb driven into an American military installation. Another is an attack, by an Iraqi-directed mob, against an American military or diplomatic installation in the Middle East.

At that point, President Bush would have to make a decision to move into the next phase, most likely an air attack that would begin by taking out Iraqi air defenses, and then striking at relative leisure at strategic targets inside Iraq.

That would be the next phase: removing Saddam's war-making potential and, presumably in that process, removing Saddam himself from power.

That is the general path that Saudi and American officials see ahead, since - as Saudi Ambassador Bandar Bin Sultan - said Thursday: ''We don't see anything as of now that tells us Saddam Hussein has changed his mind and wants a peaceful resolution.''

NEW YORK (OCT. 26) UPI - A bicyclist testifying at the Central Park jogger trial Friday identified Kevin Richardson's jacket as the same garment worn by a member of a teen gang that tried to attack him.

''That's the jacket,'' testified Gerald Malone, an advertising executive who was riding through the moonlit park with his fiancee, Patricia Dean, on a bicycle built for two on April 19, 1989.

Malone, 35, made the statement after looking at a police photograph of the jacket Richardson, 16, was wearing when he was apprehended in the park that night.

Malone, who has since married Dean and moved to San Francisco, said a youth wearing the same jacket was in a gang that blocked the roadway and grabbed at Dean as they sped by on the tandem bike.

Assistant District Attorney Elizabeth Lederer asked the hulky Malone at what point during the incident he noticed the jacket.

''Almost immediately. That white logo was there. He was crouching. Then he pulled the jacket up over his head,'' Malone testified at the trial in state Supreme Court in Manhattan.

Richardson and co-defendant, Kharey Wise, 18, are on trial on 13 criminal counts stemming from the one-hour random crime spree.

They are accused of being part of a gang of up to 30 youths that rampaged through the park, beating and robbing joggers and bicyclists and gang-raping a woman jogger.

During the trial Friday, Howard Diller continued as Richardson's defense lawyer despite the family's contention that he has been fired and replaced by black activist lawyer C. Vernon Mason.

Mason, who is awaiting a jury verdict in the murder trial of another client in Brooklyn, was expected to show up in the Manhattan courtroom either Friday or Monday to ask for permission to take over Richardson's defense.

On Thursday, Justice Thomas Galligan Thursday turned down Diller's request to step down because he had been fired by Richardson's mother, Grace Cuffee, who hired Mason. Diller told the judge that Richardson's family is refusing to cooperate with him to help in the youth's defense.

However, Galligan told Diller that the trial was under way and ''as far as the court is concerned, you are the attorney for the defendant and you will continue as attorney for the defendant.''

Altogether, six youths were indicted in the ''wilding'' rampage. Three of them were convicted last summer of raping and beating the woman jogger and assaulting two male joggers. The three - McCray, Yusef Salaam, 16, and Raymond Santana, 16 - were sentenced to 5 to 10 years in a juvenile jail.

The final youth, Steve Lopez, 16, is slated to be tried alone next year.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 26) UPI - A judge sentenced Mayor Marion Barry Friday to six months in jail and a $5,000 fine for his conviction on a cocaine possession charge, saying the chief executive of the nation's capital gave ''aid, comfort and encouragement to the drug culture.''

U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson ordered the three-term mayor to one year on probation after his release from prison and ordered him to undergo periodic drug testing.

Because he was convicted of a misdemeanor, Barry will not be forced to relinquish his office before his term ends Jan. 2. Under city law, he also can continue his bid for the at-large City Council seat in the Nov. 6 elections.

Barry would have been forced to step down if he had been convicted of a felony.

The mayor's wife, Effi, and his mother, Mattie Cummings, looked on as Barry stood before the judge next to one of his attorneys, Robert Mance.

Jackson found that Barry engaged in a ''willful attempt to obstruct justice'' by lying to a grand jury about his drug use, a charge which makes jail time mandatory under U.S. sentencing guidelines.

Jackson said he will let the government decide in which prison Barry will be incarcerated. He allowed Barry to remain free on his personal recognizance and told Barry he had the right to appeal.

''His breach of public service alone is of the highest consideration, '' Jackson said in delivering the sentence, adding that Barry gave ''aid, comfort and encouragement to the drug culture.''

As he stood before the judge, Barry said, ''I stand here remorseful and I ask this court to impose community service as a sentence.''

Before the sentencing, Barry told the judge he was nervous.

''My stomach is in knots,'' he said. ''I am prepared and have been prepared to take full responsibility for my actions. These actions were out of character."

He admitted his former dependence to alcohol, valium, an anti-depressant and cocaine, saying, ''I believe I've led an exemplary life since Jan. 18,'' the day of his arrest. He said it was the 279th day he was free of any drug.

Paul Martin, a spokesman for the U.S. Sentencing Commission, said Barry must serve the entire six months in jail because federal sentencing guidelines that went into effect in 1987 abolished parole.

In addition, because Barry's sentence was under a year, he is not eligible for ''good time.''

"Six months is six months," Martin said. ''That's what he will have to serve.

''If the judge had not found obstruction of justice, he could've given (Barry) straight probation. But with obstruction there's a mandatory minimum jail sentence of two months, and it goes up to eight months.''

Defense attorney R. Kenneth Mundy said he was ''disappointed'' by the jail sentence, and added, ''The final chapter has not been written.''

''We will be appealing and we fully expect that the appeal process will take a little while.'' Mundy said.

He said Barry, who left the courthouse through a side door without speaking to reporters, was ''disappointed too.''

''He was disappointed, very honestly disappointed,'' Mundy said.

Mundy declined to say whether he believed Barry's political career would be further harmed, but he did say that Barry had been used as a ''whipping boy'' and ''a scapegoat'' for the district's worsening drug problem.

But U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens told reporters at a news conference later that Barry's sentence was appropriate and ''well within the range of the maxiumum sentence provided by law.''

''In imposing the sentence the court emphasized that Mr. Barry had breached the public trust and contributed to this city's and our nation's most devastating drug problem,'' Stephens said. ''He has now been held accountable for his conduct.''

Stephens also denied that the government's recommendation that Barry be sentenced to a jail term instead of probation was racially or politically motivated.

''The decision to prosecute this case, the decision we made ask for the sentence was based on a range of factors such as breach of public trust and obstruction of justice,'' Stephens said. ''The totality of the conduct here justified the imposition of the sentence.''

(OCT. 26) UPI - A ranking Soviet envoy met with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak Friday before heading backing to Iraq and warned against rewarding Iraqi aggression, as the United States sent strong signals it was considering ending the standoff with a military strike.

Also in Cairo, Italian Foreign Minister Gianni de Michelis said after talks with Mubarak and his Egyptian counterpart Esmat Abdel Meguid prior to a weekend European Community summit that a partial solution to the Persian Gulf crisis was unacceptable.

In New York, oil prices were almost unchanged in early Friday afternoon seesaw trading on a report Secretary of State James Baker was expected to go to Saudi Arabia to obtain permission for a military strike against Iraq.

The French television station, Network La Cinq, reported that Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein had sent a message to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and French President Francois Mitterrand saying he was ''ready to discuss'' the Kuwaiti situation, but the report could not be confirmed.

But a spokesman for Mitterrand said she had ''no information'' about any such message. ''Maybe one was sent. But we didn't receive one,'' she said.

Soviet envoy Yevgeny Primakov again expressed optimism Friday the crisis could be solved peacefully but warned that Iraq must not be rewarded for its invasion of Kuwait.

''I am convinced that we can change the situation entirely without resorting to the military option,'' Primakov said after meeting Mubarak.

"(But) we must not reward anyone for what he has done," he added, in a veiled reference to reports he was negotiating a peace plan by which Iraq would withdraw from Kuwait in return for two strategic Kuwaiti islands in the gulf.

The report, denied by Moscow and Baghdad, was criticized by many world leaders who said the withdrawal from Kuwait must be unconditional.

Despite the Gorbachev aide's meeting Oct. 5 with Saddam Hussein in Baghdad,the Soviet envoy was not acting as a mediator between the Iraq president and other world leaders, an Egyptian official said, but was seeking to discover a peaceful solution to the crisis.

State-owned Cairo Radio said Primakov would be in Baghdad Saturday and would probably meet Saddam and other Iraqi leaders. But Baghdad Radio made no comment on Primakov's impending visit.

The Soviet Union has not joined the U.S.-led multinational force deployed in the gulf to counter Iraqi aggression, but it has supported U.N. resolutions demanding a complete withdrawal from Kuwait and has said it would join any U.N.-backed effort to oust the Iraqis from the emirate.

The Italian foreign minister De Michalis, meanwhile, whose country is the current chairman of the 12-nation EC, said after talks with Mubarak that there was no room for a partial solution to the crisis and said Baghdad's isolation was becoming more and more clear.

De Michalis said he was sending a clear signal to Baghdad that ''no half-way solution is possible.'' The crisis would be among the topis discussed at the EC summit, he said.

Sources in Washington said the White House was sending Saddam Hussein a clear message that it was serious about its demand he withdraw from Kuwait, occupied by Iraqi troops Aug. 2.

In Washington Friday, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater did not deny reports Baker would travel to Saudi Arabia to obtain permission for a military strike against Iraq if that option was deemed necessary. But Fitzwater said he would not discuss Baker's travel plans.

Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney confirmed Thursday the United States may send another 100,000 troops to the gulf to join an estimated 200,000 American soldiers already deployed in the region.

In other developments:

-Yemeni President Ali Abdullah Saleh criticized Saudi Arabia for inviting U.S.-led forces into the country and undermining Yemen's stability by forcing 500,000 Yemenis to leave Saudi Arabia, the New York Times reported. Saudi Arabia and Kuwait's exiled government have accused Saleh, who came to power 12 years ago, of supporting Saddam Hussein and describing him as ''an excellent Arab leader'' and ''a fine Arab nationalist.'' Saleh insisted he was neutral in the dispute which began when Iraq invaded Kuwait.

-Bulgaria's Parliament authorized the establishment of a medical team of volunteers to serve with the multinational military force in the gulf - only a day after Saddam Hussein promised to free 430 Bulgarians. Iraq has been releasing select groups of hostages, held in Iraq and occupied Kuwait as a human shield against Western attack, in what diplomats say is an effort to divide the international alliance against him.

-Cairo Radio said former Algerian President Ahmed Ben Bella was trying to secure the release of 70 Swiss hostages.

-Former Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone said he will travel to Baghdad next week to meet with Saddam Hussein in an effort to convince him to release Japanese hostages. Former British Prime Minister Edward Heath secured the release of 54 British and American hostages this week after a personal appeal to the Iraqi president.

-The official Iraqi news agency INA published reports indicating France was now a great supporter of Baghdad even though French officials have said repeatedly the release would not effect the country's hard- line stand against the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

BOSTON (OCT. 26) UPI - Pay and benefits in the Northeast are steadily falling behind inflation and raises are now also below the national average, the U.S. Department of Commerce's Bureau of Labor Statistics said Friday.

For the first time in six-and-a-half years, average pay increases in the nine Middle Atlantic and New England states during the year ended in September did not at least equal the national average. This represents a sharp reversal for a region that has led the nation in compensation growth for much of the past decade.

Averge compensation rose only 4.6 percent, but inflation climbed 6.6 percent over the year ended Sept. 30, the bureau said. The 4.6 percent rate was tied with the West for the slowest growth in the nation and compared with annual rates of 5 percent in the South and 5.2 percent in the Midwest.

(OCT. 26) UPI - Secretary of State Baker is expected to travel to Saudi Arabia to obtain permission for a military strike against Iraq... if it's deemed necessary. That's according to diplomatic sources who say the visit is a signal to Iraq that the United States is deadly serious about liberating Kuwait.

A French television network says Iraqi President Saddam Hussein sent messages to French President Mitterand and Soviet President Gorbachev saying he was ready to discuss the Persian Gulf crisis. But a spokeswoman for Mitterand says the French leader did NOT receive any such message.

A three-man Israeli government committee released a report today blaming Moslem worshippers for the October 8th riot at Jerusalem's Temple Mount. The report says the Moslems were responsible for starting the incident that ended in the shooting deaths of at least 20 Palestinians. But it also criticized senior police officials for taking inadequate measures to prevent violence.

Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry won't have to relinquish his office... but a federal judge in the nation's capital today ordered Barry to serve a six-month jail term for his conviction on a misdemeanor cocaine possession charge. Barry also was slapped with a five-thousand- dollar fine. He can still run for a City Council seat in the November elections.

The budget negotiations are still ''creeping along'' on Capitol Hill. And Senate Republican leader Robert Dole warns that the long-sought agreement could fall short of the five-year, 500-BILLION-dollar goal in deficit cuts.

Dole says there are a number of major issues still to be resolved.

President Bush today wasted NO time in responding to the latest jibe from Democrats about the budget battle. Stumping for Republicans in Irvine, California, Bush charged that the Democratic-controlled Congress has been on ''an uncontrolled spending binge for years'' and that ''strong medicine'' is now needed to clean up the budget deficits.

At least 11 people are dead and several hundred others injured after a strong earthquake rocked northwestern Pakistan today. Officials say hundreds of homes were destroyed. The quake measured six-point-six on the Richter scale and was centered about 150 miles north of the western Pakistan city of Peshawar in the Hindu Kush mountains.

Vice President Quayle encountered protesters today when he spoke at his alma mater, DePauw University, in Greencastle, Indiana. About 100 people at the school protested against President Bush's veto of the civil rights bill. Quayle told the group that the bill was flawed because it would require job quotas, creating further discrimination in the future.

A Korean-owned grocery store was the target of an impromptu protest today after a black heart attack victim was removed from the store and left outside because employees and the owner thought he was drunk. The victim later died. The store owner says it was an unavoidable mistake. Community leaders fear that neighborhood residents could see racial overtones in the incident.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 26) UPI - The Senate approved and sent to the White House Friday a $268.2 billion ''new strategy'' military spending bill to meet the post-Cold War challenges to the United States.

The bill, which imposes the largest single-year cut in defense spending since the Vietnam War, was passed 80-17. The House gave its approval earlier this week 271-156.

The Senate also approved and sent to the White House a lean $288 billion bill that authorizes the expenditures in the spending bill and also authorizes some future projects that need seed spending. The vote was 80-17.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said overall the compromise legislation was good and added it would ''start to implement a new strategy (to meet) a changing threat in the world.''

Nunn said the two bills inaugurate a ''stable long-term glide'' for reduction in troop strength, establishes a ''fly before we buy'' policy, shifts a greater share of the burden in the future to reserve forces, includes a solid and balanced strategic modernization program and shifts away from a forward deployment strategy.

The appropriations bill cuts back sharply on two of the administration's most ambitious weapons projects.

The bill provides $4.1 billion for the B-2 stealth bomber - the futurestic airplane that can penetrate radar to reach its target - $2.3 billion for procurement and $1.8 billion for research and development.

The compromise legislation does not tell the Air Force what to do with the $2.3 billion in procurement. The Senate is on record that the money should be used for two more planes but the House expects the money to be used for cost overruns on the first six planes authorized in previous years.

The bill includes $2.9 billion for the ''Star Wars'' air defense system, a cut of $1.8 billion in the administration request and the first time that Congress has appropriated less than $3 billion for the project.

Congress denied money for the proposed basing of MX missiles on railroad cars and established a ''pool'' of $687 million for research of the MX and Midgetman missiles.

The legislation includes $165 million for advance procurement and $238 million for research and development on the controversial V-22 Osprey, the vertical-horizontal takeoff plane designed to carry Marines into battle.

The most visible sign of the new military posture in the bill is a cut in troop levels by 78,500 and pulls 50,000 troops out of Europe. The measure also requires an annual 5,000 cut in the number of troops in Japan if Japan does not pay for housing U.S. forces.

#90299u1651 10/26/1990 ~United Press International
WASHINGTON (OCT. 26) UPI - House and Senate negotiators grasped at a tax and spending agreement that remained just out of reach Friday as black lawmakers threatened to vote against the package to protest the defeat of civil rights legislation.

An accord aimed at reducing the federal budget deficit by $500 billion over the next five years, with $40 billion in savings the first year, appeared to be coalescing on several key issues.

However, a final deal that could win both support from the administration and enough Democratic votes to clear the House continued to elude congressional leaders Friday.

Signaling a potential new setback, Senate Republicans raised questions about whether the package under negotiation would achieve the level of savings the talks are designed to produce.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, worked until 3 a.m. EDT Friday before reaching a tentative agreement on tax increases.

But their deal still faced the scrutiny of other tax negotiators before an overall budget package could be completed.

About 30 Republican House members, including GOP leaders, gathered Friday for what Rep. Bill Frenzel, D-Minn., described afterward as a ''pep meeting'' by Republicans generally ''sympathetic'' to passing a budget package.

Frenzel, the ranking GOP member of the Ways and Means Committee, said he doubted more than 60 of the 175 Republicans in the House would ultimately vote for whatever deficit-reduction deal emerged.

Most House Republicans have rebelled against the budget talks because of their opposition to higher taxes, requiring the bipartisan leadership to rally broad support among Democrats to win passage of the legislation.

Complicating that effort, members of the Congressional Black Caucus announced Friday they would vote against a deficit-reduction accord to protest Bush's veto of a major civil rights bill and the narrow Senate vote to sustain his rejection.

The ''overwhelming majority'' of the 23-member caucus planned to take part in the revolt in an attempt to force reconsideration of the civil rights veto, which the Senate failed to override by one vote on Wednesday, said Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif., caucus chairman.

''The one last train leaving (Congress this session) is the budget,'' Dellums said, adding that the effort to override the veto ''should be equal to the Herculean effort they're putting into the budget.''

Sixteen members of the caucus appeared with Dellums for a news conference, and more are expected to join him, he said.

House Speaker Tom Foley, who met with the black caucus members for about an hour Friday, said earlier in the day he was confident of garnering the Democratic votes in the House necessary for passage.

Meanwhile, Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas raised the possibility that the package under discussion might not yield the deficit reduction negotiators have promised.

''We're losing some of our savings in the last days of the budget negotiations '' Dole said. ''Some are saying we can't reduce spending. ... If we're going to reduce cuts in spending, we may not wind up with this magic $500 billion in five years.''

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., the ranking GOP member of the Senate Budget Committee, said, ''I think a lot of us are balking at the fact that they don't have enough savings in this package.''

Asked how far short of the $500 billion target the package sat, Domenici said, ''A minimum of $10 billion.''

But Domenici said the problems are ''resolvable.''

White House chief of staff John Sununu also stressed the importance of spending cuts.

''We're looking at the package and reviewing it,'' Sununu said. ''It's got to have savings in it. You can't have deficit reduction without savings.''

Congressional leaders from both parties arranged to meet with White House officials later Friday in a meeting that Dole said could determine the fate of the package.

Dole said disagreement lingered over a proposed new tax rate of 31 percent for the wealthiest Americans and questions of how to scale back deductions and personal exemptions for upper-income earners.

KHARTOUM, SUDAN (OCT. 26) UPI - Less than one day after a government official said there was no famine problem in Sudan, Africa's largest country appealed Friday for immediate food assistance of 75,000 tons, a senior U.N. official said.

Trevor Page, World Food Program Director for Sudan and acting special representative of the U.N. Secretary General, said the government had sent letters to embassies of would-be donor countries requesting the food.

Western aid workers said at least 1 million people were under threat in the north of the country alone.

Thousands were moving towards Khartoum, searching for food, they said.

In the south, where civil war has raged since 1983, the situation could be far worse in some places because of supply difficulties.

At a camp of sack-cloth tents in a wasteland of dust, rubbish and blasting heat barely five miles outside Khartoum, displaced southerners told journalists of the appalling conditions they had fled and the desperate problems they faced now.

''We get water once a day,'' said John Laad, a 30-year old Nuer tribesman who walked for five months to reach the capital. ''I cannot get well. There is no food, no clothes. I have not any job.''

Children with bleeding gums and thin bodies played nearby in the crushing sun.

Page said a food crisis threatened to strike before harvests could be gathered in November.

''In the interim, and because of the acute food scarcity that prevails, we have, in consultation with the World Food Program, determined that the urgent delivery from abroad of 75,000 tons of dura (sorghum), millet, maize or wheat is required for distribution to those affected by drought,'' the letter said.

It said the WFP had already delivered 19,000 tons of wheat to Sudan and was expecting another shipment of 6,000 tons.

Sudan, which suffered a crippling famine in 1985, faces severe problems throughout the country in Africa.

This is because of inadequate rains in August and September, a war in the south, non-existent food stocks, aid cuts from Saudi Arabia over Khartoum's support of Iraq in the Gulf crisis, and economic fragmentation resulting from that crisis.

The Food and Agriculture Organization of the U.N. earlier this month said between five and six million people in the east African country could starve later this year if timely food pledges are not made.

On Thursday, Agriculture Minister Ahmed Ali Ginaif said the situation was under control and could be dealt with using existing government resources.

Western aid workers, who asked not to be identified, said that while the government's planting programs aimed at self-reliance were laudable, the minister's optimism was misplaced.

''I think this time it is worse than in 1984 because there is no food at all in the country,'' said one worker with a Western charity group.

Page said, however, that President Gen. Omar al Bashir shared his worries but rightly did not want to launch a major appeal until after a further FAO harvest assessment Nov. 10-13.

Prices of 200-pound sorghum bags have soared in northern Kordofan, a semi-arid area west of Khartoum, from a normal $12.50 to between $100-$125, Page said.

In the war-torn south of the country, one bag can feed the average family for a month.

Page said harvests, when they came, would not be disastrous. In some areas 100 percent harvests were expected. In others, there would be no yield.

''The problem is, you can't eat the food in the fields,'' he said. ''What we have got to do is to manage from now until the harvest is on the market. The earliest date for that is mid-December.''

The WFP has already diverted 19,000 tons of wheat aid destined for China to Port Sudan and expects to receive 6,000 more tons early next week, he explained.

He said Sudan needed to find another 50,000 tons within three weeks.

Only 10 miles west of Khartoum, Page said, carcasses of cows and donkeys ''litter the sand.'' People are moving from famine areas to try to sell their livestock in the capital.

''I haven't seen a sight like that since the so-called Great Sahelian Drought which devastated a belt of Africa from Chad to Mauritania,'' Page said.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 26) UPI - Relief supplies are trickling into Monrovia, Liberia, as fighting in that nation's civil war moves from the capital where thousands lay dead and dying from combat, disease and famine, an official said Friday.

The State Department's Office of Foreign Disaster Assistance estimates 10,000 to 13,000 people were killed in fighting that began 10 months ago as a rebellion against the government of former Liberian President Samuel Doe.

Andrew Natsios, director of the foreign assistance office, painted a bleak picture of life in the African nation's largest city.

''The situation in Monrovia is worse than anybody thought. ''Epidemics are raging, with 50 people dying every day from typhoid, typhus and cholera,'' said Natsios. ''There has been no water for ''ios. ''

A recent estimate showed that 80 percent of the approximately 200,000 people in Monrovia are suffering from malnutrition. ''It's horrendous,'' he said.

Natsios said health problems are complicated by thousands of unburied corpses from the war that raged through city streets.

Now that the main rebel groups have been pushed out of the city and out of mortar range of Monrovia's harbor by western African military forces, the first small supply ships arrived this week carrying about 2, 700 tons of food.

Natsios also said the first outside relief workers, including Americans, are venturing into the capital.

Priorities include burying the dead and restoring electricity and water to the city.

Relief organizations, including some from western Europe, will begin to try to establish food supplies, together with handing out seeds for next year's crops.

Because the shifting tides of war can move back into the capital at almost any time, Natsios said, it is necessary to move quickly to take advantage of the lull in the fighting.

So far, the United States has pledged 73,000 tons of food, part of a total aid commitment of $47.5 million. European countries have pledged $11.4 million.

NEWARK, NJ (OCT. 26) UPI - The former chairman of a textile company whose collapse cost shareholders more than $100 million was indicted Friday on racketeering and securities fraud charges for "cooking the books."

Michael Weinstein, 49, of Boca Raton, Fla., was expected to be formally charged in Florida, then face extradition to New Jersey, said U.S. Attorney Michael Chertoff, who office has been investigating the demise of Coated Sales Inc.

The federal grand jury also charged Weinstein with conspiracy, mail and wire fraud, and interstate transport of stolen proceeds for offenses that spanned June 1984 to June 1988.

"When dishonesty roams the board room, the victims are the depositors and shareholders," Chertoff said. "Woody Guthrie once said that a man can rob with a gun or a fountain pen. This case is an example of how effective the pen has been," he said.

Richard Breeden, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, said the fraud was designed to boost the firm's earnings by using false invoices to hike income.

"We allege gross misconduct," he said in announcing that the SEC would file a civil suit against Weinstein and four former Coated Sales executives who previously pleaded guilty to participating in the fraud scheme. With 1987 net sales reported to be more than $90 million, Coated Sales was considered to be one of the fastest-growing stocks.

"They cooked the books, participated in a deliberate fraud, and falsified records," Breeden said. "The magnitude of the fraud was stunning. Earnings were overstated by over $50 million." Chertoff said authorities would move to seize Weinstein's Florida home, 43-foot yacht, and several custom and classic automobiles.

Coated Sales had been a major textile converting firm specializing in treating fabrics for industrial use. It produced the laminated sailcloth used by the U.S. entry "Stars and Stripes" which won the 1987 America's Cup.

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 26) UPI - Euro Disneyland, the Disney theme park now under construction outside Paris, received a major boost Friday with the announcement that it would accelerate development plans after the park's scheduled opening in the spring of 1992.

The announcement came in a meeting in London between financial analysts and executives of Euro Disneyland S.A., the French company that is building and will operate year the Magic Kingdom theme park on a 5, 000-acre tract. Euro Disneyland, which will feature 30 rides when it opens, is 49 percent owned by Walt Disney Co.

''We are bullish on Europe long term,'' said John Forgeson, senior vice president and chief financial officer of Euro Disneyland S.A. ''We are respsonding to our demand within the European market for Disney resorts destination product by accelerating the development plans of future phases.''

Forgeson did not reveal how fast the future phases would come on line.

Robert Fitzpatrick, president of Euro Disneyland, said at the meeting, ''Our confidence in the project is even greater than before.''

Entertainment analyst Paul Marsh of Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards in Los Angeles said the announcement represented a ''strong vote of confidence'' in the project.

''The announcement is impressive because, if anything, Disney has a reputation for good planning,'' Marsh said.

Marsh also said that the announcement does not signify that Euro Disneyland would open prior to its scheduled debut.

Fitzpatrick said at the meeting that there were currently 1,200 employees working at the site, 20 miles outside Paris, adding that the number would grow to 11,200 by the time it opens.

The company had announced in May that it was going to expand the capacity of Euro Disneyland by 15 percent, It also raised the cost estimates for the first phase of the project to $3.3 billion from $3 billion.

It said Friday that the total budget for the next phase, which included five hotels, an entertainment center and a lake promenade, would be about $1.2 billion.

Euro Disneyland will be Disney's fourth theme park complex.

The company's flagship Disneyland in Anaheim, Calif., debuted 35 years ago and it has since opened the Walt Disney World complex in Florida, which includes the theme park of the same name, Epcot Center and Disney-MGM Studios, and Tokyo Disneyland, which opened in 1983.

Disney is also planning to open a West Coast theme park by the end of the decade and is considering sites adjacent to Disneyland and in Long Beach, next to the legendary Queen Mary luxury liner and Howard Hughes' Spruce Goose airplane. The announcement on which site will be selected was expected next year.

CONCORD, N.H. (OCT. 26) UPI - Democratic Senate candidate John Durkin angrily accused his Republican opponent, Rep. Bob Smith, Friday of accepting support from ''Japs'' and being a Japanese agent.

''The same Japs who planned and carried out a sneak attack on Dec. 7, 1941 are now planning a sneak attack on the voters of New Hampshire on Nov. 6, 1990,'' Durkin said at a Statehouse news conference.

'''Yokohama Bob' does not belong in the U.S. Senate,'' he said.

Durkin, a former one-term senator, was referring to $317,200 paid by Auto Dealers and Drivers for Free Trade, a political action committee, to buy television commercials to support Smith's campaign.

A Smith campaign spokeswoman deplored Durkin's language, and pointed out that the campaign has no control over independent expenditures by PACs.

A directory of PACs says the auto dealers' organization is composed of Japanese auto manufacturers and its purpose is to promote legislation and regulatory agency decisions that help trade with Japan.

''Here we have the Japs, they buy Rockefeller Center and are trying to turn the Rockettes into Geishas,'' said Durkin. ''That's bad enough. But here they're trying to buy a U.S. Senate seat.''

Durkin, who was visibly angry as he made his charges, brusquely denied that his use of the term ''Jap'' was racist.

''Is that a racist comment?'' he asked. ''It's not a racist comment. It's true.''

Smith, a third-term conservative Republican, could not be reached for immediate comment, but campaign spokeswoman Lisa Stocklan said, ''Congressman Smith believes that John Durkin's comments are unfortunate.''

''We prefer to run our own campaign; however, we have no control over an independent expenditure,'' she added. ''It is not under the control of the Smith campaign.''

Durkin, who served in the Senate from 1975 to 1980, accused the Japanese of spending $50 million a year to influence American trade policy to ensure that they have ready access to American markets. At the same time, he said, they maintain barriers to American companies that want to do business with Japan.

He said Americans are losing jobs because they are not fighting back.

''They would like to make New Hampshire the 'Land of the Rising Sun' and Bob Smith is their chosen foreign agent to carry that out,'' he said. ''To me that is obscene.''

NEW YORK (OCT. 26) UPI - Moody's Investor Service Friday downgraded all the long-term debt and preferred stock ratings of Unisys Corp. and its wholly owned subsidiary, Unisys Finance Corp., citing the computer maker's continued financial problems.

"Unisys' prospects for significant, sustainable profit improvements are low, and ... the company's weak cash flow and poor fixed charge coverage are likely to continue into the foreseeable," Moody's said.

The downgrade came a day after the Blue Bell, Penn.-based Unisys reported a third quarter loss of $356.8 million on revenues of $2.4 billion. The company also predicted the loss of about 5,000 in virtually all departments. Unisys took a special pretax charge of $181 million to cover the planned reductions.

In addition, W. Michael Blumenthal, the architect of the growth strategy that is now causing the company so much trouble, resigned as chairman and as a director. President and Chief Executive Officer James A. Unruh is the company's new chairman.

Moody's said it lowered its ratings on Unisys' senior debt to Ba3 from Ba1; convertible subordinated debt to B2 from Ba3; preferred stock to b3 from b1; and its shelf registration to (P)Ba3 from (P)Ba1. Unisys Finance Corp. had its senior notes downgraded to Ba3 from Ba1.

Moody's said any anticipated improvements in the company's financial position could be offset by a deterioration in the global business climate for computers. The downgrade also followed a lowering Thursday of Unisys' credit ratings by Standard and Poors Corp.

CHICAGO (OCT. 26) UPI - The Chicago Bulls and WGN-TV Friday filed an antitrust suit against the National Basketball Association, challenging the right of the NBA to limit the number of games that can be telecast by so-called ''superstations.''

The NBA Board of Governors voted earlier this year to reduce from 25 to 20 the number of games that can be carried by superstations - those whose signal is picked up by an unaffiliated satellite common carrier that markets the signal to cable operators.

The suit filed in U.S. District Court accuses the NBA of intending to ban superstations from telecasting any games by 1995. The suit says the NBA plan ''unlawfully restricts competition and will harm consumers.'' It cites Bulls fans as those most likely to be harmed because they will be unable to see a full schedule of the team's games on free television.

The suit seeks to prevent implementation of the NBA's decision for the 1990-91 season. WGN's contract with the Bulls provides for 25 telecasts per season.

''We are confident that the courts will rule that the NBA's anti- superstation restrictions are unlawful, just as similar restrictions on college football telecasts were declared illegal by the U.S. Supreme Court several years ago,'' said Dennis J. FitzSimons, WGN-TV's vice president and general manager.

In New York, the league referred the question to its legal department, which had no immediate comment.

ELMONT, N.Y. (OCT. 26) UPI - Goodbye, Sunday Silence. So long, Easy Goer and Golden Pheasant. Catch ya later, Criminal Type.

Racing, focused for weeks on the superstars missing the 1990 Breeders' Cup, finally turns its attention Saturday to the 86 horses in the $10 million extravaganza at Belmont Park.

A few absentees - Criminal Type, Housebuster, Summer Squall and Golden Pheasant - remain candidates for season championships and Horse of the Year. But by Sunday, the sport will be talking about a new generation of equine stars.

Among the starters are five of the seven 1989 Breeders' Cup race winners, five 1989 Eclipse Award titlists, two Canadian Triple Crown champions and the winners of the world's two most famous horse races - the Kentucky Derby and France's Arc de Triomphe.

On paper, the card shapes up as a bettor's fantasy, full of big, balanced fields and high-priced overlays.

Only the second of the seven races looks like a runaway. If so, that will hardly disappoint fans hoping Meadow Star, the undefeated odds-on favorite of the $1 million Juvenile Fillies, becomes another Ruffian.

Thirty minutes after the Juvenile Fillies comes possibly the best race: the $1 million Distaff and its anticipated duel between Go for Wand, the top 3-year-old filly and Horse of the Year hopeful, and Bayakoa, the nation's best older mare.

The $1 million Sprint was supposed to be the same kind of runaway expected in the Juvenile Fillies. But the season-ending leg cuts suffered by Housebuster a few weeks ago turned the leadoff race into a 14-horse free-for-all.

The 7-2 morning-line favorite is Dayjur, a speed demon European making his first start on dirt and his first trip around a turn. Among the horses who could benefit is 1989 Sprint winner Dancing Spree, who has not won a speed event since May.

Like the Sprint, the $1 million Mile and $2 million Turf are handicapping puzzles.

Steinlen, the 1989 Mile winner and Eclipse champion grass horse, may end up the sentimental favorite, but the race sets up better for one of several Europeans in the field.

The Turf favorite is Arc de Triomphe winner Saumarez, who could provoke a multi-national celebration. The 3-year-old races in France, was bred in England and belongs to American Bruce McNall, owner of the NHL's Los Angeles Kings, and his star center, Canadian Wayne Gretzky.

A different mystery will be solved in the $1 million Juvenile for 2- year-old colts and geldings. Racing was left without an early favorite for the 1991 Kentucky Derby when Eastern Echo was retired. The 1 1-16- mile dirt stake, on paper a tossup between New Yorker Fly So Free and Californian Best Pal, will finally provide a winter book favorite.

This year's Derby winner, Unbridled, hopes to put himself back on top of the list of candidates for the 3-year-old championship and Horse of the Year title by winning the $3 million Classic.

However, he drew the extreme outside post in the 14-horse field and is assigned the difficult task of starting the 1 1/4-mile race in the middle of Belmont's clubhouse turn. He was 8-1 on the morning line - same price as Canadian Triple Crown winner Izvestia, Belmont winner Go and Go and little known California shipper Lively One.

The program choice at 4-1 was Woodward winner Dispersal, a former sprinter. But 1989 2-year-old champion Rhythm may well become the favorite. A victory by Rhythm probably would enable him to move past Housebuster, ailing Preakness victor Summer Squall and Unbridled to take the 3-year-old Eclipse Award.

The Cup will be televised by NBC between 1:30 and 6 p.m. EDT, but the first race is scheduled to go to post at 1:55 p.m. The Classic is set for 5:30 p.m.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 26) UPI - Former Washington defensive end Dexter Manley, banned from the NFL for violating the league's substance abuse policy last November, applied for reinstatment, his attorney said Friday.

''I sent a letter to the commissioner (Paul Tagliabue), explaining ... the way Dexter has been conducting himself and the positive life he's been leading,'' said Manley's attorney, Bob Woolf.

''He's cooperated with the NFL totally. He's an excellent candidate for reinstatement.''

Manley, 32, was banned from the NFL for life Nov. 18, 1989, with the option to seek reinstatement after one year. Manley has admitted addiction to alcohol and cocaine. He currently is in a Houston rehabilitation program run by former NBA star John Lucas. Also, Manley has undergone intensive tutoring to overcome illiteracy.

The league refused to confirm or deny that it has received an application for reinstatement on Manley's behalf and said it would have no comment on the matter until after Nov. 18.

Should Manley be allowed back into the NFL, the Redskins would then have to decide whether to place him on the roster or put him on waivers. Manley still has six weeks left on his contract, which was frozen at the time of his suspension.

Reportedly, Redskins management is reluctant to have Manley back because of what it terms the disruption it would cause the team.

''(Manley's) first preference would be to play for the Redskins,'' said Woolf.

Just this week, Coach Joe Gibbs gave lengthy praise to nearly every one of his defensive linemen.

If the Redskins decline to put Manley on their roster, Woolf said he was confident some NFL team would offer a contract to Washington's all- time sack leader. Woolf said Manley has been working out rigorously and was in excellent shape.

During a recent appearance on the ABC-TV news program ''Primetime Live,'' Manley said he has been routinely tested for illegal narcotics and has been drug-free for 10 months.

NEW YORK (OCT. 26) UPI - Melamine Chemicals Inc., based in Donaldsonville, La., tops the list of the ''200 best small companies'' as ranked by Forbes magazine in its Nov. 12 issue.

Melamine, which topped the list two years ago, regained the lead over 4,300 corporations with sales of $5 million to $350 million in the last 12 months.

The 200 companies that made it to the Forbes list were ranked according to their return-on-equity performance over the past five years.

Cableton Systems Corp., a manufacturer of computer network equipment, based in Ganic, N.H., ranked second, followed by a successful maker of computer software, BMC Software Inc., of Sugar Land, Texas.

Forbes' standards for a special honor roll were fairly high, because the companies were expected to average at least 17.2 percent return on equity over the past five years.

Ranked No. 4 is Franklin Resources Inc., a fund management firm based in San Mateo, Calif., which also made it to the honor roll list. Franklin Resources has been ranked among the best small companies for the past seven years.

Forbes said a hypothetical portfolio made by investing $10,000 in each of these 15 honor roll stocks in October 1985 would now be worth $439,744. Excluding dividends, $150,000 invested in the Standard & Poor's 500 would be worth only $240,614.

However, the stock of small companies remains more vulnerable in times of crisis, and since the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait by Iraq, the ''200 best'' have dropped by 25 percent, the same as over-the-counter stocks, while the S&P which includes the larger corporations, dropped by only 15.6 percent.

#90299u1998 10/26/1990 ~United Press International

NEW YORK (OCT. 26) UPI - Renewed war fears and hopes of congressional action on the budget left the Treasury bond market almost unchanged for the week Friday.

Bond investors started the week on an optimistic note as news reports said a negotiated settlement to the Persian Gulf crisis was in the wind. But as the week wore on, the talk changed to a bigger U.S. military buildup and a possible offensive.

Meanwhile, the White House and Congress seemed to have put together at least the sketchy outlines of a tax-and-spending agreement that could clear the way for the Federal Reserve to bring short-term interest rates lower.

Fighting in the Persian Gulf would likely send bond prices plummeting on expectations of skyrocketing oil prices and resulting inflation. Bond prices decline when inflation, which erodes fixed bond returns, seems on the rise.

A budget agreement leading to lower interest rates, on the other hand, could boost bond prices, because a shift towards lower U.S. rates would make bonds, with guaranteed returns, look relatively more attractive.

''The market was caught between the Gulf and the budget,'' said William V. Sullivan Jr., a Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. money market analyst, and ''lost that upward and firm bias'' it had found earlier in the week.

The benchmark 30-year bond, the 8 3/4 of 2020, closed at 99 24/32 to yield 8.77 percent, compared with 99 29/32 and 8.76 percent a week earlier. That made for a loss of about 1/8 point, or $1.25 on a $1,000 Treasury bond.

Analyst Susan Hering said in Salomon Brothers' credit market newsletter that although the budget package will not break the upward momentum of the budget deficit, it should trigger a Fed easing.

The Fed, she said, ''appears to be poised to meet its half of the bargain'' tacitly struck by Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan, who encouraged Congress to deliver a budget pact by holding out the prospect of lower interest rates.

If the Fed eases, it must still be seen whether the bond market responds by bringing down long-term interest rates, which the central bank does not control. Hering said long-term rates ''likely will follow suit,'' but it is important that the market respond quickly before Middle East events intervene.

Most analysts agree next week's calendar of economic indicators is likely to confirm the recession scenario - positive for bonds. But bond prices could be pressured by the Treasury's quarterly refunding operation in November, which is expected to float a new record $34 billion.

''I don't see a major rally next week,'' Sullivan said. ''Much like this week, you're going to have competing forces'' at work.

Philip Braverman, DKB Securities Corp.'s chief economist, concurred in his weekly credit market report, saying ''prices may be boosted next week by recessionary economic reports, a possible budget accord and a consequent Fed easing.'' But yields will then rise heading into the refunding.

Frequently, prices decline and yields rise on oversupply fears in the run-up to a Treasury refunding, because bond dealers want to sell off bonds they are holding so as to be able to accommodate new issues.

As seen before the last quarterly refunding, there is also some apprehension about weak participation by Japanese and other foreign buyers. But Braverman expected Japanese securities firms to actively bid, under some pressure from Tokyo financial and monetary officials.

Ten-year Treasury notes ended at 100 24/32 to yield 8.63 percent, compared with 100 27/32 and 8.62 percent the week before. Five-year notes ended at 101 2/32 to yield 8.22 percent, vs. 100 31/32 and 8.25.

NEW YORK (OCT. 26) UPI - Stocks suffered a setback this week as investors' focus turned to the Mideast crisis and the shaky banking system since progress had been made toward a budget accord.

The Dow Jones industrial average sank 48.02 Friday to end the week at 2436.14. It lost 84.65 for the week, or 3.36 percent.

Among broader market indexes, Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 7.77 to end the week at 304.71 and the New York Stock Exchange composite index lost 3.69 to end the week at 166.71.

Declines thumped advances 1,079-809 among the 2,160 NYSE issues traded this week. Weekly Big Board volume totaled 719,883,860 shares, compared with 901,650,030 a week earlier and 875,051,080 shares a year ago.

House and Senate negotiators grasped at a tax and spending agreement that remained just out of reach Friday as black lawmakers threatened to vote against the package to protest the defeat of civil rights legislation.

But an accord aimed at reducing the federal budget deficit by $500 billion over the next five years, with $40 billion in savings the first year, appeared to be coalescing on several key issues.

Whatever progress was made, however, was enough to allow investors' eyes to shift back to the Mideast crisis and the wobbly banking system, both of which sent stocks down this week.

''The focus went from one set of fundamentals to another disturbing set of events,'' said Hugh Johnson, chief economist at First Albany Corp. in Albany. N.Y. ''It went from the budget negotiations, which were very trying, to the Mideast.''

Diplomatic sources said Secretary of State James Baker was expected to travel to Saudi Arabia to obtain permission for a military strike against Iraq if that option was deemed necessary, while Defense Secretary Dick Cheney confirmed the present U.S. force in the desert may be increased by 100,000 troops.

''The market rallies on conciliatory-type conversation and talk,'' said Jeff Kaminsky, head of institutional sales trading at Mabon, Nugent & Co. ''But the other side of that is when there isn't compromise in the air, as Cheney indicated, then the market sells off.''

While the market seemed to focus less on the budget, though, it was concerned that the shaky state of the banking system may prevent the economy from recovering quickly from its current slump, Johnson said.

''Even if the Federal Reserve follows any budget agreement with a rate cut - and some are concerned it may not to preserve its credibility as an inflation fighter - if the banking sector is coming apart and can't respond (to the rate cut) by increasing lending to consumers it will make it tough to revive the economy,'' he said.

The plunge in financial issues Friday came amid reports that Manufacturers Hanover indicated that it might cut its dividend later this year because of the harsh economic environment.

Chemical Banking and Chase Manhattan have already cut their payouts, and Citicorp said Friday it was putting off pay raises for some 45,000 executives until the middle of next year as part of an austerity drive that also could entail staff cuts.

''We've got the Mideast, a weak economy, a recalcitrant Fed, and a banking system that's been weakened - that's not the kind of configuration that makes for good markets,'' Johnson concluded.

And from a technical standpoint, all this week's action did was make last week's 120-point rally in the Dow ''look like exactly what it was - a technical bounce, just a rally in a bear market,'' said Sidney Dorr, vice president of institutional trading at Charles Schwab & Co. in San Francisco.

On the trading floor this week, Citicorp was the most active issue, sinking 2 1/8 to 11 1/8 to the lowest levels it has seen in more than 8 years.

Unisys followed, plunging 1 1/2 to 2 1/4. The company Thursday reported a $357 million loss for the third quarter, warned of a possible fourth- quarter loss and said it would cut 5,000 more jobs.

Chase Manhattan was third, down 1 1/4 to 11.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T fell 1/8 to 33 3/8, General Electric sank 5 to 50 1/2 amid concerns about its financial service unit, Philip Morris lost 1 3/4 to 46 5/8, and Coca-Cola slid 1 1/2 to 44 1/4.

On the American Stock Exchange, the Amex Market Value index lost 2.32 to close Friday at 291.39. Declines led advances 420-345 among the 973 issues traded.

Amex volume totaled 52,916,215 shares, compared with 56,890,405 traded a week earlier and 59,647,355 traded in the same week a year ago.

Continental Air led the Amex actives, collapsing 2 1/8 to 3 3/4 as the company denied reports that it might file for bankruptcy in the face of a surge in fuel prices.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index fell 3.01 to end the week at 334.36.

NEW YORK (OCT. 26) UPI - A judge Friday once again refused to interrupt an ongoing rape trial and allow a black activist lawyer to take over the defense of one of the youths accused in the attack on a woman jogger in Central Park.

''You have a constitutional right to a lawyer of your choice. But you have no absolute right to discharge your attorney in the middle of a trial,'' said Justice Thomas Galligan at state Supreme Court in Manhattan.

Lawyer C. Vernon Mason sought to replace Howard Diller as defense lawyer for Kevin Richardson, 16, who is on trial with co-defendant Kharey Wise, 18.

Both youths are accused of gang-raping and beating a woman jogger and attacking others in the moonlit park on April 19, 1989.

Diller was hired by the family at the time of Richardson's arrest and has represented him ever since, including during a lengthy pre-trial hearing.

Mason, who is awaiting a verdict in one Brooklyn murder trial and has begun picking the jury for another, said he would take the Richardson case only if Galligan declared a mistrial and allowed him to pick a new jury.

Assistant District Attorney Elizabeth Lederer told Galligan that allowing Mason into the case could create a conflict of interest since he is handling the appeal of another youth already convicted of the gang rape, Antron McCray, 16.

In their videotaped confessions, Richardson implicates McCray in the rape and McCray implicates Richardson.

Mason vowed to file a complaint against Galligan with the State Commission on Judicial Conduct and seek to halt the trial by filing a writ of mandamus with the Appellate Division of state Supreme Court, First Department.

At the appellate division, a disciplinary committee is investigating Mason for his role as an advisor to Tawana Brawley. The black teen claimed she was raped by six white men but a grand jury determined her story was a hoax.

The trial was slated to resume at 10 a.m. Monday.

In testimony at the trial Friday, a bicyclist identified Richardson's jacket as the same garment worn by a member of a teen gang that tried to attack him.

''That's the jacket,'' testified Gerald Malone, an advertising executive who was riding through the moonlit park with his fiancee, Patricia Dean, on a bicycle built for two on April 19, 1989.

Malone, 35, made the statement after looking at a police photograph of the jacket Richardson, 16, was wearing when he was apprehended in the park that night.

Malone, who has since married Dean and moved to San Francisco, said a youth wearing the same jacket was in a gang that blocked the roadway and grabbed at Dean as they sped by on the tandem bike.

Assistant District Attorney Elizabeth Lederer asked the hulky Malone at what point during the incident he noticed the jacket.

''Almost immediately. That white logo was there. He was crouching. Then he pulled the jacket up over his head,'' Malone testified at the trial in state Supreme Court in Manhattan.

Richardson and co-defendant, Kharey Wise, 18, are on trial on 13 criminal counts stemming from the one-hour random crime spree.

They are accused of being part of a gang of up to 30 youths that rampaged through the park, beating and robbing joggers and bicyclists and gang-raping a woman jogger.

During the trial Friday, Howard Diller continued as Richardson's defense lawyer despite the family's contention that he has been fired and replaced by black activist lawyer C. Vernon Mason.

Mason, who is awaiting a jury verdict in the murder trial of another client in Brooklyn, was expected to show up in the Manhattan courtroom either Friday or Monday to ask for permission to take over Richardson's defense.

On Thursday, Justice Thomas Galligan Thursday turned down Diller's request to step down because he had been fired by Richardson's mother, Grace Cuffee, who hired Mason. Diller told the judge that Richardson's family is refusing to cooperate with him to help in the youth's defense.

However, Galligan told Diller that the trial was under way and ''as far as the court is concerned, you are the attorney for the defendant and you will continue as attorney for the defendant.''

Altogether, six youths were indicted in the ''wilding'' rampage. Three of them were convicted last summer of raping and beating the woman jogger and assaulting two male joggers. The three - McCray, Yusef Salaam, 16, and Raymond Santana, 16 - were sentenced to 5 to 10 years in a juvenile jail.

The final youth, Steve Lopez, 16, is slated to be tried alone next year.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 26) UPI - The House, breaking a 13-year stalemate, approved a landmark clean air bill Friday that will require virtually every major industry to reduce emissions causing urban smog, acid rain, toxic hazards or ozone depletion.

The legislation, passed on a 401-25 vote, is the first effort by Congress since 1977 to strengthen the federal Clean Air Act to address worsening air pollution that health experts say is killing or crippling tens of thousands of Americans each year with lung disease, cancer and birth defects.

''In passing this bill, Congress is adopting the most effective, comprehensive air pollution control program in the world,'' said Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif.

''We're putting the United States back where it always was and always should be - leading all countries in promoting policies that protect the health of our citizens and the future of our planet.''

But Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., and a handful of other opponents said lawmakers would regret burdening American industry with expensive new pollution controls.

''This legislation sounds good, but it's bad for the economy,'' he said. ''Let's junk this bill.''

The Senate was expected to pass the bill later Friday and White House officials have indicated President Bush will sign it into law, despite warnings from industry and several prominent economists that it will cost thousands of jobs and accelerate the nation's economic downturn.

Bush - the self-proclaimed ''environmental president'' - triggered congressional action by proposing a wide-ranging clean air plan in July 1989 that he said ''balanced'' costs and benefits.

His initiative was a major change from President Reagan, who steadfastly opposed clean air legislation throughout the 1980s, aggravating congressional gridlock.

The bill passed by the House emerged from 15 months of torturous deliberations marked by intense regional conflicts - especially over acid rain - and a titanic lobbying war between industry and environmental groups over how far and fast the nation should go in reducing pollution.

Among other objectives, the bill seeks by the turn of the century to:

-Clear the skies in most of the 96 cities where smog now exceeds federal health limits. Los Angeles, the nation's smoggiest city, and eight others would have until 2010 at the latest. To achieve those goals, the bill tightens pollution controls on factories and smaller facilities such as gasoline stations and print shops. It also requires automakers to reduce smog-forming and carbon monoxide emissions from cars and the oil industry to sell cleaner-burning ''reformulated'' gasoline in the dirtiest cities.

-Halve sulfur dioxide emissions from 111 coal-burning power plants in the Midwest, Southeast and Appalachia that have been identified as the major cause of acid rain damaging lakes, streams, forests and buildings in the Northeast and Canada.

-Achieve a 75 percent cut in 189 toxic or cancer-causing chemicals now routinely emitted by 250 different industrial sectors, ranging from large chemical plants and steel mills to corner dry cleaners and bakeries in badly polluted cities. Garbage and hospital incinerators also would be covered.

-Eliminate chlorofluorocarbons and three other widely used industrial substances that erode the Earth's protective ozone layer.

The bill's price tag is expected to be at least $25 billion a year by 2005, almost doubling the $32 billion now spent annually by industry to prevent air pollution. Industry lobbyists maintain the bill will cost $51 billion a year.

For the average American household, the legislation will mean by 1995 at least $100 a year in higher utility bills, gasoline prices, car costs and other pass-throughs to consumers of increased pollution control expenditures.

It also will throw thousands of Americans out work, with the biggest hit likely in the high-sulfur coal mines of Appalachia, which will see reduced demand from utilities facing acid rain cuts. Expensive toxic air pollution controls could force the shutdown of many aging steel and chemical plants.

In a first for environmental legislation, the bill includes a five- year, $250 million program to provide extended unemployment compensation benefits to workers who lose their jobs due to pollution reduction.

Bush initially threatened to veto the clean air bill over the worker- aid program, charging it set a bad precedent for future environmental legislation and could greatly increase the government's jobless aid spending. However, he appeared mollified by last-minute changes reducing the program's cost.

Bush is the author of another major innovation in the bill - a complex emission ''allowance'' trading system designed to ease the cost of acid rain cleanup and ensure pollution does not grow after 2000. The plan is seen as a test for other ''market-based'' concepts intended to give industry economic incentives for reducing pollution.

Automakers and the oil industry, two of the most powerful lobbies on Capitol Hill, persuaded lawmakers to kill another Bush idea to require production of millions of cars that can run on cleaner-burning alternative fuels such as natural gas and wood alcohol. However, farm lobbyists succeeded in inserting requirements for grain alcohol additives in reformulated gasoline.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 26) UPI - Congress pushed for final approval of several major bills Friday, including landmark environmental and defense measures, while awaiting agreement on a budget plan that could clear the way for adjournment.

The House, resolving a 13-year stalemate, approved a clean air bill that will require virtually every major industry to reduce emissions that cause urban smog, acid rain, toxic hazards or ozone depletion.

The bill, passed on a 401-25 vote and sent to the Senate, is the first effort by Congress since 1977 to strengthen the federal Clean Air Act to address the nation's worsening air pollution.

The Senate gave final approval to a $268.2 billion ''new strategy'' military spending bill to meet the post-Cold War challenges to the United States.

The bill, which imposes the largest single-year cut in defense spending since the Vietnam war, was passed 80-17. The House gave approved it earlier in the week.

As the two chambers worked their way through a long list of bills, budget negotiators continued their effort to pin down a budget agreement.

A revolt against the budget plan developed among members of the Black Caucus, who said they would vote against the plan in retaliation for President Bush's veto of the civil rights bill, which was narrowly sustained by the Senate.

''We're all prepared to accept the consequences of our act,'' said Rep. Ron Dellums, D-Calif., caucus chairman. ''We should stay here as long as necessary until we undo this (veto) madness.''

There was speculation that if business was not completed by Sunday, the lawmakers would take the day off in order to avoid being at the Capitol during a planned march by the Ku Klux Klan.

Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., protested the plan, saying members of Congress should ''take an hour break, go out on the street and tell this scum what we think of them ... tell these haters that they are not welcome in this beautiful federal capital.''

The House passed and sent to the Senate for final action a two-year $1.14 billion authorization for homeless assistance programs. The bill includes funding for emergency shelter grants, housing rehabilitation, rental assistance, health programs, job training and education for the homeless.

Another measure sent to the Senate would ease restrictions on the export of U.S. high-technology products, such as computer-related equipment, that have national security value. Some members warned the bill faces a veto threat because it also directs the president to restrict exports to countries that attempt to develop chemical weapons.

The House also passed a bill to crack down on money laundering, including provision for tougher penalties against banks and bank officers who are convicted of money laundering schemes.

As the session crawled toward a close, Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell and House Speaker Thomas Foley said Congress had compiled a significant record of accomplishment, particularly if the deficit-cutting package is enacted.

Among the highlights they cited for reporters were the increased minimum wage benefits, civil rights for the disabled, oil spill and clean air legislation, housing and the five-year farm program.

Mitchell, of Maine, said the ''great dissapointments'' were Bush's veto of the civil rights and family leave bills and added that his ''principle dissapointment'' was failure to approve a campaign finance reform package.

Foley, D-Wash., said Congress ''has an extraordinary record. It is one of the most positive and strongest in recent years.''

Before adjournment, Mitchell said he expected passage of the clean air, child care, immigration bills and still held out the faintest of hopes for an anti-crime measure.

''If all those are enacted, I think we are justified in characterizing this as a highly succesfull Congress,'' Mitchell told a group of reporters.

Mitchell said in the budget agreement Congress will ''have dealt with problems accumulated over a decade and for five years. He acknowledged ''there is a lot to criticize'' in the lengthy process leading to the budget agreement but added it ''will be seen as a positive ''e seen as a pos

The Senate Democratic leader accused Bush of creating the protracted process on the budget, insisting that Congress, acting alone, would have finished weeks ago.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (OCT. 26) UPI - The Ohio Supreme Court reinstated Friday former Cincinnati financier Marvin Warner's conviction in the 1985 Ohio savings and loan scandal but trimmed almost in half the restitution he must make to the state.

In a unanimous opinion, the high court reinstated Warner's conviction on six counts of unauthorized acts in connection with wire transfers and three counts of securities violations.

Also reinstated were the convictions of David Schiebel, former president of Warner's Home State Savings Bank, on three counts of securities violations.

Special Prosecutor Lawrence Kane said a status conference will be held Tuesday in Hamilton County to determine when Warner and Schiebel must surrender to enter prison. Kane said he will oppose any delays or any bond.

''I am extremely gratified by today's decision, which is a tremendous victory in our fight on behalf of Ohio's taxpayers,'' said state Attorney General Anthony Celebrezze Jr., who was responsible for recovering the state's losses and for prosecuting the case.

Warner's secretary said from his home in Ocala, Fla., that he would have no comment on the court decision.

The convictions, obtained two years after the collapse of Home State - which triggered a run on state-chartered, privately insured thrifts - were overturned in 1989 by the Hamilton County Court of Appeals.

Warner was sentenced to 3 1/2 years in prison and ordered to pay $22 million in restitution and $250,000 in court costs. The $22 million figure was cut to $12.2 million by the Supreme Court, with the remainder still subject to discussion in lower court.

Schiebel was sentenced to six months in prison and five years probation and ordered to pay $25,000 in costs.

Home State lost $144 million in investments in ESM Government Securities, a Fort Lauderdale, Fla.-based firm that went bankrupt. After Home State's collapse, Gov. Richard Celeste closed 69 other Ohio savings and loans. Some were sold or consolidated, but most reopened within three months.

No depositors lost money. The state has spent at least $5.7 million investigating and prosecuting Warner, Schiebel and other Home State officialsbut has recovered $134 million, compared with the $129 million invested in reopening the thrifts.

Warner's attorneys, in obtaining reversal of the convictions, argued that Warner had no knowledge he was unauthorized to make the questionable money transfers.

They also contended that one of the jurors ''hated'' Warner and another had a relative with money in the state S&Ls when the collapse took place. They further argued that jury instructions were changed at the last minute and that wire transfers were not covered by state law.

State prosecutors complained that the convictions were overturned on technical procedural issues, not on the merits of the guilt of innocence of Warner or Schiebel.

Warner ''was involved in almost ever facet of the internal operations of the bank,'' said Justice Robert Holmes in writing the court's opinion. ''He was kept informed of all policy decisions by the board of directors. Warner's actions were shown to be calculated and deceitful. Therefore, any claim that Warner committed the act without the requisite knowledge is unsupported.''

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 26) UPI - Charles H. Keating Jr.'s lawyer indicated Friday the savings and loan scandal figure would be willing to accept a limited grant of immunity in exchange for his testimony against five senators under investigation by the Senate Ethics Committee.

That disclosure came following a pre-trial hearing in Keating's securities fraud case in Superior Court, when his attorney, Steven Neal, was asked about reports that the committee is considering the limited immunity grant for Keating, 66, the former head of the now-defunct Irvine-based Lincoln Savings and Loan Association.

''Mr. Keating is not the cause of the S&L crisis in America or the problems at Lincoln Savings and Loan,'' Neal said. ''He did not cheat or defraud any bond holders and he is not responsible for any ills on Capitol Hill, including those concerns about methods of campaign financing.

''Mr. Keating has a wealth of information and insight about those issues. If I were an appointed or elected official who was interested into getting to the bottom of these issues, ... I would be thinking long and hard for a way for Mr. Keating to share those insights that he has.

''Anyone interested in the issues pertaining to the senators who are the subject of the Senate Ethics Committee inquiry ought to doing everything they can to make it possible for Mr. Keating to appear before them.''

Asked specifically Keating would be open to a limited grant of immunity, Neal responded: ''I would certainly receive or return any phone call.''

The Los Angeles Times, quoting anonymous sources on the Senate committee, reported Thursday that the committee is considering granting Keating the limited grant of immunity in exchange for testimony about his ties to the five senators under investigation.

Those senators, dubbed the ''Keating Five,'' are Alan Cranston, D- Calif., Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., John Glenn, D-Ohio, and John McCain, R-Ariz.

The five, who received a total of $1.3 million in contributions from Keating for their campaigns and other causes, tried to help the Paradise Valley, Ariz. resident solve his problems with federal thrift regulators.

Public congressional hearings into the allegations against the senators begin Nov. 15.

If Keating were granted limited immunity, it might seriously jeopardize an ongoing federal grand jury criminal investigation of him in Los Angeles, the Times, quoting committee sources, reported.

That probe is reportedly a much wider-ranging investigation than the indictment returned against him and three associates in state Superior Court last month.

It was not clear what effect, if any, a grant of immunity would have on that indictment.

Keating and his co-defendants are charged with defrauding 23,000 investors, most of them elderly, out of $250 million in the sale of now- worthless junk bonds.

The indictment charges the four defendants with 42 state securities fraud counts for allegedly scheming to sell junk bonds issued by Lincoln's parent company, American Continental Corp., without telling investors that the bonds were high-risk and uninsured. Authorities say many of the victims lost their life savings.

At Friday's pre-trial hearing, Superior Court Judge Lance Ito denied a request by defense attorneys to keep sealed the 45-volume transcripts of testimony taken before the special grand jury that returned the indictments against the defendants Sept. 18.

Defense attorneys argued that the release of the transcripts would intensify the ''lynch-mob mentality'' surrounding the case and would endanger the defendants' right to a fair trial by further prejudicing potential jurors.

SAN DIEGO (OCT. 26) UPI - Rancho Bernardo Savings Bank was seized by the Office of Thrift Supervision Friday, 10 months after federal regulators clamped down on the troubled San Diego thrift.

OTS officials, in a prepared statement from Washington, D.C., said the thrift was now nearly $500,000 in the red and blamed the institution's insolvency on ''poor management, a lack of internal controls and extensive losses.''

Under receivership, a new institution named Rancho Bernardo Federal Savings Bank was chartered and the thrift and its three branches remained open for business.

OTS spokesman Marc Adams said the new institution would take over the 8-year-old thrift's assets and debts while continuing day-to-day operations.

As of Sept. 30, the thrift had assets of $119.23 million, debts of $118.18 million and a ''tangible capital'' of negative $484,000.

Much of Rancho Bernardo's financial problems were blamed on the performance of RBCC, a wholly-owned that suffered a $3 million loss over the 12-month period ending June 30.

''Management had relied heavily on the earnings from the subsidiary, and had no viable alternative strategy for returning the institution to profitable operation,'' the OTS statement said.

Additionally, the bank failed to provide enough loan-loss reserves to cover non-traditional assets, such as commercial mortgages, construction loans and direct real estate investments. Those assets accounted for 58 percent of the bank's total assets.

Bank Chairman and Chief Executive Officer H.M. Darmstadler could not be reached for comment on the bank's failure.

The federal Resolution Trust Corporation now determines how much it will cost to restore the bank's fiscal strength.

As of Sept. 10, Adams said, 234 thrifts had been placed into receivership nationwide. Within the next 18 to 24 months, another 250 to 300 thrifts are expected to be taken over by federal regulators, Adams said.

HONOLULU (OCT. 26) UPI - Nansay International Inc. of Tokyo and ITT Sheraton Corp. announced Friday they have joined forces in a $1 billion venture to buy and operate hotels in the United States, the Pacific and in Asia.

Sheraton will manage three hotels that Nansay is developing in the Kohanaiki resort on the island of Hawaii. Work is also under way on hotels in Saipan, Guam, and in Los Angeles, the companies said.

Sheraton chairman and president John Kapioltas said the joint venture was a ''logical partnership'' of development and management experience.

Under the arrangement, Nansay will primarily be responsible for financing and project development, while Sheraton will manage hotel operations and determine opportunities for additional projects.

''The function of the joint venture is to handle all aspects of property development - from the time of acquisition to construction, property management, and marketing,'' the annoucement said.

The first partnership - Sheraton-Nansay Hotel Venture Corp. - will establish the framework for a second joint venture in which each company will put in $100 million and leverage that into $1 billion to buy hotels, Kapioltas said.

In the next stage, the ownership will be shared equally between Nansay and Sheraton, and the companies were looking for hotels to buy, Kapioltas said.

The hotel industry on the mainland is depressed and investors are willing to sell in many cases, giving Sheraton opportunities to expand, he said.

Yokeno said talks have been going on since the company first hired Sheraton in late 1988 to manage its Saipan resort, and a preliminary joint venture agreement was reached in June.

Sheraton announced in late July that it was in talks with Nansay Hawaii about management contracts for the three hotels in Kona on the island of Hawaii.

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 26) UPI - Unocal Corp., which recently bought more than 8, 300 clunker cars in a move to reduce smog in the region, proposed Friday that it receive pollution ''credits'' that can be used to meet tougher air-quality requirements for its refinery.

Unocal executive Roger Beach made the proposal to the South Coast Air Quality Management District, the rule-making agency for the counties of Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside and San Bernardino Counties.

The agency is expected to tighten rules for refineries in December when it updates its far-ranging air-quality plan, issued last year.

''The air we breathe is indifferent to its pollution source, and the health of everyone in the Los Angeles Basin would benefit most from the fastest cleanup '' said Beach, president of Unocal Refining & Marketing Division.

Beach then said that regulators should allow the private sector to implement ''innovative offsets'' in their efforts to clean the air in the Los Angeles Basin. Such offsets could then be applied toward meeting emissions requirements of other parts of its business.

Unocal's refinery in the Wilmington area handles 108,000 barrels of crude a day. The company said that the hydrocarbon emissions from the refinery are in the 1 to 2 ton per-day range.

''As long as the emissions are real, quantifiable and enforceable,'' a company or an individual should receive credit, Beach said.

''After all, success is measured in the goals we attain, not the path taken,'' he said.

Between May and October, Unocal bought 8,376 pre-1971 cars for $700 each, with the idea of taking some of the region's worst smog-producing vehicles off the road. It said that the program removed 10.7 million pounds of pollution from the air per year.

The vehicles it bought emitted more than 65 times the hydrocarbons, 50 times the carbon monoxide and 10 times the nitrogen oxides of a typical 1990 automobile.

Unocal spokesman Barry Lane said that the company estimates that the costs of cutting hydrocarbon emissions from the refinery - one of three Unocal operates on the West Coast - would be $161,000 per ton, compared to $7,600 per ton from the car-buying program.

But Bill Kelly, a spokesman for the air quality district said, that it is difficult to quantify how much pollution is reduced by buying a pre-1971 car.

''It is hard for us to determine how much that car would have been driven,'' Kelly said.

However, Kelly said that such programs as Unocal's could have promise as a means of creating credits if a business needed to expand operations.

ANCHORAGE, AK (OCT. 26) UPI - Drug czar William Bennett wrapped up his nonstop two-day anti-marijuana campaign in Alaska's two biggest cities Friday, beseeching Alaskans to outlaw cannabis in the Last Frontier where the drug is legal.

Although Americans have paid little attention to the fact that pot has been legal in Alaska for 15 years, Bennett predicted that the state would become a mecca for drug users unless Alaskans approve a Nov. 6 ballot measure making marijuana possession a crime punishable by up to 90 days in jail.

Bennett took President Bush's war on drugs to the northern front Thursday and Friday, speaking in Anchorage and Fairbanks to occasionally receptive, usually polite, but sometimes hostile audiences who criticized Bennett for meddling and essentially told him to mind his own business.

Sensitive to criticism of interfering in the affairs of a fiercely individualistic state, Bennett repeatedly said he didn't intend to tell Alaskans how to vote. However, over and over Bennett warned of dire consequences unless Alaska ended its 15-year-old status as the only state which permits adults to possess small amounts of marijuana.

''Alaska is unique in many ways. It is also part of the greater United States '' Bennett said, in urging Alaska to conform its marijuana laws.

''I didn't come here to tell Alaskans what to do. I came here to tell them what I think,'' Bennett said again and again.

And what Bennett thinks was of no surprise to anyone - that Alaska should join the drug war by outlawing marijuana.

''Proposition 2 on your ballot offers Alaskans a chance to join that fight in earnest and I urge Alaskans to vote yes,'' Bennett said.

''I fear that if Alaskans do not vote yes on Proposition 2, this will be interpreted as a signal to those in the drug world, in the drug culture, that this is a congenial place for drugs,'' Bennett said.

Even with the Persian Gulf crisis commanding so much attention, Bennett said the drug war remains the Bush administration's No. 1 priority. He said most Americans support the drug war and Alaska was ''certainly one front in this war on drugs.''

''One thing I've learned in this job in the last 18 months is that what happens in one state affects the others. And as the rest of the United States cracks down on drugs, and believe me it is happening, there will be a movement on the part of people interested in the drug culture ... to come to Alaska,'' he said.

''People in the drug business may be wicked, they may be imperfect, they may just be mean, they may actually be evil, but they're often not stupid. When they try to figure out where to go, they look around and say, 'Who doesn't care? Who's soft on drugs? Who thinks they're perfectly alright? ... And that's where they go,'' Bennett said.

Marijuana was legalized in Alaska after the state Supreme Court ruled in 1975 that the privacy clause of the Alaska constitution protected the personal use of the drug at home. A unanimous court said private pot use posed no serious harm to society or users. Legislators later set an upper limit of 4 ounces as legal to grow or possess. Possession of more, or sale, or possession of any amount by minors, is illegal. No other drugs are legal to possess in Alaska.

A group called Alaskans for Privacy was formed to fight making marijuana a crime by stressing the privacy clause of the constitution as the basis for letting adults choose their own lifestyle as long as it harms no one else.

During Bennett's visit, the privacy group ran radio ads that urged, ''Just say no to drug czar William Bennett.''

Separate pro-marijuana advocates dogged Bennett on his trip, quizzing him, heckling him, ridiculing him and staging shouting sign-carrying protests.

Bennett rejected the arguments of both sets of Proposition 2 opponents, arguing that outlawing marijuana was no threat to Alaskans' privacy and that pot was always harmful and was more potent now than when Alaska legalized it.

As he headed for the airport, ending a 24-hour anti-marijuana blitzkrieg in bringing his drug war to Alaska for the first time, Bennett said, ''I spoke my mind. Now it's up to Alaskans to make up theirs.''

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 29) UPI - Pathe Communications, on the verge of becoming a major player in Hollywood, announced late Friday it has put off its long-awaited $1.3 billion buyout of MGM/UA until next week.

The announcement is likely to once again give rise to concernss, widely expressed throughout the industry since the deal was announced in March, that Pathe may not have the financial resources to complete its purchase of the venerable studio.

Pathe, which made major licensing deals with Time Warner and Turner Broadcasting System this week to help fund its acqusition, had said that it expected to close the deal Friday.

A brief announcement Friday from MGM/UA, which approved the deal earlier this week, said that the closing of the buyout had been postponed until Tuesday ''in order to complete the transfer of funds necessary to consummate the merger and to permit the finalization of closing documents.''

A Pathe spokesman said: ''We are confident the funds will be in place and the merger will close by Tuesday.''

No further details were released in the announcement.

Pathe, which is controlled by financier Giancarlo Parretti, has already made $353 million in down payments and MGM/UA stockholders have received a payout of $253 million from those funds.

The deal calls for Pathe to pay $600 million in equity and $700 million in the licensing deals and other transactions for MGM/UA, which is controlled by financier Kirk Kerkorian.

Pathe has not yet disclosed the source of much of its financing, but its spokesman has said it will do so in filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

MGM/UA's key assets consist of its name, the famed ''Leo the Lion'' logo, its 1,070-film United Artists library, its distribution arm and its production facilities.

The company produces several TV shows, including ''thirtysomething,'' but its movie production has slowed to a trickle over the last two years while it has been for sale.

NAGS HEAD, NC (OCT. 26) UPI - Hurricane-force winds ripped a dredge from its mooring Friday, slamming the vessel into the Herbert C. Bonner bridge and tearing a 300-foot section from the only land link between Hatteras Island and the mainland.

Gusts of 90 mph blew the 200-foot-long dredge into the 2.5 mile bridge, which spans Oregon Inlet. Telephone and electrical service were knocked out to the 5,000 residents of the Hatteras Island communities of Buxton, Rodanthe and Salvo.

State and Dare County police cars were on the bridge when the 130- foot-high dredge struck the bridge. Four crewmen climbed off the dredge and into the police cars, which sped off the span before the bridge section collapsed at 2:21 a.m. No injuries were reported.

''The whole bridge was shaking and rocking to and fro,'' said Sgt. A.C. Joyner a highway patrol officer. ''It kind of bowed up in the middle and moved west. Then the whole thing just went out of sight.''

Gov. Jim Martin flew in to survey the damage and told local officials he will seek federal disaster funds. North Carolina transportation officials, who estimated repairs could take up to six months, worked to establish emergency ferry service to the island along North Carolina's Outer Banks.

''The people on Hatteras Island are isolated,'' said emergency management spokeswoman Gwen White. ''There's ocean overwash in Buxton and Rodanthe, but we do not perceive there is any danger to anyone.''

Sheriff's deputies and emergency medical personnel braved choppy waters for a boat ride to the island, but reported no major problems, White said.

Emergency officials used ham radios to stay in contact with the island's residents.

''When you live in this part of the country, you're accustomed somewhat to isolation,'' White said. ''Our concern is to get generators down there to get power returned.''

But heavy rain and winds hammered the coast early Friday, hindering the National Guard's effort to get generators to the island and the transportation department's plans to establish ferry runs.

KANEOHE MARINE CORPS AIR STATION, HI (OCT. 26) UPI - A Marine who refused to board a plane for Saudi Arabia lost his bid Friday for conscientious objector status.

Marine Corps officials said the Marine Corps Commandant in Washington rejected Cpl. Jeff Paterson's request on the grounds that, among other things, he does not oppose war in all forms.

''Corporal Paterson selectively chooses the wars he opposes,'' the ruling, signed by J.J. Sheehan, Marine Corps Personnel Director, said.

''He made it quite clear that he could support (albeit in a non- combat role) other groups such as the (Nicaraguan) sandanistas and (South Africa's) ANC (African National Congress) - organizations that engage in violence to achieve their goals,'' Sheehan said.

Paterson, 22, of Hollister, Calif., sat on a runway at Hickam Air Force Base as his unit was deployed to Saudi Arabia Aug. 29.

He has said he had no political opinions when he joined the Marines four years ago but now opposes U.S. policy in the Third World and refuses to be ''a pawn in America's power plays for profits and oil in the Middle East.''

Sheehan said Paterson asserted sincere beliefs but that they were political in nature and he ''was unable to articulate a moral or ethical underpinning for his beliefs.'' Opposition to U.S. foreign policy alone is not a recognized basis for conscientious objector status, he said.

''Corporal Paterson's opposition to war was not gained through training, study contemplation, or other activities comparable in rigor and dedication to the processes by which religious convictions are formulated,'' Sheehan said.

Sheehan also noted that Paterson's objection to war crystalized only as he prepared for deployment to the Middle East. ''The timing of this crystallization impugns the sincerity, depth, and convictions of his beliefs '' he said, adding that Paterson indicated he was not a conscientious objector as recently as Aug. 15.

Paterson now can be assigned any normal combat duties ''including duties requiring the bearing of arms in combat,'' Sheehan said.

Paterson supporters denounced the decision, saying the military was putting on trial ''Jeff's support for the struggles of the people of El Salvador and South Africa for their liberation.''

''Their findings also challenge the Nuremburg principles, which gave military personnel the responsibility to oppose unjust wars,'' said the Committee To Defend Jeff Paterson, which vowed to appeal the ruling in federal court.

Paterson, however, won a round Friday when a military judge ordered him released from confinement to Kaneohe Marine Corps Air Station, where he had been ordered to remain since his release from the brig Sept. 21 at the order of a federal court.

''He can leave camp when he is off-duty just like everyone else,'' base spokesman Capt. Leonard Ryan said.

Paterson's court martial is scheduled to begin Dec. 3. He faces five charges - one count of missing movement, two counts of disobeying orders, and two of unauthorized absence stemming from a news conference he held to announce his stand.

ABU DHABI (OCT. 29) - A new fertility center including in vitro fertilization and artificial insemination technique is being set up to aid families in this sparsely populated Gulf oil state.

The Dubai Fertility and Women's Health Center will for the first time provide local women the opportunity of the "test tube" birth without the exorbitant costs of such treatment abroad, the director of Dubai's health and medical services department Dr. Juma Belhoul said.

The United Arab Emirates and other conservative Gulf states allow artifical insemination and in vitro fertilization using only the husband's sperm.

Nationals form less than 50 percent of the UAE's 1.6 million population, and the government like those of neighboring Gulf oil states, is keen to increase the local population with a long term view of reducing dependence on imported manpower.

Officials said the new fertility and Women's Health Center will start operation next April in Dubai, about 160 kilometers (100 miles) north of Abu Dhabi.

The center is being set up in cooperation with the London Fertility Institute, whose director Dr. Ian Craft had helped set up assisted conception programs at the Royal Free and Cromwell hospitals.

Dr. Craft, visiting the UAE to discuss the final arrangements for the center, told reporters he estimated at least 200 couples in Dubai currently required fertility treatment. He said the center in the future would be able to cater to about 12,000 and 15,000 patients per year.

Dubai's Al Wasl hospital provides fertility programs for women, while test-tube baby units exist in Tawam hospital in the city of Al Ain and a private clinic in Sharjah.

WELLINGTON, OCT 27 - New Zealand's opposition National Party swept into power here Saturday night in a landslide.

In an emotional acceptance speech prime minister-elect Jim Bolger said he found the victory "quite humbling."

His speech came moments after he received a telephone call from Prime Minister Mike Moore who conceeded defeat in a strikingly friendly fashion.

"Mate, I'm just ringing you to congratulate you and Joan (Mrs.Bolger)," Mr. Moore said.

"You've got the country, you've had a tremendous result, from your point of view. I wish you well."

Television New Zealand and Radio New Zealand were reporting a swing from Labour to National of eight to 10 per cent.

This is the greatest swing since a 14 per cent swing took Labour into power in 1935.

In Auckland and Wellington there were some massive swings against the government, up to 50 per cent in the case of Wellington Central constituency.

With final results not due till late Saturday, National was looking to hold 68 seats to Labour's 28.

Although third parties appeared to poll well, particularly the new Green Party only the Labour breakway party, the New Labour Party got a seat in the 97-seat parliament.

Labour cabinet ministers tumbled out of office in a series of humiliating defeats.

Mr. Moore said the new opposition would be "as hard as nails" but added: "There is no malice, no bitterness, that's the way things go."

Speaking to a victory party in his hometown Te Kuiti, 400 kilometres (248 miles) north of here, Mr. Bolger appealed for the country, divided by the long election campaign, to reunite.

"If we hang in together, us New Zealanders wont be beaten," he said.

MADRID, (OCT 27) - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev resumed talks with Spanish Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez Saturday, focusing on European policy and the situation in the Gulf.

He also laid a wreath at the memorial for Spain's war dead.

The two leaders later planned to sign a joint political declaration and a memorandum in which Spain pledges to provide the Soviet Union with a 1.5 billion dollar loan.

During a two and one-half hour talk with Gonzalez on Friday that dealt largely with Spain's transition to democracy from the dictatorship under General Francisco Franco, Gorbachev said his country could learn from Spain's example.

Gonzalez pointed out that Spain did not receive foreign loans until it had achieved political stability.

Gorbachev will end his three-day visit on Sunday with a trip to Barcelona.

BRUSSELS, (OCT 27) - Belgian Premier Wilfried Martens announced here Saturday that 500 paratroopers sent to civil war-torn Rwanda will be withdrawn on November 1 but that Brussels would continue to support African efforts to uphold a ceasefire.

The elite forces had been sent to the African country's capital of Kigali to protect Belgian citizens amid the fighting between rival Hutu and Tutsi tribal forces.

Martens' disclosure followed on an announcement in Zaire that Rwanda, Zaire, Burundi and Uganda had agreed on an African peacekeeping force being sent to Rwanda.

In addition, the leaders of the countries meeting in Gbdaolite, Zaire, agreed to send a 15-man observer team of military officers to supervise the ceasefire. The team is also to include representatives of the rival Hutus and Tutsis.

Ugandan President Yoweri Museveni, as current chairman of the Organisation of African Unity (Oau), was charged with responsibility for preparing the peacekeeping effort.

At the same time, Zaire Presidetn Mobutu sese Seko was named to try to mediate between the majority Hutus and minority Tutsis.

Martens personally led a Belgian delegation to Rwanda last week to try to establish a ceasefire in the conflict which was triggered last month when Tutsi rebels launched an attack to gain land for the some 2 million Tutsis living in exile in neighbouring Uganda.

The Belgian leader said that Brussels would provide financial and logistical support for the ceasefire effort.

Meanwhile the European Community has agreed to provide some 850,000 dollars worth of immediate food aid to help the Red Cross and other relief organisations helping the several thousand refugees who have fled the fighting.

ROME, (OCT 27) - French President Francois Mitterrand and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher arrived in Rome for the European Economic Community's summit meeting Saturday around midday.

The two leaders were to lunch together before the summit officially opened in late afternoon.

Although EEC heads of state and government will discuss the 12-nation trade bloc's failure to find a compromise solution to farm subsidies and the situation in the Gulf, their central topic of discussion are the two inter-governmental conferences scheduled for mid-December.

These inter-governmental conferences should lead to modifications of the EEC's founding Treaty of Rome to enable the trade bloc to move towards economic and monetary union and political union.

Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti, who will chair the summit as his country currently holds the EEC's six-month revolving presidency, suggested his guests should concentrate their talks on themes of "signficant interest" for the EEC's "long-term future."

Mr. Mitterrand may have to leave the summit before it ends on Sunday to meet Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev on an official visit to Paris.

WASHINGTON, (OCT 27) - Major U.S. industrial groups have threatened to lodge a formal trade protest and seek punitive action against Thailand if Bangkok does not crack down on piracy of U.S. films, music, books and computer software.

The groups, in a letter to Thai Ambassador Vitthya Vejjajiva, gave the Thai Government until November 15 to take vigorous action against the copyright pirates.

"Unless the actions we have requested ... are taken immediately, (we) will file a fvormal trade complaint under section 301 of the U.S. Trade Act," said the letter signed by the Motion Picture Export Association of America, the Recording Industry Association and the International Intellectual Property Alliance.

The letter, delivered Friday and made available to the press, said the industry groups had provided Thailand with the names and addresses of known pirates who operate "blatantly and apparently without any fear that the Thai enforcement authorities would take any action."

Calling Thailand the "worst offender of intellectual property rights in Asia," Motion Picture Association president Jack Valenti told reporters Thai pirates "steal from our member countries 10 million to 15 million dollars annually in potential revenues."

"Illegal copies of American movies are on sale throughout Thailand within days of their release in the United States and well before their legitimate release in Thailand," he said.

The three industry groups estimated in their letter that piracy of records, music tapes, videos, books and software in Thailand was costing U.S. producers more than 60 million dollars a year.

If U.S. trade officials were to formally adopt a complaint against Thailand under the 301 trade provision, it could lead to penalty duties on Thai exports to the United States.

Last year Thailand was placed on a "priority watch list" of unfair traders due to the piracy of intellectual property and subsequently lost duty concessions on 165 million dollars worth of exports to the United States.

But Thailand nevertheless maintained a 1.4 billion dollar trade surplus with the United States during that year.

WASHINGTON, (OCT 27) - U.S. Secretary of State James Baker's forthcoming visit to Saudi Arabia is aimed at stepping up pressure on Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, the New York Times said Saturday.

The paper said Baker might also visit Cairo, London and other European capitals as part of his visit planned for early November.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters Friday Baker's mission would focus on ''the implementation of United Nations sanctions, the status of U.S. and multinational forces in the Gulf, general defense needs, Arab unity and military options''.

He declined to comment on reports that Baker would seek Saudi consent on a possible military strike against Iraqi troops.

The New York Times added that Baker might also visit Israel provided that the country settled its dispute with the United Nations Security Council over an investigation of the killings in Jerusalem of over 20 Palestinians earlier this month.

Baker visited Saudi Arabia in September as part of a tour that also took him to Syria, Egypt and the United Arab Emirates.

DAMASCUS, (OCT 27) - Syrian President Hafez al-Assad met here Saturday with the foreign ministers of a three-nation Arab committee to discuss Lebanon after the fall of rebel Christian leader General Michel Aoun.

Prince Saud al-Faisal of Saudi Arabia, Sid Ahmad Ghozali of Algeria and Abdellatif Filali of Morocco arrived earlier in the Syrian capital from the western Saudi city of Jeddah.

The Arab League's special envoy to Lebanon, Lakhdar Ibrahimi, also took part in the meeting.

Sources close to the committee said they would discuss the next stages of the Arab peace plan for Lebanon, drawn up in the Saudi resort of Taif and endorsed by Lebanese MPs in October 1989.

The foreign ministers met in Jeddah on Friday to examine a "new action plan allowing the Lebanese state to extend its authority over the whole of Lebanon," a reliable source said, without giving details.

The source in Jeddah said the committee had decided to send an envoy next week to France to discuss the fate of Gen. Aoun, who has sought refuge in the French Embassy in Beirut since his ouster in a Syrian-led assault on October 13.

France has granted the general political asylum but members of the Syrian-backed government want him to stand trial on charges of embezzling public funds.

Gen. Aoun opposed the Taif plan because it failed to call for the withdrawal of the estimated 35,000 troops deployed in Lebanon.

The plan provides for political reforms in favour of Lebanese Moslems, the disarming of militias and the redeployment of Syrian troops to eastern Lebanon. Elias Hrawi was elected president under the plan in November 1989.

PRAGUE, (OCT 27) - The Warsaw Pact countries reached agreement here Saturday on arms quotas clearing the way for the signing of a Conventional Forces in Europe treaty in Paris on November 18, officals said.

The question of how the Warsaw Pact nations were to repartition their arsenals under disarmament talks had been seen as the last barrier in the way of clinching the historic treaty in Paris.

The breakthrough came when the Soviet Union agreed to accept a lower level of 13,150 assault tanks instead the 13,300 Moscow had been holding out for, Czechoslovak deputy Foreign Minister Robert Harencar said.

The six Warsaw Pact countries -- Soviet Union, Bulgaria, Romania, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Poland -- will formally sign the agreement in Budapest on November 3, Mr. Harencar added.

WASHINGTON, (OCT 27) - President George Bush is likely to reshuffle his cabinet after the November 6 congressional elections and his drug policy director, William Bennett, is expected to resign next year, U.S. News and World Report reported in its latest issue.

The weekly quoted White House sources as saying that because of the political damage to Republicans caused by the budget deficit-reduction negotiations, Budget Director Richard Darman was expected to be demoted to head of an agency dealing with international finance and could be replaced by Transportation Secretary Sam Skinner.

Another possibility was that Mr. Skinner might replace White House Chief of Staff John Sununu, another casualty of the budget talks, in which the Democrats succeeded in portraying their Republican rivals as protectors of the wealthy, the sources said.

Under this scenario, Mr. Sununu, whose abrasive style has rankled congressional Democrats during the budget talks, would become head of Mr. Bush's re-election campaign while domestic-policy adviser Roger Porter would take over as budget director, the magazine said.

It also reported that Mr. Bennett, who has spearheaded the nation's war on drugs, was expected to resign next year after the release of his third drug strategy report in January.

Mr. Bennett would be the second member of the Bush administration to leave. Wednesday, Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole, the highest ranking woman in the Bush administration, announced she was resigning to become president of the American Red Cross.

Mr. Bennett, 47, is thought to be interested in a presidential race, but not until 1996.

Carpio declined to say whether a ransom had been paid for the nuns' release or give further details while a police investigation is in progress.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (OCT. 27) UPI - Julie Krone rode to her 2,000th career victory, leading wire-to-wire to win the $25,000 Escaped Handicap Friday night at the Meadowlands.

Riding Meadow Bridge Farm's Rainbow Quartz in a one mile event on the main track, Krone hustled the four-year-old gelding out of the gate to the lead and held off all challengers through fractions of 23.2, 46.2, 1:12 and 1:37.3 to win by one and a half lengths.

''This is an especially important milestone for me because this has been a boring year, with the accident and all,'' said Krone, who sat out seven months recovering from a complicated fracture of her left forearm sustained in a riding accident on Nov. 27, 1989.

Riding for Meadowlands' leading trainer John Forbes, Krone said that, ''When John gave me a leg up on this horse I just knew we'd win. Everything seemed just right - the horse's mane was lying perfectly, he stood perfectly in the gate, I chirped to him and he just drew off.''

SAN DIEGO (OCT. 27) UPI - A 52-year-old man has been charged with smuggling 327 fertile ostrich eggs into the United States, and could face up to 20 years in prison.

Roger Leonard Jacobson allegedly obtained the giant eggs worth $300, 000 from Botswana in southern Africa earlier this month and transported them using 32 specially constructed suitcases. The motive was unknown.

Ostriches are not considered an endangered species, but the gawky birds are in decline, largely because of human encroachment on their natural habitat.

Demand for the world's largest bird has increased among U.S. collectors and homeowners who keep ostriches as pets, San Diego Zoo spokesman Jeff Jouett said. Fertile ostrich eggs can bring $1,000 on the black market, he said.

''Everybody knows about smuggled elephant tusks and smuggled rhino horns,'' Joeutt said. ''To think of yet another animal part being a black market commodity is pretty ominous for wildlife. It makes you think: What next?''

The eggs - each between 2 1/2 and 4 pounds and 10 to 12 inches long - were not expected to survive because federal quarantine regulations forbid their entry into the country and transfer to incubation chambers.

The zoo's bird curator inspected five of the eggs and determined that ''they were fertile but they will not hatch,'' said Jouett.

Jacobson was nabbed at the Mexican border Oct. 19 after a Customs inspector found 110 ostrich eggs in his car. Customs agents later found another 217 eggs previously smuggled into the country.

The Oceanside, Calif., man faces 20 years in prison and a $750,000 fine for smuggling, importing wildlife and possessing a firearm.

(OCT. 27) UPI - The newly forged deficit-reduction budget plan is now headed for possible consideration by the House. The 490-BILLION-dollar package of tax hikes and spending cuts fell about 10-BILLION dollars short of the targeted 500-BILLION dollar deficit reduction- an amount the administration had said would be the minimum acceptable. But President Bush is expected to back the plan.

The White House confirmed Friday night that Secretary of State Baker will travel soon to Saudi Arabia. Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says Baker will discuss- among other things- the ''implementation of U-N sanctions, the status of U-S and multinational forces in the gulf'' and ''military options.'' He would NOT confirm reports that Baker would seek permission from the Saudi government for a military strike against Iraq, if one is deemed necessary.

A New York judge once again Friday refused to allow a black activist lawyer to take over the defense of one of two youths on trial in the April 1989 gang-rape of a woman jogger in Central Park. It's the second trial stemming from the so-called ''wilding'' rampage during which a gang of youths attacked several people in the moonlit park. Three youths were convicted earlier this year. A final youth is slated to be tried early next year.

New government-ordered inspections of the 800-mile trans-Alaska pipeline will begin this weekend. The inspections were prompted by charges of fraudulent corrosion testing along the pipeline. Operators of the pipeline say they will comply with a government request to dig up sections of the pipe for the probes at 19 different sites. The job will cost 500-thousand dollars.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 27) UPI - The State Department warned Americans overseas Friday that the risk of acts of terrorism in Europe and Middle East is increasing.

In an advisory, the department said the U.S. government has received information believed ''specific and credible'' regarding a possible terrorist threat to passenger ships operating in the eastern Mediterannean Sea.

Such an operation may be undertaken at any time, the advisory said. A further source of concern, it said, is that the Abu Nidal Organization has repeatedly threatened to attack U.S. interests in the event Mahmoud Atta, a U.S. citizen and a member of that organization, is extradited to Israel.

The U.S. takes these threats seriously in view of the ANO's notorious history. Following a long U.S. judicial process, the United States has decided to extradite Atta to stand trial for his alleged participation in a lethal attack involving an Israeli bus in April 1986, the State Department said.

''Finally, we note that civil aviation remains a potential target for terrorist operations,'' the department said. ''We are particularly concerned in this regard about aircraft operating in Europe or the Middle East.''

(OCT. 27) UPI - The founder and long-time chief executive officer of C-B-S has died. A network spokesman says William Paley died Friday night at his Manhattan home. He was 89, and had been ill with pneumonia for two weeks before suffering an apparent heart attack earlier Friday. Paley oversaw the growth and expansion of C-B-S News during World War Two. After the war, he turned his attention to the fledging C-B-S Television Network.

A delicate bipartisan deficit-cutting plan forged late Friday by congressional and administration budget negotiators is headed for consideration by the House early Saturday. California Democrat Leon Panetta, chairman of the House Budget Committee, says the package of tax hikes and spending cuts is ''the most effective deficit reduction'' they've ever passed. The head of the Senate Finance Committee, Lloyd Bentsen, says the plan shifts America's tax burden largely off the middle class and onto the rich.

White House support for the plan remains intact, if somewhat luke- warm. Says chief of staff John Sununu- ''We were a little disappointed it was so hard to get people to fulfill their commitment on spending cuts.''

A Marine who refused to board a plane when his unit was deployed to Saudi Arabia two months ago lost his bid Friday for conscientious objector status. Marine Corps officials at Kaneohe Air Station in Hawaii say Corporal Jeff Paterson's request was denied on the grounds that, among other things, he- quote- ''selectively chooses the wars he opposes.'' Paterson's court martial is scheduled to begin December 3rd.

A Salvadoran court spokesman says a judge postponed the murder trial of nine soldiers charged in the killing of six Jesuit priests... while authorities investigate new evidence that could implicate high-ranking government officials. The evidence stems from a statement by a former U- S military adviser in El Salvador, who said one of the nine Salvadoran soldiers charged in the case told him of the plan to kill the six priests. The statement was turned over to Salvadoran courts by the U-S government last week.

More than 55-thousand cars made by Ford, General Motors, Honda and Mazda are being recalled to check for possible air bag defects. While NO such problems have been reported by motorists, the agency recommends that drivers of recalled cars limit use of the vehicles until they are checked.

A pocket of polluted, smelly air hovering over Houston Friday sparked a flurry of concerned phone calls to the fire department. The odor so resembled natural gas that a bank and three schools near downtown were briefly evacuated after officials became convinced gas leaks were the source. But city officials say the cloud and odor were the result of a temperature inversion- cold air holding an area of pollution-filled warmer air against the earth's surface.

NEW YORK (OCT. 27) UPI - Radio and television pioneer William S. Paley, who founded CBS in 1928 and set many of the standards for the industry in news and entertainment, died Friday night. He was 89.

Paley, who invested $400,000 in a struggling radio network and turned it into one of the most powerful communications forces in the world, died at his Manhattan home, a CBS spokeswoman said.

He had been ill with pneumonia for two weeks and suffered a heart attack, the spokeswoman said.

Paley, who remained chairman of the network to his death, was a legendary media executive who cared about news and invested millions of dollars in covering events around the world.

The broadcast mogul served as chief executive officer and chairman of CBS for more than a half-century, wielding enormous power and brought his brand of news and entertainment into the homes of millions of Americans.

Paley gave the radio airwaves in the 1930s and 1940s such stars as Will Rogers Fred Allen, George Burns, Goodman Ace, Jack Benny, Bing Crosby and Frank Sinatra. He lured from rival NBC some of its most popular performers, including Eddie Cantor and Al Jolson, to give the radio network its reputation for wealth, power and glamor.

His impact on news was also immense. It was Paley's CBS that in 1935 hired Edward R. Murrow, who went on to cover World War II and assembled a team - called thew ''Murrow Boys'' - which later became the core of CBS News. In the 1950s and 1960s, CBS News had many of the best and brightest in the industry such as Walter Cronkite, Eric Sevareid and Howard K. Smith.

Paley was born Sept. 28, 1901, in Chicago, to Samuel and Goldie Paley. His father was a Russian immigrant. He graduated from Western Military Academy in Alton, Ill., in 1918 and briefly attended the University of Chicago. In 1922 he received a bachelor of science degree from the University of Pennsylvania and went to work managing his father's Philadelphia cigar factory. He was intrigued by radio.

''The first radio I ever saw was a primitive crystal set,'' he said. ''A friend clamped the earphones on me and I was dumbfounded. It was hard to believe that I was hearing music out of the air and I never got over the surprise and fascination.''

In 1928, at age 27, Paley paid $400,000 - which he had acquired through the family firm - for United Independent Broadcasters, a small, financially troubled New York radio network.

Within three years Paley's network - the Columbia Broadcasting System - passed the $2 million mark and he was on his way to become a very wealthy man.

In 1935 Paley hired Murrow as ''Director of Talks.'' His job was to hire personalities to give talks on CBS Radio. In 1937 Murrow was assigned to London as European director. Murrow was the entire European staff, which expanded later that year when Murrow hired William L. Shirer.

As events in Europe barreled toward World War II, CBS News expanded to meet the challenge and by 1938 had 10 domestic and 12 foreign bureaus.

During World War II, Paley served overseas as an information and psychological warfare specialist and reached the rank of colonel.

Following the war, Paley devoted his energies to the infant CBS Television Network. In 1946, there were only 6,000 TV sets in the United States and CBS could reach only a few of them. Today, nearly all American homes have television sets and CBS can reach almost all of them.

It was in 1946, after CBS began to diversify, that Paley named Frank Stanton president and chief operating officer. Paley remained chairman and chief executive officer.

When Stanton moved to vice chairman, the CBS corporate headquarters began more than a decade of turbulence. Stanton's eventual successor, Arthur Taylor, served for about four years before being fired in 1976 in a personality clash with Paley.

Paley retired in 1983, remaining on the 14-member board of directors.

At the time, he owned nearly 2 million shares of CBS stock, worth about $74 million. He received $5.4 million in annual dividends and his private wealth was estimated at more than $500 million.

He reportedly held on to his CBS holdings, which in today's market would be worth several hundred million dollars.

Three years later - two weeks short of his 85th birthday - he again became chairman in what became known as the battle of the boardroom.

In a daylong board meeting Paley teamed with Lawrence Tisch, who had acquired 25 percent of CBS Inc., to force the ouster of Thomas H. Wyman as chairman, president and chief executive of CBS. Tisch became president and chief executive.

Paley's first wife was Dorothy Hart Hearst. The couple had a son and a daughter. They were divorced in 1947.

Later that year he married Barbara ''Babe'' Cushing, one of New York's best dressed and most respected socialites. She was the sister- in-law of publisher John Hay Whitney, who became one of Paley's best friends and the model for an aristocratic lifestyle that Paley was quick to adopt after marrying Babe.

She also gave him a son and daughter - Kate and William. Babe Paley died after a long bout with cancer in 1978, and although Paley was still considered one of New York's most eligible bachelors, he never remarried.

Paley was active in the arts and an active supporter of the Museum of Modern Art since 1937. In 1976 he founded the Museum of Broadcasting next to a midtown Manhattan pocket park named Paley Park, which he gave to the city.

Paley was known to be quick-tempered but charming. A longtime CBS employee, who asked to remain anonymous, said of him: ''He was a gentleman. He would be as charming to the secretary he met in the elevator as to the powerful senator he was on his way to meet.''

The roster of CBS stars over the years also included Lucille Ball, Carol Burnett, Mary Tyler Moore, Red Skelton, Ed Sullivan, Arthur Godfrey, Jackie Gleason and many more.

Paley had a remarkable batting average but he was not infallible. In his 1979 autobiography, ''As It Happened,'' he repeats this conversation he had with Lucille Ball about Desi Arnaz:

''Lucy,'' I tried to explain as gently as possible, ''He's a bandleader, he can't act. What will we do with him?''

WASHINGTON (OCT. 27) UPI - Mayor Marion Barry, sentenced to six months in jail and a $5,000 fine for his conviction on a cocaine possession charge, will appeal the sentence, his lawyer said.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson, who handed down the sentence Friday, also ordered the three-term mayor to one year on probation after his release from prison and told him to undergo periodic drug testing.

Because he was convicted of a misdemeanor, Barry will not be forced to relinquish his office before his term ends Jan. 2. Under city law, he also can continue his bid for the at-large City Council seat in the Nov. 6 elections.

Barry would have been forced to step down if he had been convicted of a felony.

The mayor's wife, Effi, and his mother, Mattie Cummings, looked on as Barry stood before the judge next to one of his attorneys, Robert Mance.

Jackson found that Barry engaged in a ''willful attempt to obstruct justice'' by lying to a grand jury about his drug use, a charge which makes jail time mandatory under U.S. sentencing guidelines.

Jackson said he will let the government decide in which prison Barry will be incarcerated. He allowed Barry to remain free on his personal recognizance and told Barry he had the right to appeal.

''His breach of public service alone is of the highest consideration, '' Jackson said in delivering the sentence, adding that Barry gave ''aid, comfort and encouragement to the drug culture.''

As he stood before the judge, Barry said, ''I stand here remorseful and I ask this court to impose community service as a sentence.''

Before the sentencing, Barry told the judge he was nervous.

''My stomach is in knots,'' he said. ''I am prepared and have been prepared to take full responsibility for my actions. These actions were out of character.''

He admitted his former dependence to alcohol, valium, an anti- depressant and cocaine, saying, ''I believe I've led an exemplary life since Jan. 18,'' the day of his arrest. He said it was the 279th day he was free of any drug.

Paul Martin, a spokesman for the U.S. Sentencing Commission, said Barry must serve the entire six months in jail because federal sentencing guidelines that went into effect in 1987 abolished parole.

In addition, because Barry's sentence was under a year, he is not eligible for ''good time.''

''Six months is six months,'' Martin said. ''That's what he will have to serve.

''If the judge had not found obstruction of justice, he could've given (Barry) straight probation. But with obstruction there's a mandatory minimum jail sentence of two months, and it goes up to eight months.''

Defense attorney R. Kenneth Mundy said he was ''disappointed'' by the jail sentence, and added, ''The final chapter has not been written.''

''We will be appealing and we fully expect that the appeal process will take a little while.'' Mundy said.

He said Barry, who left the courthouse through a side door without speaking to reporters, was ''disappointed too.''

''He was disappointed, very honestly disappointed,'' Mundy said.

put naa00275 uc to ngd

Mundy declined to say whether he believed Barry's political career would be further harmed, but he did say that Barry had been used as a ''whipping boy'' and ''a scapegoat'' for the district's worsening drug problem.

But U.S. Attorney Jay Stephens told reporters at a news conference later that Barry's sentence was appropriate and ''well within the range of the maxiumum sentence provided by law.''

''In imposing the sentence the court emphasized that Mr. Barry had breached the public trust and contributed to this city's and our nation's most devastating drug problem,'' Stephens said. ''He has now been held accountable for his conduct.''

Stephens also denied that the government's recommendation that Barry be sentenced to a jail term instead of probation was racially or politically motivated.

''The decision to prosecute this case, the decision we made ask for the sentence was based on a range of factors such as breach of public trust and obstruction of justice,'' Stephens said. ''The totality of the conduct here justified the imposition of the sentence.''

In arguing for leniency, Mundy reminded Jackson that Barry is a first-time offender and that most defendants convicted on drug possession charges receive probation.

''I ask the court not to judge Mr. Barry as the government would have on evidence of unproven charges that the jury did not buy into,'' Mundy said. ''It's for the public to judge Marion Barry ... as to what his future role will be, if any.''

Prosecutor Judith Retchin said Barry's offense was ''hardly a simple misdemeanor committed by a first-time offender.'' She said evidence at his trial showed that for five years he engaged in ''a pervasive pattern of using illegal narcotics and using his position to obtain drugs.''

Barry's sentencing came 2 1/2 months after a jury convicted him on a single count of drug possession, acquitted him on another and deadlocked on 12 other counts.

Barry was arrested in a police ''sting'' operation at a Washington hotel in January. He was videotaped smoking crack-cocaine after a model and former girlfriend lured Barry to the hotel room.

Crowds of supporters and observers, including several city officials, gathered outside the federal courthouse Friday morning and offered their views on the sentencing.

''The judge was quite harsh on Marion Barry's attitude,'' said Paul Rothstein, a professor at Georgetown University Law Center. ''I think it is somewhat unrealistic to expect a working politician to grovel in the dust. But the judge did expect the mayor to acknowledge a little more responsibility than he did.''

(OCT. 27) UPI - Wayne Gretzky did not want to hear comparisons of his 2,000 career points with feats in other sports. His assist on a Tomas Sandstrom goal in the first period Friday night was a milestone, but failed to lead the Los Angeles Kings to a victory.

Gretzky's achievement was spoiled by Winnipeg's Thomas Steen, who assisted on four goals, leading the Jets to a 6-2 victory over the Kings in Winnipeg.

''At the point in time I got the point, it put us back in the hockey game,'' Gretzky said. ''Anytime you set a record, it's always nice to win.''

Gretzky, already the NHL's all-time scoring leader, became the first player in NHL history to score 2,000 points when he assisted on Sandstom's seventh goal of the year at 14:32 of the first period, with the Jets holding a 2-0 lead.

Gretzky, standing at his own blue line, fed the puck to Tony Granato at center ice. Granato flipped a pass to a streaking Sandstrom, who put the puck between the knees of goaltender Bob Essensa.

Gretzky resisted attempts to put his 2,000 points in perspective relative to Hank Aaron's 755 home runs or Pete Rose's 4,256 hits.

''It's tough to compare sports,'' he said. ''What they did were great accomplishments. They're difficult to compare. I'm sure they're proud of what they've accomplished and I'm proud of what I've done.''

The milestone came in Gretzky's 857th game over 12 years. Last season, he became the NHL's all-time scorer, breaking Gordie Howe's mark of 1,850 points. Notched 142 points, winning his eighth scoring title.

''It's nice to get it over with and get it done,'' he said. ''I'm happy with it, but obviously it would have been a more exciting night if we would have won.''

Winnipeg's victory was its third straight after losing six in a row and snapped the Kings' five-game winning streak.

Winnipeg jumped into a 2-0 lead early in the first period when Steen set up goals by Phil Housley and Fredrik Olausson. Housley opened the scoring with a power-play goal at 1:33 when he put a three-foot shot into a wide-open net. At 5:07, Olausson cut in from the corner to the right of Kelly Hrudey, deked the goalie, then slipped a short shot into the net.

Sandstrom cut the Jets lead to 2-1 with his goal at 14:32.

Pat Elynuik restored Winnipeg's two-goal lead at 15:57 of the second period with the Jets' second power-play goal. Steen passed to Olausson along the right boards and the defenseman sent the puck to Elynuik. He beat Hrudey with a wrist shot from the slot between the top of the faceoff circles.

The Kings controlled the opening minutes of the third period, but couldn't beat Essensa, who robbed Scott Bjugstad three times and Luc Robitaille once.

Steen picked up his fourth assist at 12:52 of the third period when his rocket from the boards was deflected by Phil Sykes on the Jets' second shot of the period.

Bob Kudelski scored the Kings' second goal at 14:54 of the third period. But Winnipeg's Randy Carlyle scored at 17:44 and Paul Fenton added the Jets' third power-play goal at 19:22 to finish the scoring.

In the only other NHL game Friday night, Detroit outshot Minnesota 8- 6.

Red Wings 8, North Stars 6

At Detroit, Rick Zombo and Sergei Fedorov scored eight seconds apart early in the third period to break a tie and help the Red Wings remain unbeaten at home. With the score tied 4-4, Zombo scored his first goal of the season at 4:42 of the period after goaltender Kari Takko stopped shots by Bob Probert and Jimmy Carson. Eight seconds later, Fedorov converted Brent Fedyk's rebound.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 27) UPI - The House, breaking a 13-year stalemate, approved a landmark clean air bill that will require virtually every major industry to reduce emissions causing urban smog, acid rain, toxic hazards or ozone depletion.

The legislation, passed Friday on a 401-25 vote, is the first effort by Congress since 1977 to strengthen the federal Clean Air Act to address worsening air pollution that health experts say is killing or crippling tens of thousands of Americans each year with lung disease, cancer and birth defects.

''In passing this bill, Congress is adopting the most effective, comprehensive air pollution control program in the world,'' said Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif.

''We're putting the United States back where it always was and always should be - leading all countries in promoting policies that protect the health of our citizens and the future of our planet.''

But Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., and a handful of other opponents said lawmakers would regret burdening American industry with expensive new pollution controls.

''This legislation sounds good, but it's bad for the economy,'' he said. ''Let's junk this bill.''

The Senate was expected to act on the bill late Friday, but Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, a strong opponent of the legislation, raised objections and a vote was put off until Saturday.

Assuming Senate passage, White House officials have indicated President Bush will sign the bill into law, despite warnings from industry and several prominent economists that it will cost thousands of jobs and accelerate the nation's economic downturn.

Bush - the self-proclaimed ''environmental president'' - triggered congressional action by proposing a wide-ranging clean air plan in July 1989 that he said ''balanced'' costs and benefits.

His initiative was a major change from President Reagan, who steadfastly opposed clean air legislation throughout the 1980s, aggravating congressional gridlock.

The bill passed by the House emerged from 15 months of torturous deliberations marked by intense regional conflicts - especially over acid rain - and a titanic lobbying war between industry and environmental groups over how far and fast the nation should go in reducing pollution.

Among other objectives, the bill seeks by the turn of the century to:

-Clear the skies in most of the 96 cities where smog now exceeds federal health limits. Los Angeles, the nation's smoggiest city, and eight others would have until 2010 at the latest. To achieve those goals, the bill tightens pollution controls on factories and smaller facilities such as gasoline stations and print shops. It also requires automakers to reduce smog-forming and carbon monoxide emissions from cars and the oil industry to sell cleaner-burning ''reformulated'' gasoline in the dirtiest cities.

-Halve sulfur dioxide emissions from 111 coal-burning power plants in the Midwest, Southeast and Appalachia that have been identified as the major cause of acid rain damaging lakes, streams, forests and buildings in the Northeast and Canada.

-Achieve a 75 percent cut in 189 toxic or cancer-causing chemicals now routinely emitted by 250 different industrial sectors, ranging from large chemical plants and steel mills to corner dry cleaners and bakeries in badly polluted cities. Garbage and hospital incinerators also would be covered.

-Eliminate chlorofluorocarbons and three other widely used industrial substances that erode the Earth's protective ozone layer.

The bill's price tag is expected to be at least $25 billion a year by 2005, almost doubling the $32 billion now spent annually by industry to prevent air pollution. Industry lobbyists maintain the bill will cost $51 billion a year.

For the average American household, the legislation will mean by 1995 at least $100 a year in higher utility bills, gasoline prices, car costs and other pass-throughs to consumers of increased pollution control expenditures.

It also will throw thousands of Americans out work, with the biggest hit likely in the high-sulfur coal mines of Appalachia, which will see reduced demand from utilities facing acid rain cuts. Expensive toxic air pollution controls could force the shutdown of many aging steel and chemical plants.

In a first for environmental legislation, the bill includes a five- year, $250 million program to provide extended unemployment compensation benefits to workers who lose their jobs due to pollution reduction.

Bush initially threatened to veto the clean air bill over the worker- aid program, charging it set a bad precedent for future environmental legislation and could greatly increase the government's jobless aid spending. However, he appeared mollified by last-minute changes reducing the program's cost.

Bush is the author of another major innovation in the bill - a complex emission ''allowance'' trading system designed to ease the cost of acid rain cleanup and ensure pollution does not grow after 2000. The plan is seen as a test for other ''market-based'' concepts intended to give industry economic incentives for reducing pollution.

Automakers and the oil industry, two of the most powerful lobbies on Capitol Hill, persuaded lawmakers to kill another Bush idea to require production of millions of cars that can run on cleaner-burning alternative fuels such as natural gas and wood alcohol. However, farm lobbyists succeeded in inserting requirements for grain alcohol additives in reformulated gasoline.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 27) UPI - The House, heeding pleas from leaders of both parties, gave its approval Saturday to a massive deficit-reduction plan forged in three weeks of frantic bargaining and backed by President Bush.

The five-year, approximately $490 billion deficit trimming package that increases the tax burden on the rich, raises gasoline and excise taxes for all Americans and trims Medicare by about $43 billion was passed by a 228-200 vote. Later Saturday, the Senate was scheduled to take up the measure, which was completed late Friday.

The bipartisan plan succeeded in the same place an earlier compromise failed. A budget summit plan developed over months of bargaining between the White House and congressional leaders was killed Oct. 4.

Bush, taking an early morning swim off Waikiki Beach in Honolulu, said he as 'very pleased' about the House vote and expressed optimism that the Senate soon would complete work satisfactorily.

Asked if it was good to get the process behind him, Bush said, ''It sure is.''

The House's budget debate began about 1:40 a.m. EDT, with the grueling session culminating in a final vote for passage shortly before 7 a.m.

Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., chairman of the House Budget Committee, said the plan would compensate for budgetary wrongdoing of the 1980s.

''We thought somehow that we could have it all, that we could cut taxes, we could raise defense spending, we could increase benefits and nobody would have to pay, that the bill would never become due,'' Panetta said. ''But the bill has become due and we have to pay it.''

Calling the compromise ''the largest and most effective deficit- reduction package in the history of this country,'' Panetta said failure to pass the plan would ''doom our economy to a deep recession, without question.''

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, called the plan ''a responsible and balanced plan of shared sacrifice.''

House GOP leader Robert Michel of Illinois added, ''We're attempting to turn our backs on instant gratification, the curse of this institution, and subject ourselves to long overdue discipline.''

Many House GOP members opposed the package because of their disdain for higher taxes. Meanwhile, the 23 members of the Congressional Black Caucus announced they would vote against a deficit-reduction accord to protest Bush's veto of a major civil rights bill and the narrow Senate vote this week to sustain his rejection.

Some House members objected to the hurried, late-night consideration.

Rep. Dana Rohrabacher, R-Calif, said, ''The American people are outraged by those who sneak up on them in the dead of night and take money out of their pockets.''

''The spending cuts are fake,'' added Rep. Christopher Cox, R-Calif. ''The savings are the same kinds of savings that Lucy Ricardo got from going to another sale: It's like putting on five coats and taking one off.''

''This is taxation,'' said Rep. Craig James, R-Fla. ''So admit it. It is not deficit reduction.''

Forty-seven Republicans voted with the plan, while 74 Democrats voted against it.

Late Friday, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee, said the package shifts America's tax burden largely off the middle class and onto the rich. He said an aim of the package was ''seeing that those who are best off, who are the wealthiest among us, pay their full, fair share.''

White House support for the plan remained intact, although rather tepid.

''We were a little disappointed it was so hard to get people to fulfill their commitment on spending cuts,'' said White House Chief of Staff John Sununu.

The package of tax hikes and spending cuts, expected to reduce the federal deficit by about $40 billion in its first year, fell about $10 billion short of the targeted $500 billion, an amount administration said would be the minimum acceptable.

''If it's an honest $490 billion, it might be all right,'' Sununu added. ''It's a number at the bottom of the page. But you've got to look at what's up top. We're trying to make sure that number is solid.''

The plan is designed to generate net tax revenue of $137.2 billion during the next five years.

The package, if approved, would raise the marginal income rate on the wealthiest Americans to 31 percent from 28 percent. Middle-income taxpayers would pay 28 percent and low-income taxpayers would be taxed at 15 percent, while limiting itemized deductions to 3 percent of income over $100,000.

The cut in Medicare, the health insurance program for the elderly, stood substantially below the $60 billion contained in the failed budget summit agreement and between the $49 billion cut contained in the original Senate budget plan and the $42 billion cut from the House version.

The tax plan also includes a 5-cents-a-gallon gasoline tax hike, a 10 percent tax on luxury items such as expensive cars, boats, furs and jewelry, a phased-in 8-cents-per-pack jump in cigarette taxes and a phaseout of personal exemptions for upper-income Americans. It raises the health insurance wage cap from $51,300 to $125,000 and includes some $2.5 billion in energy incentives, which the House version had deleted.

Bentsen said one large chunk of the missing $10 billion in deficit reduction came when $5 billion in savings was lost as a result of retaining the exemption for certain state and local government employees from paying into Medicare.

Congress is hoping to complete action on the plan by Saturday midnight, when a stopgap spending measure allowing for the operation of the federal government expires. It is the fourth temporary spending measure in effect since the fiscal year started on Oct. 1.

PARIS (OCT. 27) UPI - A Socialist deputy with links to President Francois Mitterrand's government said in an interview published Saturday that Iraq is ready to negotiate a compromise on its annexation of Kuwait.

Michel Beregevoy, a member of the Foreign Affairs Commission in the National Assembly and a brother of Finance Minister Pierre Beregevoy, said he had ''the feeling that Iraq is ready to negotiate'' and that he had learned this from unidentified Jordanian sources.

''From the Jordanian side, we have had the impression that there was the idea that one could find a compromise with Saddam Hussein for a partial liberation of Kuwait,'' Beregevoy told the newspaper Paris- Normandie.

''But I told my interlocuters that to accept the partial evacuation of Kuwait would be to give a prize to the aggressor.''

''I think that the evacuation must be total followed by a review at recognized international conferences of the distribution of frontiers. It is a question of principle,'' said the politician.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said Saturday that 327 French hostages held in Kuwait and Iraq still are expected to return to France ''by the end of the weekend'' in spite of delays in Baghdad in arranging their departure.

However, the spokesman said the French nationals would not return before Sunday. He said the issuing of exit visas by Iraqi authorities ''is going well '' as well as arrangements for the return of 67 French who had been taken to strategic sites for use as human shields.

An Iraqi Airways airplane is expected to fly to Kuwait City to take French citizens there to Baghdad from where the other French will embark for Paris, he said.

It is likely that not all French citizens will return because some with dual nationality or who are married to Kuwaiti or Iraqi citizens want to stay behind.

The French government has advised all its citizens to take advantage of the pledge by Iraq to release all French hostages.

The spokesman declined to discuss the future of French diplomats besieged in the French Embassy at Kuwait.

-Oil: $2.5 billion in tax benefits for oil and gas drillers and $1.4 billion in tax breaks for small businesses over five years.

-Medicare: About $10 billion savings in Medicare by increasing the deductible from $75 to $100 and a gradual increase in premiums from $28.60 this year to $29.90 next year and $46.50 in 1995. About $34 billion in savings through reduced reimbursements to doctors and hospitals.

-Medicaid: The program of health insurance for the poor would realize savings of about $600,000 million over 5 years through drug discounts and from paying private insurance if it is cheaper, although providing expanded coverage for children, the frail elderly and the mentally retarded.

Farm: Savings through commodity program reforms and loan program reductions.

Fees: Increased fees for services from a number of agencies such as the Coast Guard, patent and trademark, customs and veterans housing

BEIJING (OCT. 27) UPI - China lodged a formal protest with Japan Saturday over a territorial dispute and a Japanese proposal to send non-combat military personnel to assist the U.S.-led international force in the Persian Gulf.

Chinese Vice Foreign Minister Qi Huaiyuan held an ''urgent meeting'' with Japanese Ambassador to China Hiroshi Hashimoto to express official displeasure over the two issues, according to a Foreign Ministry statement read over the state-run national television news broadcast.

The land in question is a group of eight tiny uninhabited islands located in the East China Sea between northern Taiwan and the Japanese- ruled Ryukyu islands.

Known as the Diaoyutai Islands in Chinese and the Senkaku Islands in Japanese, the potentially oil-rich islands are claimed by China, Japan and Taiwan and have provoked numerous disputes since the end of World War II.

The latest dispute flared up last week when a right-wing Japanese group sought recognition of a lighthouse built on one of the islands.

''Regrettably, the Japanese government has put aside mutual understanding,'' Qi told Hashimoto, reiterating Chinese claims of sovereignty over the disputed territory.

Unlike previous harsh statements in the official media, however, Qi suggested that Japan and China hold further negotiations on the issue and even consider the possibility of joint development of Diaoyutai resources.

Qi also addressed the volatile issue of 2,000 noncombat Japanese troops being sent to the Gulf, warning such action would ''raise a strong response from the Chinese people and those of every other Asian country hurt by Japanese militarism.''

Qi's remarks echoed earlier statements of alarm by the Chinese government over Tokyo's proposal, now under heated debate in Japan's Parliament.

''Chinese people are like people all over Asia,'' Qi warned Hashimoto. ''They still remember the grave disasters inflicted by Japanese militarists on Asian people.''

Qi said China urges the Japanese government to handle the issue ''prudently'' so as to avoid triggering harsh memories of the carnage wrought by Japan's invading armies during the 1930s and 1940s.

Although Japan maintains an army, navy and air force for defense of its shores the country's U.S.-supervised postwar constitution, adopted in 1947, prohibits the threat or use of force to resolve conflict.

The proposal to send support forces to the gulf has drawn criticism at home as well as from abroad.

Japan's two biggest opposition parties Tuesday boycotted hearings on the government's bill to authorize formation of what it calls the United Nations Peace Cooperation Corps.

As one of the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council, China has supported an international embargo against Iraq that includes a ban on arms shipments, but has steadfastly voiced opposition to what it calls ''big power military involvement'' in the region.

ELMONT, N.Y. (OCT. 27) UPI - Three horses entered in Breeders' Cup races were scratched Saturday morning, reducing to 83 the number of horses who will compete in the seven races.

Garden Gal, the 6-1 third choice in the Juvenile Fillies, Deposit Ticket, part of an entry at 4-1 in the Juvenile, and Distant Relative, the 7-2 second choice in the Mile, were all late scratches.

The three join Gorgeous, the morning line 5-1 third choice in the Distaff, on the sidelines. Gorgeous was scratched Friday after sustaining a chip in her left front knee after a workout.

Garden Gal suffered a stone bruise on her left front foot and was scratched as a precaution.

''We found it after she had breezed through the stretch yesterday,'' trainer Brian Mayberry said Saturday morning. ''It's not a serious type of thing, and if it had happened four days ago instead of the day before the race, we probably could have run.''

The colt ''aggravated an old injury in training on Thursday,'' Hills said Saturday. ''The injury was first sustained as a 2-year-old and there is some slight inflamation to the check ligament, but he should be all right in a couple of days.

''I'm desperately disappointed,'' said Hills, ''but the horse's well- being is the first consideration.''

The D. Wayne Lukas stable gave no reason for the scratch of Deposit Ticket, but they did have a horse break down in training earlier this week. Hey Hey Paula was humanely destroyed after breaking sesamoid bones in one of her legs.

Gorgeous suffered her injury after a Friday workout.

''She galloped the best I've ever seen her yesterday,'' trainer Neil Drysdale said Saturday, ''but as she was cooling out on the ring I noticed her nod and I said 'Oh, no.' Gradually it got worse.

''The vet (Dr. Tom Gorman) said something about horses getting a little more brittle when the weather suddenly turns cold. The race came one day too late.''

WASHINGTON (OCT. 27) UPI - Here are the main elements of the compromise clean air bill approved Saturday:

Acid Rain

Requires 111 large coal-burning power plants, mainly in the Midwest, Southeast and Appalachia, to reduce acid rain emissions by 10 million tons below 1980 levels within 10 years, about a 50 percent cut. It also requires those plants to cut nitrogen oxide emissions by roughly 2 million tons. Sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxide are the main ''precursor'' pollutants linked to acid rain that has damaged lakes, streams, forests and buildings in the Northeast and Canada.

Emission Allowance Trading System

Sets up an emission ''allowance'' trading system to ensure acid rain emissions do not grow after the year 2000. It also is intended to help cushion the cost of pollution control for utilities facing major reductions. Under the system, each plant would be allowed to emit a set amount of pollution. Those that reduce emissions below their assigned levels can free up emission allowances that then can be sold to other utilities seeking to expand coal-burning capacity. Plants that exceed their pollution limits are subject to penalties of $2,000 per ton of emissions.

Toxic Air Pollution

Requires some 250 different industries to reduce emissions of 189 types of different toxic and cancer-causing pollutants by at least 75 percent within 10 years. A wide range of facilities is affected, ranging from big chemical plants and oil refineries to smaller commercial operations such as dry cleaners and bakeries in heavily polluted cities. The section also applies to industrial, hospital and municipal garbage incinerators. The Environmental Protection Agency would require an initial round of cuts based on the ''maximum achievable (emission) control technology'' available for each affected industry. The EPA then would review remaining emissions and decide whether a second round of cuts was needed to assure ''residual risk'' to those living near a plant is not excessive. The EPA is required to assure the most exposed individual has an ''ample margin of safety,'' which the courts have interpreted as a cancer risk no greater than 1 in 10,000.

Urban Smog

Tightens controls on volatile organic compounds and nitrogen oxides from factories and commercial operations in the 96 cities where smog now exceeds federal health limits. In the smoggiest cities, the bill would cover smaller facilities such as gasoline stations not subject to emission limits under current law. The bill sets a clean-up schedule for all non-complying cities, with most urban areas required to take steps to come into compliance within three, six or nine years, with dirtier cities getting more time. Five cities with ''severe'' smog would have until 2005: Chicago, Milwaukee, Philadelphia, San Diego and Muskegon, Mich. Three slightly smoggier cities, New York, Houston and Baltimore, would have until 2007 while Los Angeles, the nation's dirtiest city, would have until 2010. The bill also contains measures to reduce carbon monoxide, which exceeds federal health standards in 41 cities, and soot, which is at unhealthful levels in 70 cities.

Automobile Pollution

Requires automakers to roughly halve by the mid-1990s tailpipe emissions that cause urban smog. A second round of cutbacks after the year 2000 could be imposed by the EPA if the agency deemed it necessary and ''technologically feasible.'' Reductions in carbon monoxide emissions would be required as well.

The bill also requires the car industry to begin development of new low-polluting vehicles to be sold as part of a pilot program in California. However, that requirement apparently could be met with new-generation gasoline-powered cars and would not force automakers to mass produce cars that can run on cleaner- burning alternative fuels, such as natural gas or wood alcohol. Operators of commercial fleets of 10 vehicles or more may have switch to non-gasoline fuels.

Alternative Fuels

Requires the oil industry to produce ''cleaner-burning'' reformulated gasoline that contains ethanol, a derivative of corn, and less contaminants. The gasoline must be available in cities with excessive carbon monoxide pollution by 1994 at the latest. The new blends must be sold in the nation's nine smoggiest cities by 1995. The gasoline must have 15 percent less smog-forming compounds by 1995 and 20 percent by 2000.

Ozone-Depleting Chemicals

Phases out production of chlorofluorocarbons, or CFCs, by 2000. CFCs are widely used as cleaning solvents for computer chips, refrigerants and in the production of foam products. The 2000 deadline also applies to halons, widely used in fire extinguishers, and carbon tetrachloride, a cleaning solvent. A phaseout deadline of 2002 is set for methyl chloroform, another solvent. Elimination of hydrochlorofluorocarbons, a less ozone-depleting substitute for CFCs, is required by 2030.

Worker Assistance

Authorizes a five-year, $250 million program to help workers who lose their jobs as a result of pollution reduction requirements imposed by the bill. The program allows displaced workers to continue receiving unemployment compensation beyond their normal six-month allotment providing they enter a retraining program within the first 13 weeks of receiving benefits. The extended benefits will last as long as a worker is undergoing retraining.

(OCT. 27) UPI - Debate got under way early today among lawmakers in the House on a bipartisan deficit reduction plan that has White House support. House Budget Committee chief Leon Panetta, a California Democrat, argued in favor of the plan. He told lawmakers the cuts are painful and involve sacrifice, but he says it is the only way to erase a budget deficit approaching 300-BILLION dollars.

Congress, for the first time since 1977, acted to strengthen the federal Clean Air Act. The House yesterday approved a clean air bill and the Senate is expected to vote on the landmark measure today. If the bill passes the Senate, White House officials indicate President Bush likely will sign the measure into law. The House approved the measure 401-25.

The State Department warns Americans overseas of an increased risk of terrorism in Europe and the Middle East. An advisory issued yesterday says U-S officials received information believed to be credible regarding a possible terrorist threat to passenger ships in the eastern Mediterannean Sea. It said the Abu Nidal Organization repeatedly threatened to strike U-S interests if a member of the group, Mahmoud Attac, is extradited from the United States to Israel.

The data suggests churches are barely holding their own in raising money for missions and other requirements. The study was done for the North American Conference of Christian Philanthropy. Gusty winds howled through the northern Plains Saturday as sunshine warmed the Midwest and dense fog hugged the West Coast.

Wind speeds reached 45 mph in North Dakota as a low-pressure system tracked through southern Canada, the National Weather Service said. Gusts spawned by a rapidly moving cold front hit 30 mph along the Mississippi River.

Sunshine and cloudless skies in the Midwest states pushed temperatures into the 50s. St. Louis hit 62 under partly cloudy skies and Chicago reached into the mid-50s before noon.

Clear, sunny skies covered New York state, with temperatures in the low to mid 40s. Similar weather was forecast for Sunday.

Dense fog enveloped the California coast Saturday morning, blanketing airport runways and cutting visibility on freeways to about 50 feet in some areas.

The fog gave way to sunny skies and temperatures in the mid-80s and low-90s in the southern part of the state. Rain was predicted in northernmost California, where the mercury crept toward the 60s and 70s.

Less than 48 hours after broiling in record 90-degree heat, southern Florida woke up to an unusual fall chill. Hollywood, Fla., dipped to 58 degrees early Saturday, beating a 1968 mark by 1 degree.

Record lows were recorded Friday in Miami, Miami Beach, Fort Lauderdale, Hollywood, West Palm Beach, Melbourne and Fort Myers, with temperatures dipping to 48 in Melbourne and the 50s in the other cities.

Much of the deep south experienced clear but unusually cold weather Saturday. Highs in Atlanta were expected to reach no higher than the 50s Saturday after overnight lows dipped into the low 30s, leaving a mild frost.

The NWS called for sunny, mild days and clear, cool nights through the middle of the week, with lows in the upper 30s or 40s Monday, rising into the 40s to lower 50s by Wednesday.

HONOLULU (OCT. 27) UPI - President Bush, mixing diplomacy with politics in a welcomed escape from Washington, summoned the leaders of 11 tiny Pacific island nations Saturday for an unusual conference.

Billed by the administration as an unprecedented gathering of the strategic Pacific Basin nations, but one with no set agenda or expectation of decisions or big announcements, Bush wedged the five-hour summit meeting into the middle of a four-day political swing out West.

Whipsawed by near-disastrous budget talks and a plunge in his popularity with less than two weeks until the Nov. 6 elections, Bush again turned to the foreign policy arena, where he has acknowledged he is the most at ease.

On Friday, shortly before heading to the tropical resort for the brief meeting likely followed by a round of golf, Bush could hardly contain his glee at escaping the confines of the nation's capital.

''God, it's nice to be out of Washington,'' he told a Los Angeles fund-raiser. Arriving in Hawaii, he reiterated that with fervor, welcoming the ''warmer climes and cooler heads.''

Set at the University Of Hawaii's East-West Center, Bush was ready to convene the session Saturday morning, first welcoming the leaders, posing for a ''class photo'' and having lunch after the one scheduled session. Officials acknowledged up front the gathering was not expected to produce any major new initiatives, or really invite too much controversy among the participants, though a U.S. program to destroy deadly chemical weapons nearby has caused dissension.

The meeting did, however, offer the beleaguered president a sunny reprieve from the past week's intense bickering and partisan finger- pointing in the budget talks.

Addressing a fund-raiser late Friday for Rep. Pat Saiki, R-Hawaii, Bush said the session was long overdue.

''I think it's a good time and I think it's about time that an American president sat down with the heads of these countries out there and told them we are one in our respect for and love of the Pacific,'' Bush said.

An administration official, briefing reporters before Bush headed West, described the session more as a chance for the often-neglected leaders in the key area to talk personally with the president.

''The way the island leaders deal with issues is through discussions, getting together, having a chance to sit down and just schmooze things out,'' said the official, who asked not to be identified. ''And I think that's the general perspective of this.''

Thirteen leaders were invited by Bush for the session, though not all were able to attend. Among those listed by the White House as expected were Prime Minister Geoffrey Henry of the Cook Islands, Prime Minister Ratu Sir Kamisese Mara of Fiji, President Ieremia Tabai of Kiribati, President Amata Kabua of the Marshall Islands, President John Haglelgam of Micronesia, President Bernard Dowiyogo of Nauru, Prime Minister Rabbie Namaliu of Papua New Guineau, Prime Minister Bikenibeu Paeniu of Tuvalu and Prime Minister Tofilau Eti Alesana of Western Samoa.

King Taufa'ahau Tupou of Tonga, Premier Robert Rex of Niue, Prime Minister Solomon Mamaloni of the Solomon Islands and Prime Minister Walter Hayde Lini of Vanuatu were not expected to attend but planned to send representatives.

The 13 nations, accounting for a total population of 5.1 million, receive only $20 million in aid from the United States - $10 million in development assistance and the rest from tuna treaty licensing fees in the regions.

Though hinting that a push for more private investment might be forthcoming, the official said, ''There will not be what you would probably characterize as a major initiative.''

High among the topics likely to be discussed was the crisis in the Persian Gulf and how many of the island countries, most the size of a typical New England state, have fared since Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2 and sent the price of oil skyrocketing.

''They've all been hit by very substantial rises in oil prices,'' the administration official said. And while lending their own efforts to the international collaboration to force Iraq out of Kuwait, ''they are part of this broad problem,'' he said.

Economic aid, of course, was expected at the table, though the official indicated the administration was more likely to ''look to the Overseas Private Investment Corp.,'' or OPIC, for any move to encourage private sector investment.

Environmental issues also were expected to arise, as many islands have questioned the administration's attempt to delay international action on global warming and expressed concern about Bush's move to eliminate chemical weapons.

One area of concern, the official said, was a possible rise in the sea level that would be devastating for a small island. ''There are estimates that if there was sea rise of about a meter, a number of the countries would disappear since they are not many feet above sea level, '' the official said.

Of special concern on that front also is the U.S. chemical weapons disposal system at Johnston Atoll, built to detroy obsolete chemical weapons at the island 825 miles west southwest of Hawaii.

The plant, which began destroying weapons in July, is supposed to serve as a prototype for simliar plants in the future at eight mainland sites.

Many Pacific nations fear an accident could pollute the entire basin and they have accused the military of using the Pacific as a ''dumping ground'' for these weapons.

ISLAMABAD, PAKISTAN (OCT. 27) UPI - Election-related violence left at least 23 people dead and 40 injured Saturday as Pakistanis voted for provincial governments three days national elections were won by opponents of ousted Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto.

Reports from around the country indicated turnout was far lower than in the National Assembly elections. The government's Election Commission said 44.5 percent of the 48 million registered voters cast ballots on Wednesday, but many observers disputed this figure as too high.

Voters Saturday elected 483 legislators to assemblies in Pakistan's four provinces of Punjab, Sind, Northwest Frontier and Baluchistan.

The Election Commission said at least 23 people were killed and 40 wounded in clashes throughout the country between supporters of rival parties.

Police said they arrested a former PPP National Assembly legislator, Shahnawaz

Junejo, in Sind on Friday on charges of attempted murder of his election opponent, Jam Mashuque Ali, son of the caretaker chief minister of Sind.

Tight security was in force for Saturday's vote, with tens of thousands of troops on the streets throughout the country.

Bhutto's Pakistan People's Party hoped to win at least in its stronghold of southern Sind, where it achieved a massive majority in the last provincial elections in November 1988 and from where it could challenge the authority of the Islamabad government.

In Wednesday's vote, the Islamic Democratic Alliance, a disparate army-backed coalition of parties opposed to Bhutto, scored an unexpected and decisive victory over the PPP.

Bhutto has charged the victory was achieved as a result of ''gross rigging,'' but agreed to take part in the provincal elections.

However, a 40-member team from the National Democratic Institute, based in Washington D.C., sent to monitor Wednesday's elections said Friday it had no evidence to substantiate Bhutto's charges of mass fraud.

Bhutto, 37-year-old daughter of hanged prime minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, has drawn massive and emotional crowds at rallies across the country in the past few weeks in an outpouring of support many observers said exceeded that of the campaign for the November 1988 elections.

The PPP won those elections, the first democratic polls in the country since 1977. Many analysts had predicted a similar result on Wednesday and expressed astonishment at the IDA's massive victory.

President Ghulam Ishaq Khan sacked Bhutto's 20-month-old government on Aug. 6, accusing it of corruption and nepotism and of failing to control law and order and dissolved the National Assembly. He appointed opposition leader Ghulam Mustafa Jatoi to head an interim government until the elections.

The president also set up Special Disqualification Courts to try Bhutto and members of her administration on corruption charges. If found guilty they could be barred from politics for seven years.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 27) UPI - At 3:10 a.m. EDT Saturday, Republican House members gave a standing ovation to a colleague who took to the floor to defend himself against charges of financial wrongdoing.

Five minutes later, both Democrats and Republicans gave a standing ovation to a retiring eight-term congresswoman from Nebraska.

There were no standing ovations, however, for the real late, late show that kept the members of the House up past anyone's bedtime: consideration of the compromise budget plan forged just hours earlier by leaders of both parties and representatives from the Bush administration.

The House began debate at about 1:40 a.m. About 75 minutes later, after a procedural vote, the House suspended its consideration on the complex five-year deficit-reduction plan while staff members feverishly sought to produce copies of the package so members actually could see the bill about which they were preparing to cast a vote. At about 4:10 a.m., tired aides carried the 1,500-page bill to the floor for the 433 House members to share.

In the interim, the House, in the waning hours of the 101th Congress, considered such pressing topics as National PTA Week, National Medal of Honor Day and a commemorative coin.

The final vote on the budget plan came shortly before 7 a.m., putting an end to a thoroughly bizarre night on Capitol Hill.

''This is a sad night in the House of Represenatatives,'' Rep. Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., said. ''When prisoners are held, they are made more compliant by two techniques: deny them sleep and deny them information.''

Some House members slumped over in their chairs from exhaustion, while others nodded off on the floor of the august chamber.

Rep. John Kasich, R-Ohio, accused the House leadership of ''fighting a war of attrition.''

''Basically, they just hope everybody will either fall asleep or fall over before the time comes to vote and they'll be enough people left standing who will vote for the package,'' Kasich said.

Rep. Dana Rohrabacher, R-Calif., likened the late-night session to a mugging of the public.

''The American people are outraged by those who sneak up on them in the dead of night and take money out of their pockets,'' Rohrabacher said.

Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., chairman of the House Budget Committee, appealed for bipartisanship.

''I do recognize that we're tired and exhausted and it's been a long road,'' he said. ''Maybe for just one moment in this session ... we could set aside the political differences and the partisan attacks and all of the finger-pointing and all the excuses and, maybe for just that moment, focus on the interest of the country.''

(OCT. 27) UPI - Soviet envoy Yevgeny Primakov arrived in Baghdad Saturday for talks with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein following indications the United States is considering ending the Persian Gulf crisis with a military strike.

Sources have said U.S. Secretary of State James Baker will travel to Saudi Arabia next week to discuss the possibility of a preemptive strike to drive Iraqi forces from occupied Kuwait. Washington officials confirmed Baker will visit the kingdom but would not say what he would discuss with Saudi leaders.

In New York, after seesaw trading on reports about both war and peace in the Middle East, oil prices fell in a confused market Friday, with the benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude closing at $33.01 a barrel after trading as high as $35.40 and low as $32.85 a barrel.

Primakov, who is seeking a peaceful solution to the crisis, told reporters in Baghdad he was not carrying a message to Saddam from any of the world leaders he has met with in recent weeks.

The high-ranking Soviet envoy first met with Saddam Oct. 5 and his optimistic outlook raised hopes a settlement could be reached through negotiation.

But Primakov said Friday after a meeting in Cairo with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak that Iraq should not be rewarded for its aggression.

''I am convinced that we can change the situation entirely without resorting to the military option,'' Primakov said after meeting Mubarak.

''(But) we must not reward anyone for what he has done,'' he added, in a veiled reference to reports he was negotiating a peace plan by which Iraq would withdraw from Kuwait in return for two strategic Kuwaiti islands in the gulf.

The report, denied by Moscow and Baghdad, was criticized by many world leaders who said the withdrawal from Kuwait must be unconditional.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev said Saturday that Saddam would be ''very much mistaken'' if he thinks he can come between nations that opposed his takeover of Kuwait and skirt the U.N.-approved embargo in the gulf.

''The world community has acted in a uniform, decisive and united manner. President Hussein cannot base his calculations on the idea that he can separate us from each other.,'' Gorbachev said during a visit to Spain.

Despite Primakov's meeting Oct. 5 with Saddam in Baghdad, the Soviet envoy was not acting as a mediator between the Iraq president and other world leaders, an Egyptian official said, but was seeking to discover a peaceful solution to the crisis.

State-owned Cairo Radio said Primakov would be in Baghdad Saturday and would probably meet Saddam and other Iraqi leaders. Baghdad Radio made no comment on an impending visit.

The Soviet Union has not joined the U.S.-led multinational force deployed in the gulf to counter Iraqi aggression, but it has supported U.N. resolutions demanding a complete withdrawal from Kuwait and has said it would join any U.N.-backed effort to oust the Iraqis from the emirate.

President Bush will travel to Saudi Arabia on Thanksgiving Day to spend the holiday with U.S. troops, administration officials said. The trip will come near the end of a 10-day trip to Europe and the Middle East.

The president will join the American troops for a traditional turkey dinner with all the trimmings. He will spend a few hours in the oil-rich kingdom before traveling to Egypt.

The State Department late Friday issued a warning to Americans overseas that the risks of terrorism in Europe and the Middle East were increasing.

Baghdad Radio reported Saturday that Jordan's prime minister gave Saddam a message in Baghdad from King Hussein, but did not reveal its contents. It said Saddam sent Hussein a message of thanks for his stand in the crisis.

Jordan, which has had a spotty record on compliance with economic sanctions imposed by the United Nations against Iraq, has halted several shipments of food and medicine bound for Iraq in recent days.

Also Saturday, the exiled oil minister of Kuwait accused Iraq of stealing hundreds of millions of dollars worth of oil equipment from the occupied emirate and said Kuwait was losing $60 million a day in lost oil exports.

Rashid Al Ameeri also said Kuwait had $100 billion in foreign investment that allowed the government-in-exile to operate in the aftermath of the invasion, according to a report from Egypt's semi- official Middle East News Agency.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (OCT. 27) UPI - The New Jersey Nets have scheduled a press conference Sunday, in all likelihood to announce the signing of Derrick Coleman, No. 1 pick in June's NBA draft.

Coleman's signing would end four months of sometimes bitter negotiations. The 6-foot-10, 235-pound forward from Syracuse, is to sign a contract that could earn him $16 million over five years.

It is believed to contain incentives ranging from $50,000 to $200,000 for winning the rookie of the year award or making the all-rookie team in his first season. It also provides a $1 million signing bonus.

The first four years are guaranteed, with the fifth year giving the Nets an option on his services. They will have three choices that fifth year: waive Coleman and free themselves of any obligation; pick up his option and pay his full salary, or let him test the free agent waters and have the right of first refusal.

With an average salary of $3 million per year, Coleman becomes the highest-paid rookie in NBA history, and is the highest-paid Net, eclipsing Sam Bowie's $2.6 million per annum. This season the Nets will pay Coleman about $2.5 million out of a salary cap of $9.3 million for the team.

Coleman said it would be two weeks before he was physically ready to play, even though he had been practicing himself.

''There is an awful lot I have to do now,'' said Coleman. ''Even simple things like finding a place to live. Everybody else already has done that.''

At Syracuse, Coleman was the 1989-90 Big East Player of the Year. He is the all-time leading college rebounder with 1,537 boards.

He was the Orangemen's all-time leading scorer with 2,143 points, the only player in NCAA history to collect 2,000 points, 1,400 rebounds and 300 blocks.

CAIRO, EGYPT (OCT. 27) UPI - Police killed two Egyptian Moslem fundamentalists and arrested five others Saturday in connection with the assassination of a high-ranking government official whose murder was initially blamed on pro-Iraqi Palestinian terrorists, informed sources said.

Authorities banned Egyptian news media from writing about the developments and said foreign publications would be seized if they contained any information about the case. Egyptian television and radio, controlled by the state, broadcast nothing about the arrests.

Sources said police arrested the five Moslem extremists at an undisclosed location and then went to Cairo University to arrest two more suspects, who were shot dead when they tried to flee.

The sources could not identify the two victims or the five who were under arrest, but said they were believed to have killed Speaker of Parliament Rifaat El Mahgoub two weeks ago.

It was not immediately clear if the five were charged in the case. Egypt's state of emergency, declared almost a decade ago following the assassination of President Anwar Sadat by fundamentalists, gives police broad powers to arrest suspects without charge.

Mahgoub, four policemen and a driver were killed when men on two motorcycles opened fire with machine guns on his motorcade in the center of Cairo. The assassins escaped from the scene, one of them in a taxi.

His death came only a week after Egypt accused Iraq of sending Palestinian terrorists into the country with a hit list of government officials and orders to destabilize the government of President Hosni Mubarak, a strong supporter of the United States in the Gulf crisis.

Mubarak warned Palestinians in Egypt before the assassination to be careful and avoid pro-Iraqi agents.

But Iraq denied it was linked to the assassination and said Egyptians had killed Mahgoub to protest Egypt's pro U.S. stance in the Persian Gulf.

Mahgoub, the No. 2 man in the government after Mubarak, had been a strong opponent of the fundamentalist movement. In the past week some Egyptian news media, still working on the theory Mahgoub was killed by pro-Iraqi terrorists, said Moslem fundamentalists may have aided in the killing.

Ahmad, Al Abrashi, director of the government press center, said the ban on publishing information about the case aapplied only to local newspapers and magazines and not to foreign media.

He said international publications containing stories about the assassination would be seized when they arrived in the country and that local newspapers will not be allowed to use wire dispatches about the arrests.

''As a foreign media it's up to you to publish on this subject, my responsibility is confined to local media,'' he told United Press International. ''It is an ordinary measure and I think it will not last long.''

Sources said Egypt may have ordered the news blackout because it was planning to arrest other Egyptians and did not want to endanger the investigation. Some Western observers suggested the government did not want it known Egyptians were responsible for the murder because of tensions created by the Gulf crisis.

NEW YORK (OCT. 27) UPI - The Daily News said Saturday it managed to publish and deliver more than half of its normal run despite intensified efforts by striking workers to stop distribution of the nation's second-largest newspaper.

News spokeswoman Lisa Robinson said 710,000 newspapers were put out on the street overnight, an increase of about 100,000 papers from Friday. A normal press run for the News is just under 1.2 million, she said.

The struggle to publish the newspaper came as striking workers intenstified their efforts to stymie distribution on the third day of the walkout that has seen delivery trucks firebombed and scores of replacement workers pelted with bottles, stones and eggs.

A dozen striking News workers were arrested in overnight violence - including four men caught with a mini-cache of assorted ammunition, explosives, smoke bombs and weapons, said Sgt. Mary Wrensen, a police spokesman.

On Friday, the newspaper dismissed most of its 2,400 union work force as nine of its 10 unions decided to strike following a pre-dawn dispute Thursday over whether a pressman claiming a medical disability could sit down on the job at a Brooklyn plant.

Only the printers union said it would continue working, citing the need to protect their lifetime job guarantees - plans they made known months ago.

With scores of replacement deliverers, pressmen, machinists and others already on the job, the News said more workers - including reporters and editors - were brought in from Illinois and Florida to work on the paper.

Tom Pennacchio, secretary-treasurer for the Newspaper Guild, which represents some 800 reporters and editors, said the unions would try to rally public support for a boycott.

He said no talks have been scheduled between management and the unions.

The strike brought to a boil a simmering dispute that began 10 months ago when the Tribune Co. - which owns the News - opened contract talks vowing to seek millions of dollars in cost reductions and impose sweeping control of hours and working conditions.

The company has insisted union concessions are essential to keep the newspaper from drowning in red ink.

Labor leaders, from the outset, have claimed that the company wanted to provoke a strike to break the unions as part of a plan to either close or sell the tabloid - the second-largest circulation newspaper in the country after the Los Angeles Times.

The unions have been working without a contract since March 31.

PHILADELPHIA (OCT. 27) UPI - If your toddler screams like a banshee when you dress her as a witch for Halloween it may be because she thinks she is one, says a child care specialist.

Liz Armistead, director of La Salle University's Building Blocks Child Development Center, says little children see things very literally.

''Up to about four years of age children are still developing their perception of reality,'' Armistead said recently. ''They are just starting to figure out what is real and what is not. Then Halloween comes along and throws everything off.''

She said most toddlers don't understand that although they may look like a witch or goblin in their costume, they are still the same person underneath.

Parents, she said, are often astonished when their little children don't share their enthusiasm, but they can make an effort to change that.

''Get started ahead of time,'' and tell the child what to expect, said Armistead.

''Make sure to emphasize that the costume doesn't change the person underneath it's just a special way of dressing, like wearing pajamas to bed and dressy clothes to church,'' said Armistead.

She said parents should let their children have a say in what they want to be for Halloween. Many will choose something with which they are familiar, like an animal, a pumpkin or an angel.

Above all, Armistead said, don't put a mask on the child. Instead, use some makeup.

And take the child out for trick or treat during the daytime, when things are not so frightening, and fewer kids who are out to scare the pants off people are present.

Don't be surprised if everything you do comes to naught, Armistead said.

''Expect the unexpected with children and you will all have a better time,'' she said.

MIAMI (OCT. 27) UPI - The director of the U.S. Bureau of Prisons denied reports that former Panamanian dictator Manuel Noriega receives privileged treatment in his Dade County prison cell.

But a south Florida congressman said he was not satisfied with the Bureau of Prisons' response to complaints about Noriega's accommodations, and plans to inspect Noriega's cell next month.

''There are still some unanswered questions,'' said Rep. Larry Smith, D-Hollywood. ''He seems to have gotten more favorable treatment than anyone I know.''

Smith and 71 other federal lawmakers signed a petition Tuesday demanding that the Bureau of Prisons explain why Noriega has an exercise bike, color television and access to a private shower and a telephone.

The government also has provided a separate conference room with a computer, paper shredder and safe for Noriega's legal team.

Prisons director J. Michael Quinlan said Noriega ''experiences much greater restriction than other inmates'' because of his classified status as former leader of Panama.

''Any particular accommodations made to him are in recognition of the security issues he presents in the facility, and the possible needs his attorneys will have in handling classified documents in the preparation of the case,'' Quinlan told The Miami Herald Friday.

Part of the restrictions are for Noriega's protection, said prisons spokesman Dan Dunne. Inmates yelled and ''made gestures'' at Noriega once when he was allowed into a prison recreation area, Dunne said.

Because Noriega is isolated, he deserves the private shower and exercise bike, said his attorneys, Frank Rubino and Jon May.

''He doesn't get access to the volleyball courts, tennis courts, handball court, the weight room,'' Rubino said. ''He gets this lousy bicycle.''

The attorneys said the room with the computer, paper shredder and safe was set up by the government to handle some of the classified documents the lawyers will use in Noriega's defense.

''These are requirements that are imposed upon us by the classified information procedure act,'' May said.

Smith said he was ''skeptical'' that the government had to take such special actions. ''I believe they could probably bring him into the showers when other inmates are not in the room. They could exercise him at times when other inmates are not there,'' he said.

Noriega and 15 others were indicted by a federal grand jury in Miami in February 1988 on drug smuggling and money laundering charges. The former dictator, who was toppled in December by a U.S. invasion of his homeland, and four others are awaiting trial.

(OCT. 27) UPI - The House passed the deficit-cutting budget compromise this morning, wrapping up the session at about 7 a-m and sending the measure over to the Senate, which meets later today. The 490-BILLION-dollar deficit-reduction package includes higher taxes on the rich... higher gasoline and excise taxes for all Americans, and about 43-BILLION dollars in Medicare cuts. The House vote was 228-200, ending three weeks of frantic bargaining.

The Senate also is expected to take up a landmark clean-air bill today. The House broke a 13-year stalemate yesterday and approved the measure, which will require virtually every major industry to reduce emissions that cause acid rain, urban smog, toxic hazards and ozone depletion. WASHINGTON (OCT. 27) UPI - Mayor Marion Barry campaigned Saturday for a seat on the City Council despite being sentenced in federal court one day earlier to six months in prison for a drug possession conviction.

Anita Bonds, Barry's campaign manager, said the three-term mayor's bid for one of two at-large council seats would proceed as planned over the weekend with ''motorcades, community stops ... house parties ... canvassing walks and church services.''

''Marion Barry will continue his campaign for election to the City Council,'' Bonds said in a written statement. ''He is taking his case directly to the voters of this community. ... We remain confident that the voters will be right about voting for Barry on Tuesday Nov. 6.''

On Friday, Barry was sentenced to six months in jail and a $5,000 fine for his conviction on a misdemenor cocaine possession charge.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson also ordered one year's probation for Barry after his release from prison and told him to undergo periodic drug testing.

Barry's sentencing came 2 1/2 months after a jury convicted him on a single count of drug possession, acquitted him on another and deadlocked on 12 other counts.

Because he was convicted of a misdemeanor, Barry will not be forced to relinquish his office before his term ends Jan. 2. Under city law, he also can continue his bid for the at-large City Council seat in the Nov. 6 elections.

Barry remains free while he appeals the conviction. Under federal guidelines, a prison sentence six months or less cannot be appealed.

Bonds said while Barry ''is disappointed by the unusually harsh sentence that was imposed upon him ... he will continue his sobriety.''

Bonds added that since the sentencing, campaign phones have been ''innundated with well-wishers, financial pledges and expressions of support.''

''Bolstered by this outpouring of support from a broad cross-section of the community, we are moving forward to win the election,'' Bonds said.

Barry, who served four years on the City Council as a Democrat before he was first elected mayor of the nation's capital in 1978, announced in June that he would not seek a fourth-term as mayor.

In September, he changed his political affiliation to Independent to run for the council.

Political observers said Barry wanted to run for the seat because he needed four more years of government service to retire with a full pension and the deadline had passed for him to run as a Democrat.

Barry, however, dismissed those assertions as ''insensitive, insulting and just plain insane.''

-Deductions: A 3 percent limit on itemized deductions claimed by taxpayers with adjusted gross incomes higher than $100,000 a year.

-Exemptions: Gradual elimination of the $2,050 personal exemption for single people who earn more than $100,000 and couples filing jointly who earn more than $150,000.

-Gasoline taxes: A 5-cent-a-gallon increase in the federal gasoline tax.

-Sin taxes: Two-stage increase totalling 8 cents on a pack of cigarettes; $1 per ''proof gallon'' increase on liquor tax; increase from 16 to 32 cents on a six pack of beer; raise of 3 cents on a bottle of table wine.

-Luxury taxes: a 10 percent surtax on on cars over $30,000, boats over $100,000, airplanes over $250,000 and furs over $10,000.

-Health insurance tax: Raises the cap on income subject to the 1.45 percent Medicare tax from $51,300 to $125,000.

-State and local employees: Extends Social Security taxes to state and local employees without other pensions.

-Income tax credit: A five-year expansion of the earned income tax credit for the working poor.

-Oil: $2.5 billion in tax benefits for oil and gas drillers and $1.4 billion in tax breaks for small businesses over five years.

-Medicare: About $10 billion savings in Medicare by increasing the deductible from $75 to $100 and a gradual increase in premiums from $28.60 this year to $29.90 next year and $46.50 in 1995. About $34 billion in savings through reduced reimbursements to doctors and hospitals.

-Medicaid: The program of health insurance for the poor would realize savings of about $600 million over 5 years through drug discounts and from paying private insurance if it is cheaper, although providing expanded coverage for children, the frail elderly and the mentally retarded.

Farm: Savings through commodity program reforms and loan program reductions.

Fees: Increased fees for services from a number of agencies such as the Coast Guard, patent and trademark, customs and veterans housing

Veterans: Savings in veterans programs such as compensation, pensions, housing and medical care.

Airports: Increases Airport and Airway Trust Fund excise tax by 25 percent.

Telephones: Extends 3 percent excise tax, which would have ended, on telephone service.

HONOLULU (OCT. 27) UPI - President Bush, mixing diplomacy with politics in a welcomed escape from Washington, convened leaders of 11 tiny Pacific island nations Saturday for an unusual palm tree conference.

Billed by the administration as an unprecedented gathering of the strategic Pacific Basin nations, but one with no set agenda or expectation of decisions or big announcements, Bush opened the five-hour summit meeting by telling the officials gathered, ''This is a meeting in my view that is long overdue.

''It's a great opportunity for the president of the United States to hear from you.''

Wedged into the middle of a four-day political swing out West, Bush welcomed the sunny reprieve after a week of being whipsawed by near- disastrous budget talks and watching his popularity plunge with less than two weeks until the Nov. 6 elections.

Turning eagerly to the foreign policy arena where he has acknowledged he is the most at ease, Bush greeted each of the representatives from 11 Pacific island nations with ceremonial fanfare.

''I come here with no agenda,'' he told the leaders, ''No agenda. I'm here to hear from you ... exactly what's on all your minds.''

Set at the University Of Hawaii's East-West Center, complete with dozens of demonstrators protesting his Persian Gulf policy and continued destruction of chemical weapons in the area, Bush nonetheless was pleased to watch legislators back in Washington finally pass a budget resolution after eight long months of delay.

He began the day early, swimming in the ocean off Waikiki Beach, declaring ''That's for sure,'' when asked if he was glad the budget mess was behind him.

Officials acknowledged up front the mini-summit meeting was not expected to produce any major new initiatives, or really invite too much controversy among the participants though the U.S. program to destroy deadly chemical weapons in the region was sure to be broached.

Addressing a fund-raiser late Friday for Rep. Pat Saiki, R-Hawaii, Bush said the time was right for the session. ''I think it's a good time and I think it's about time that an American president sat down with the heads of these countries out there and told them we are one in our respect for and love of the Pacific,'' Bush said.

An administration official, briefing reporters before Bush headed West, described the session more as a chance for the often-neglected leaders in the key area to talk personally with the president.

''The way the island leaders deal with issues is through discussions, getting together, having a chance to sit down and just schmooze things out,'' said the official, who asked not to be identified. ''And I think that's the general perspective of this.''

Thirteen leaders were invited by Bush for the session, though not all were able to attend. Among those attending were Prime Minister Geoffrey Henry of the Cook Islands, Prime Minister Ratu Sir Kamisese Mara of Fiji, President Ieremia Tabai of Kiribati, President Amata Kabua of the Marshall Islands, President John Haglegam of Micronesia, President Bernard Dowiyogo of Nauru, Prime Minister Rabbie Namaliu of Papua New Guineau, Prime Minister Bikenibeu Paeniu of Tuvalu and Prime Minister Tofilau Eti Alesana of Western Samoa.

Representatives of the Solomon Islands and Tonga also were included.

The 13 nations, accounting for a total population of 5.1 million, receive only $20 million in aid from the United States - $10 million in development assistance and the rest from tuna treaty licensing fees in the regions.

Though hinting that a push for more private investment might be forthcoming, the official said, ''There will not be what you would probably characterize as a major initiative.''

High among the topics likely to be discussed was the crisis in the Persian Gulf and how many of the island countries, most the size of a typical New England state, have fared since Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2 and sent the price of oil skyrocketing.

''They've all been hit by very substantial rises in oil prices,'' the administration official said. And while lending their own efforts to the international collaboration to force Iraq out of Kuwait, ''they are part of this broad problem,'' he said.

Economic aid, of course, was expected at the table, though the official indicated the administration was more likely to ''look to the Overseas Private Investment Corp.,'' or OPIC, for any move to encourage private sector investment.

Environmental issues also were expected to arise, as many islands have questioned the administration's attempt to delay international action on global warming and expressed concern about Bush's move to eliminate chemical weapons.

One area of concern, the official said, was a possible rise in the sea level that would be devastating for a small island. ''There are estimates that if there was sea rise of about a meter, a number of the countries would disappear since they are not many feet above sea level, '' the official said.

Of special concern on that front also is the U.S. chemical weapons disposal system at Johnston Atoll, built to detroy obsolete chemical weapons at the island 825 miles west southwest of Hawaii.

The plant, which began destroying weapons in July, is supposed to serve as a prototype for simliar plants in the future at eight mainland sites.

Many Pacific nations fear an accident could pollute the entire basin and they have accused the military of using the Pacific as a ''dumping ground'' for these weapons.

ELMONT, N.Y. (OCT. 27) UPI - The mood of horse racing's showcase event switched from joy to grief Saturday when a pair of horses died in two of the first three Breeders' Cup races.

Mr. Nickerson, a top sprinter and a multiple stakes winner, died of a possible heart attack during the running of the Sprint at Belmont Park. Less than an hour later, champion filly Go For Wand stumbled, fell and broke her right front leg just a sixteenth of a mile from the end of her $1 million Distaff showdown with older champion Bayakoa.

Go for Wand became the fourth to die in two days of racing at Belmont Park. Why Not Try and Dinner Quest both suffered mortal injuries in back-to-back races at Belmont Friday and were humanely put to death.

In the first Breeders' Cup race, the Sprint, Mr. Nickerson suffered an apparent heart attack and died on the track. His jockey, Chris Antley, suffered a probable broken right collarbone. Another horse, Shaker Knit, tripped over Mr. Nickerson, fell and was seriously, perhaps mortally, injured.

Veterinarians were still working on him on the Belmont backside when Go for Wand suffered her life-ending accident.

Mr. Nickerson, sitting about five lengths off the lead, suddenly threw his head in the air in obvious distress. A few strides later, he collapsed on the racetrack. Shaker Knit, who was trailing Mr. Nickerson, fell over the sprawling horse. Safely Kept won the race.

Jose Santos, who was aboard Shaker Knit, was not injured. He returned in the next race to win the Breeders' Cup Juvenile to win with undefeated filly Meadow Star.

Track veterinarians reported that Mr. Nickerson died shortly after they arrived at the scene. His condition may have also been caused by a burst blood vessel, they reported.

Go for Wand, owned by Christiana Stable and trained by Billy Badgett, went into the Distaff ranked as the No. 1 thoroughbred in the United States. She was defeated just once in eight starts this year and once in four starts in 1989. She never finished worse than second.

The Deputy Minister filly won last year's Breeders' Cup Juvenile Fillies and was elected the 2-year-old filly champion.

The Distaff was Go for Wand's first race against the 6-year-old Bayakoa, winner of the 1989 Distaff and the 1989 older female champion.

The race was the most highly anticipated of the $10 million Breeders Cup card and, for the first 1 1-16 miles, it was everything the sellout crowd had hoped.

The two hooked up side-by-side an eighth of a mile out of the gate and raced that way until the accident. Go for Wand had the lead most of the way, but Bayakoa, on the outside with Laffit Pincay, pulled even with her in mid-stretch.

The two raced as a team until Go for Wand took a bad step on her left front foot at the sixteenth and went down, shattering her right front ankle as she tumbled into the rail.

Veterinarians said she also ruptured several ligaments and suffered massive damage to the all-important suspensory ligament. There was no way to save her.

Track personnel put up a screen between the downed Go for Wand and the grandstand, but everyone present knew what was happening behind the blue tarpaulin.

The white ambulance that had just carried off the carcass of Mr. Nickerson then did the same with Go for Wand.

MOSCOW (OCT. 28) UPI - The Soviet government Saturday ordered Interior Ministry forces to be used to prevent ethnic clashes between Moldavian vigilantes and the Gagauz Turkic minority who declared their southern region independent.

''We are seeking to do everything possible to prevent bloodshed,'' said parliament chairman Anatoly Lukyanov, the acting president in the absence of Mikhail Gorbachev who is visiting Spain and then will go on to France.

Lukyanov said that so far there have been no casualties in the Moldavia where thousands of self-described Moldavian ''volunteers'' were besieging the southern breakaway region of the Gagauz, a Turkic people who make up 3.5 percent of Moldavia's 4.2 million people.

The crisis in Moldavia's Gagauz region began Thursday when the Gagauzi held secret elections to create their own legislature and to secede from Moldavia. Irate Moldavians by the busloads then streamed to the Gagauz region.

The official Tass news agency reported Saturday that ''volunteers continued to move to the border with the southern areas of Moldavia on Friday evening (and) they packed roads leading to the Komrat and Chadyr Lunga districts.

It said Moldavian President Mircha Snegur and other Moldavian leaders ''appealed to the government of the U.S.S.R. to send units of Interior Ministry troops to the (Gagauz) region to keep order.''

Snegur promised that if the troops were sent, the volunteers would be removed, Tass said. ''The corresponding order was then given by the Soviet government to the Interior Ministry,'' it said.

It was not known how many troops might be send or where they would come from. Moldavian leaders on Friday were reported considering asking that the Interior Ministry troops stationed in the Moldavian capital of Kishinev be used.

But the Interior Ministry has been unwilling to use its troops because of the condemnation it received after interventions in Tbilisi, Georgia, April 1989 and in Baku, Azerbaijan, in January 1990.

Twenty-one Georgian nationalist were killed in the first incident when troops broke up a sit-in, and more than 60 Azerbaijanis in the second in Baku when the soldiers sought to stop pogroms against Armenians and quell an uprising by the Popular Front against Soviet rule.

The unwillingness of the military and Interior Ministry to act without clear and distinct orders has been labeled by army men ''the Tbilisi syndrome.''

Moldavia's parliament on Friday declared the election results invalid in the Gagauzi-dominated southern regions and imposed a two-month state of emergency in the Chadyr-Lunga, Komrat and Bulkanesht.

Tass said Saturday that the Gagauz provisional leadership is prepared now for a moratorium on the election results, but Tass reported the situation still tense.

It also said that negotiations have begun between Gaguz representatives and deputies of the Moldavian parliament in Chimishliya Saturday and that the talks had the full backing of the Soviet government.

The Moldavian crisis is tied to what conservatives have called an ''epidemic of sovereignty declarations'' in which local regions are proclaiming independence from republics that themselves have acted with similar defiance toward the Soviet government.

Gagauzi, who speak their own language, number just 173,000 in the entire Soviet Union, with 138,000 in Moldavia, 27,000 in the Ukraine and the others scattered throughout the rest of the country.

Moldavians, who speak Romanian and retain strong cultural ties with their native land, make up nearly two-thirds of the Soviet republic's people.

About one-quarter of the population is split between Ukrainians and Russians, with Gagauzi and other ethnic groups having much smaller numbers.

CAIRO, Egypt (OCT. 28) UPI - Police killed two Egyptian Moslem fundamentalists Saturday and arrested at least six others believed responsible for the assassination of a high-ranking government official whose murder was initially blamed on pro-Iraqi Palestinian terrorists, sources and reports said.

The Middle East News Agency said police stormed four fundamentalist hideouts at dawn, arresting six members of the Al Jihad (Holy War) Moslem extremist organization ''who took part in the planning and the implementation'' of the assassination of Speaker of Parliament Rifaat El Mahgoub.

Members of Al Jihad, headed by a blind Moslem preacher named Omar Abdulrahman, were convicted of assassinating former Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in 1981.

Sources and the semi-official news agency said one of the suspects in the Mahgoub killing led police to the Cairo University department of agriculture where police killed two fundamentalists and wounded a third in a pitched gun battle that left one police officer wounded.

Mahgoub, the No. 2 man in the Egyptian government, was slain along with five others two weeks ago when assassins riding motorcycles opened fire on his motorcade in the heart of Cairo.

His death came only a week after Cairo accused Baghdad of sending Palestinian terrorists into Egypt with a hit list of officials and orders to destabilize the government of President Hosni Mubarak, a strong ally of the United States in the gulf crisis.

Iraq denied it was linked to the brutal assassination, charging it was carried out by Egyptians unhappy with Mubarak's pro-U.S. stance in the gulf.

Al Jihad is a banned group of Moslem extremists opposed to the Mubarak government and who may have chosen to assassinate Mahgoub because he used his position in Parliament to promote anti- fundamentalist measures.

MENA said police seized weapons, motorcycles, explosives, leaflets and forged documents in the dawn raids.

It said one of those arrested led police to Cairo University where he had an afternoon appointment with four colleagues. But the four apparently became suspicious and one opened fire on police, sparking the gunfight, the agency said.

Sources said others may have been arrested in that incident.

Authorities originally banned local media from writing about the developments because they did not want to undermine the afternoon ambush. Television and radio in Egypt are controlled by the state.

MENA and Interior Ministry sources did not identify the two fundamentalists who were killed or the six under arrest, and it was not immediately known if they had been charged with Mahgoub's death.

Egypt's state of emergency, declared almost a decade ago following the assassination of Sadat, gives police broad powers to arrest suspects without charge.

Ahmad Al Abrashi, director of the government press center, said earlier Saturday the ban on publishing information about the case applied only to local newspapers and magazines and not to foreign media.

SCOTTSDALE, AZ (OCT. 28) UPI - Elliot Roosevelt, President Franklin D. Roosevelt's second oldest son who distinguished himself as a World War II flier and later with books about his famous parents, died Saturday, a family spokesman said. He was 80.

Roosevelt, the third of the five Roosevelt children, died Saturday in the Phoenix suburb of Scottsdale, where he had lived since the 1950s. The cause of his death was not released.

His death leaves only one surviving child of Franklin and Eleanor - James, 82, a former California congressman.

Elliott Roosevelt, born Sept. 23, 1910 in New York City, entered the U.S. Air Corps as a captain in 1940 and was a decorated brigadier general when World War II ended in 1945.

He commanded the multi-national aerial reconnaissance wing that played a key role in the Allies' 1944 D-day landings on Normandy beach, as well as the invasions of North Africa and Sicily. In all, he flew 89 missions during World War II and was decorated for valor by the United States, France, Morocco and England.

In 1946, Roosevelt launched a writing career with a best-selling book, ''As He Saw It,'' which detailed his experiences as his father's aide at five historic wartime summit conferences.

He later authored a triology about his parents and in 1983 wrote ''The Conservators,'' in which he stated his philosophy about the survival of the planet. He recently published the Eleanor Roosevelt Mysteries, which cast his mother in the role of a fictional detective.

Elliot Roosevelt's political career included a stint as mayor of Miami Beach from 1965 to 1969 and later as a Democractic National Committee member from Florida. His business ventures included advertising, radio station management and ranching.

He married Elizabeth Donner in 1931 and they had one son. They divorced in 1933 and later that year he married Ruth Googins, who bore him three children. His third wife, from 1944 to 1950, was actress Faye Emerson.

He married Minnewa Bell in 1951, and Patricia Whitehead, his fifth wife, in 1960.

President Roosevelt was elected the nation's 32nd president in 1932 and was serving an unprecedented fourth term when he died in 1945, shortly before the end of World War II. His widow, Eleanor, died in 1962.

The eldest of their children, Anna Roosevelt Halstead, died in 1975; John, the youngest, died in 1981; and Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. died on his 74th birthday, Aug. 17, 1988, of lung cancer.

Elliot Roosevelt is survived by his widow; eight children - William, Chandler Lindsley, Elliot Jr., David B., James, Ford, Gretchen and David M. - 21 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Memorial services were set for Tuesday at Our Lady of Perpetual Help Church in Scottsdale. In lieu of flowers, the family asked that donations be made to the church or to the Mayo Clinic Foundation of Scottsdale.

(OCT. 27) UPI - After a 13-year legislative deadlock, Congress has passed and sent President Bush a historic clean-air bill. The Senate... following the lead taken by the House yesterday... voted 89-10 today to give final approval of the measure. The bill will require almost every major industry to make deep and costly cuts in emissions causing urban smog, acid rain, toxic hazards or ozone depletion. White House officials have indicated that Bush will sign the bill into law, despite warnings that it will cost thousands of jobs and accelerate the nation's economic downturn.

The Senate later today takes up a bi-partisan deficit-reduction plan approved this morning by the House. The massive five-year plan was forged in three weeks of frantic bargaining and is backed by President Bush. The approximately 490-BILLION-dollar deficit-trimming package increases the tax burden on the rich, raises gasoline and excise taxes for all Americans and trims Medicare by about 43-BILLION dollars. House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta says failure to pass the plan would ''doom our economy to a deep recession, without question.''

The State Department is warning Americans overseas of an increased risk of terrorism in Europe and the Middle East. The department issued an advisory yesterday, saying the government has received information believed ''specific and credible'' regarding a possible terrorist threat to passenger ships operating in the eastern Mediterranean Sea. Officials say they are taking the threat seriously. And they say they are particularly concerned about aircraft operating in Europe or the Middle East.

Family and friends of American hostage Terry Anderson today appealed to his captors in Lebanon to give him- quote- ''the gift of freedom'' for his 43th birthday. The news correspondent is the longest-held of the Western captives in the Middle East. He was kidnapped on March 16th, 1984, by pro-Iranian Moslem fundamentalists.

Firefighters and other safety experts are urging Americans to replace smoke detector batteries at the same time they turn their clocks back tonight. The president of the International Association of Fire Chiefs says most homes have smoke detectors but half of them don't work because they need fresh batteries. He says a working smoke detector doubles the chances of surviving a home fire. Standard time returns to most of the nation early tomorrow.

NEW YORK (OCT. 28) UPI - Colleagues mourning the death of CBS founder William S. Paley remembered him Saturday as a broadcast genius whose committment to television and radio journalism set the industry standard for excellence.

''The pioneer era in the history of broadcasting dies with William Paley,'' said Walter Cronkite, a former CBS anchor and managing editor of the CBS Evening News. ''Our industry may never see his like again. He understood, as have few others, the necessity of giving broadcast news a liberty to perform without commercial or political interference. In this he established a standard for which all of us who live in this democracy can be grateful.

''All of us will mourn his passing,'' Cronkite said.

Paley, who bought a small unprofitable group of radio stations for $400,000 62 years ago and parlayed it into the CBS media giant, died at his Manhattan home Friday following a bout with pneumonia. He was 89.

A memorial service for Paley was scheduled for the morning of Nov. 12 at the Temple Emanu'El in Manhattan.

Dan Rather, Cronkite's successor, remembered his boss simply as a ''giant of 20th century business, a man committed to excellence.''

Added CBS president Frank Stanton: ''William Paley was a programming genius. Call it skill, inspiration or luck. It takes all of them and he had all of them in abundance. Broadcasting will miss him.''

Paley, who remained chairman of the network to his death, was a legendary media executive who cared deeply about news and invested millions of dollars in covering events around the world.

For more than a half-century, he wielded enormous power and brought his brand of news and entertainment into the homes of millions of Americans.

He gave the radio airwaves in the 1930s and 1940s such stars as Will Rogers, Fred Allen, George Burns, Goodman Ace, Jack Benny, Bing Crosby and Frank Sinatra. He lured from rival NBC some of its most popular performers, including Eddie Cantor and Al Jolson, to give the radio network its reputation for wealth, power and glamor.

The roster of CBS television stars over the years also included Lucille Ball, Carol Burnett, Mary Tyler Moore, Red Skelton, Ed Sullivan, Arthur Godfrey, Jackie Gleason and many more.

His impact on news was also immense. It was Paley's CBS that in 1935 hired Edward R. Murrow, who went on to cover World War II and assembled a team - called thew ''Murrow Boys'' - which later became the core of CBS News. In the 1950s and 1960s, CBS News had many of the best and brightest in the industry such as Cronkite, Eric Sevareid and Howard K. Smith.

Paley was born Sept. 28, 1901, in Chicago, to Samuel and Goldie Paley. His father was a Russian immigrant. He graduated from Western Military Academy in Alton, Ill., in 1918 and briefly attended the University of Chicago. In 1922 he received a bachelor of science degree from the University of Pennsylvania and went to work managing his father's Philadelphia cigar factory. He was intrigued by radio.

In 1928, at age 27, Paley paid $400,000 - which he had acquired through the family firm - for United Independent Broadcasters, a small, financially troubled New York radio network.

Following World War II, Paley devoted his energies to the infant CBS Television Network. In 1946, there were only 6,000 TV sets in the United States and CBS could reach only a few of them. Today, nearly all American homes have television sets and CBS can reach almost all of them.

Paley retired in 1983, remaining on the 14-member board of directors.

At the time, he owned nearly 2 million shares of CBS stock, worth about $74 million. He received $5.4 million in annual dividends and his private wealth was estimated at more than $500 million.

Three years later - two weeks short of his 85th birthday - he again became chairman in what became known as the battle of the boardroom.

In a daylong board meeting Paley teamed with Laurence Tisch, who had acquired 25 percent of CBS Inc., to force the ouster of Thomas H. Wyman as chairman, president and chief executive of CBS. Tisch became president and chief executive.

Paley's first wife was Dorothy Hart Hearst. The couple had a son and a daughter. They were divorced in 1947.

Later that year he married Barbara ''Babe'' Cushing, one of New York's best dressed and most respected socialites. She was the sister- in-law of publisher John Hay Whitney, who became one of Paley's best friends and the model for an aristocratic lifestyle that Paley was quick to adopt after marrying Babe.

She also gave him a son and daughter - Kate and William. Babe Paley died after a long bout with cancer in 1978, and although Paley was still considered one of New York's most eligible bachelors, he never remarried.

(OCT. 27) UPI - White House officials indicate that President Bush will sign a historic clean-air bill that was passed and sent to him today by Congress. The Senate followed the House lead and approved the measure, breaking 13 years of legislative deadlock. The bill will require almost every major industry to make deep and costly cuts in emissions.

Heeding pleas from leaders of both parties, the House today approved a massive five-year deficit-reduction plan. The 490-BILLION-dollar package now goes to the Senate, which is expected to take up the measure this afternoon. President Bush said from Honolulu that he's ''very pleased'' about the House vote and expressed optimism that the Senate will follow suit.

Baghdad Radio reports that Jordan's King Hussein has sent a message to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein. The broadcast did NOT reveal the contents of the message, but it said Saddam sent Hussein a message of thanks for his stand in the Persian Gulf crisis. Jordan has had a spotty record on compliance with U-N economic sanctions against Iraq.

Soviet President Gorbachev says Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein is ''very much mistaken'' if he thinks he can divide nations that oppose his invasion of Kuwait. Speaking to reporters in Madrid, Spain, Gorbachev repeated his view that a political solution would be the best way out of the Gulf crisis.

Voters went to the polls in Pakistan today to choose provincial governments. The Election Commission says at least 23 people were killed and 40 wounded in election-related violence through out the country. Reports nation-wide indicate that turnout was far lower than in the National Assembly elections three days ago.

President Bush today is mixing diplomacy with politics in a welcomed escape from the nation's capital. The president has summoned the leaders of 11 tiny Pacific island nations to Honolulu for an unprecedented gathering. The unusual five-hour summit has NO set agenda or expectation of decisions or big announcements.

CALAIS, France (OCT. 28) UPI - Striking workers seeking a pay raise blocked access to the French entrances to the tunnel under construction beneath the English Channel Saturday, construction company officials said.

Some 100 labor union pickets from the communist-led General Confederation of Labor union and the Christian-inspired French Confederation of Workers blocked two entrances to the tunnel works near the port of Calais, said the Transmanche Link company.

Only some 40 percent of the labor force braved the picket line to attend work on the tunnel. French tunnelers are expected to meet up over the next few days with workers tunneling from England.

UNITED NATIONS (OCT. 28) UPI - The Security Council met Saturday to consider applying new measures to force Iraq to leave Kuwait, but delayed its action for two days while diplomats warned a wrong move may worsen the Persian Gulf crisis.

The postponement until Monday was requested by the Soviet Union amid speculation a solution to the nearly 3-month-old crisis might be on the way way in light of the flurry of diplomatic moves between Moscow and Baghdad.

Yemeni permanent U.N. representative Abdalla Saleh Al-Ashtal told reporters, ''There are lots of movements in the (gulf) region and outside for a solution.

''At the same time there are talks of a war,'' he said. ''It's serious.''

Al-Ashtal, who among non-aligned ambassadors actively worked in the Security Council for a diplomatic solution to the crisis, warned that any wrong move by the council could tip the balance toward armed confrontation.

A senior U.S. official, asked about the postponement, said the problem is not any splintering of the world coalition against Iraq, but merely a procedural complication caused by the time difference between Washington and Moscow. The Soviets want ample time to check with the Kremlin regarding the resolution.

U.S. officials said they expect a resolution will be passed Monday 15-0 or 14-0, depending on whether Cuba votes.

The 15-nation council will be voting on a proposal that reiterates a demand Iraq withdraw unconditionally from and restore sovereignty to Kuwait, which it has occupied since Aug. 2.

The proposal, finalized after long hours of negotiations late in the week, was meant to send a ''firm response'' to Iraq that it must pay for looting and destroying Kuwaiti properties, and oppressing Kuwaitis as well as foreigners caught in occupied Kuwait. It calls for release of all hostages.

Diplomats said the postponement was necessary to await the results of a meeting between Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and French President Francois Mitterrand in Paris Sunday and the visit by Soviet envoy Yevgeny Primakov to Baghdad.

They said Iraqi President Saddam Hussein sent a message to Mitterrand Friday and it would be the subject of discussions for the Paris meeting. There was no independent confirmation of Saddam's message to Mitterrand.

While speculating on a possible breakthrough in the Persian Gulf, U.N. diplomats were unable to say how the crisis would be solved. Their main objective has been to work out a peaceful solution, but they have expressed fears that Saddam's intransigence may lead to war.

Soviet U.N. Ambassador Yuliy Vorontsov told reporters after the council adjourned that Primakov himself requested the postponement. Vorontsov said his government hopes that the Baghdad talks will be ''fruitful.''

Asked whether he expects a breakthrough in the talks, Vorontsov said, ''Another visit, another hope.'' It will be a second visit for Primakov.

The president of the Security Council, British Ambassador David Hannay, warned reporters ''not to read too much'' into the brief postponement of the council's vote.

Hannay convened the Security Council to hear Kuwait's Ambassador Mohammad Abdulhassan and Vorontsov, and then ordered a recess until Monday.

Abdulhassan and Vorontsov castigated Saddam for showing no sign of complying with U.N. resolutions demanding a withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait. Vorontsov said the illegal occupation of Kuwait must be ''halted immediately.'' He said Moscow supports the resolution that will be voted on Monday.

The proposed resolution the council will vote on demands that Iraqi authorities free hostages immediately; stop ''mistreating and oppressing'' people living under the occupation forces; fulfill international obligations toward diplomats and foreigners by allowing them to leave if they wish to do so.

It requires that Iraq provide food, water and basic services necessary to the ''protection and well-being'' of Kuwaiti and third- country nationals in Kuwait and Iraq.

It raises particular concern for the well-being of the few remaining Western diplomats trapped in Kuwait City and in Iraq, and demanded that the Baghdad government take no action that would ''hinder these diplomatic and consular missions in the performance of their functions.''

It says those diplomatic functions include access to and protection of interests of their own nationals; it called on Iraq to rescind orders closing foreign missions in Kuwait city. Only the United States, Britain and France maintain embassies in Kuwait. Other countries either closed or moved their missions to Baghdad.

The proposal holds Iraq ''liable'' under internatinal law for ''loss, damage or injury arising in regard to Kuwait and third states, and their nationals and corporations, as a result of the invasion and illegal occupation of Kuwait.''

WASHINGTON (OCT. 28) UPI - Congress approved and sent to the White House Saturday a $15 billion foreign aid appropriations bill that cuts U.S. military aid to El Salvador and forgives Egypt's $6.7 billion military debt.

The legislation was rushed through the Senate and House as Congress pushed toward adjournment.

Under terms of the legislation, one-half of El Salvador's $85 million in military aid would be withheld unless the FMLN, the rebel group fighting the government in a 10-year civil war, refused to negotiate a peace settlement.

If the El Salvador government refuses to negotiate a peace settlement, no military aid would be provided.

The proposed cut is designed to pressure both the El Salvador government and the FMLN to seek a negotiated settlement under United Nations auspices.

But the bill, unlike the one originally approved in the Senate, would allow military aid now in the pipeline, estimated at about $20 million, to go to El Salvador.

Congress reluctantly approved the forgiveness of Egypt's debt, a top priority of the administration. Egypt was the first Arab nation to send its troops to Saudi Arabia to help United States forces in Operation Desert Shield.

In order for the debt to be forgiven, President Bush must take several steps, including certifying to Congress that the action would be in the U.S. national interest.

Congress earmarked aid for Israel, Egypt, Turkey, Greece and Portugal. But Jordan, which has refused to participate in the sanctions against Iraq, was denied any military aid. The bill does provide Jordan with economic assistance.

The bill includes $369 million for economic aid to East European countries and up to $20 million for Cambodia.

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (OCT. 28) UPI - The defense lawyer for the first U.S. national charged under Malaysia's harsh drug laws Saturday accused the postal and customs departments of breaching their own laws regarding key evidence.

Shafee Abdullah said under the law, a suspected parcel allegedly containing marijuana and addressed to Kerry Lane Wiley should not have been posted or delivered to his client because marijuana was listed as a prohibited item.

''So why send the marijuana to him? Why the discrimination? Shafee asked in a court hearing of the case, adding that if one followed the letter of the law, the postman who delivered the marijuana could also be said to have been trafficking.

Wiley, 38, a computer lecturer from Sacramento, Calif., was arrested last November after customs officers raided a house where he was staying in a suburb of Kuala Lumpur and found 16.8 ounces of marijuana in six tin cans and also some in a plastic bag.

The Californian is the first U.S. citizen to be charged under the statutes mandating the death sentence for anyone caught with half an ounce or more of heroin or morphine, 2 pounds of opium or 6.4 ounces of marijuana.

The defense attorney said that under the law, Wiley should have been first notified that the parcel contained prohibited items and that a declaration form was not attached. Shaffe said the package should have been opened in Wiley's presence.

There were other parcels also with no declaration forms but only the parcel addressed to Wiley was opened, he said Saturday.

There were indications that the parcel had been tampered with, even though it was taped and sealed, the defense attorney said. The string tied to the parcel was missing and it was not explained in court why this was so, he added.

Citing another alleged breach of the rules, Shafee said the postal officer had told the court that he had not verified the contents of the parcel and had not checked its weight as required by the rules.

The rules were also broken when the parcel was not put into the custody of a detaining clerk at the post office but was ''in illegal possession'' of the customs department for 15 days, he added.

MOSCOW (OCT. 28) UPI - A group calling itself the Memorial Society will set up a stark monument of natural stone Tuesday night near the KGB's dreaded Lubyanka headquarters to commemorate the millions who were imprisoned in the Gulag labor camps.

The monument, a boulder, was transported by ship from the first of the Soviet labor camps, the infamous Solovetsky Islands facility where a monastery was refashioned into a prison in the initial years of Communist rule.

River captains along the country's water network tooted their horns as the the giant boulder made its way to the Soviet capital where it will stand not far from the statue of the founder of the KGB, then known as the Cheka, Feliks Dzherzhinsky.

Last year on Oct. 30, the ''Day of Political Prisoners in the U.S.S.R.,'' thousands of supporters of the Memorial Society gathered with candles in front of Lubyanka and marched around the hated building.

Members of the Memorial Society told a news conference on Friday that the monument in Lubyanka Square is a first step toward remembering the victims of Soviet terror first under Vladimir Lenin, then Josef Stalin and finally Leonid Brezhnev.

The ultimate goal is to set up an institute to house archives, memoirs, and to systematically study the infernal machine that condemned millions to work in the inhospitable Gulag camps on trumped up charges of being enemies of the people. The sole proof was most often a forced confesssion or denunciations by another person.

''Building a memorial complex of this type, however, can not be done in the near future because of our alarming and unstable times,'' Viktor Kucherinenko, a member of Memorial, told the Moskovsky Komsomolets newsaper.

''That is why we seized on the idea to install in Moscow a monument in the form of a natural untreated stone, which will not require great expense,'' he said.

''The number of survivors who passed through the prisons and the camps grows smaller each year, and it is they who have pressed us to complete the monument and they have the every right to press,'' he said.

The numbers of the Gulag prisoners ran into the millions with no definitive figure ever given. ''It is impossible to make a list of all the victims (on the monument),'' Kucherinenko said.

''Therefore the inscription will be laconic: this stone is brought from the territory of the Solovetsky Camp by the Memorial Society and has been set up in memory of millions of victims of the Totalitarian Regime on Oct. 30, 1990, the day of political prisoners in the U.S.S.R,'' he said.

Oct. 30 came to be celebrated as prisoners day after the inmates of the Perm and Mordovia prison camps went on a hunger strike in 1974 to demand better treatment.

Although Nikita Khrushchev released the bulk of prisoners from the camps after Josef Stalin's death in 1953, Brezhnev continued to send political dissidents there until his death in 1982.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has said there are no longer any political prisoners in the country. Former dissident Kronid Lubarsky, who now lives in the West, told the Moskovsky Komsomolets newspaper there are now less than 115 political prisoners.

For many who ended up in one of the hundreds of camps at the height of Stalin's mindless terror, the massive stone Lubyanka was often the first stop to the Gulag. Today the KGB no longer uses the building as a detention faciility but as offices.

Originally the All Russian Insurance Company, Lubyanka was taken over by Lenin's police minions shortly after the Communists took power in October 1917 and it has been the seat of every KGB chief since.

At the first Congress of People's Deputies two years ago, former weightlifting champion Yuri Vlasov electrified the nation by demanding that the KGB should be moved out of Moscow and that Lubyanka should be made into a clinic or put to some other use because of its shameful past.

Vlasov's father, it has since come to light, was a victim of the Stalin terror.

(OCT. 27) UPI - The Senate gave final congressional approval today to a historic budget agreement that lumps together tax increases and spending cuts to reduce the nation's deficit by 490-BILLION dollars over the next five years. The House earlier approved the core package on a 228-220 roll call vote. Senators voted 54-45 to approve the budget package, which now goes to the White House. President Bush is expected to sign it into law.

International pressure on Iraqi President Saddam Hussein appears to be mounting today. The U-N Security Council said it would hold Iraq responsible for war damage and the safety of foreign nationals if the Persian Gulf crisis erupts. The 15-member council ended two days of discussions early this morning by finalizing a new resolution calling for Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait.

Soviet President Gorbachev turned his attention to the Middle East today during his visit to Madrid, Spain. Gorbachev said Saddam is ''very much mistaken'' if he thinks he can drive a wedge between nations that are opposed to his takeover of Kuwait. The Soviet leader repeated his view that a political solution would be the best way out of the crisis.

President Bush convened a five-hour summit meeting of Pacific Island nations today in Honolulu, Hawaii, saying the session was long overdue. The unprecedented gathering of the 11 tiny nations had NO set agenda and was NOT expected to produce any major decisions or big announcements. Dozens of demonstrators protesting Bush's Persian Gulf policy staged a rally outside the meeting.

A landmark clean-air bill received final congressional approval today and is now awaiting the signature of President Bush. The Senate followed yesterday's House vote in approving the measure today by a margin of 89- 10 before sending it to the White House. The bill, which strengthens the 1977 Clean Air Act, will require almost every major industry to make costly efforts to reduce hazardous emissions.

(OCT. 28) UPI - Americans across the nation Saturday rallied against tax hikes invoked by Congress to cut the federal deficit with many protesters wielding brooms symbolizing their desire to ''sweep'' out of office those who voted for the budget plan.

The Libertarian Party and other anti-tax citizens groups organized the rallys, riding a wave of growing taxpayer opposition to the 1991 budget.

Congress approved the historic agreement Saturday to reduce the federal deficit by $490 billion over the next five years through a mix of tax increases and benefit cuts. President Bush said he will sign the bill.

In Chicago, U.S. Rep. Lynn Martin, R-Ill., criticized her House colleagues Saturday for their ''arrogance'' in pushing through tax increases in the new budget.

Jim Tobin, chairman of the Angry Taxpayers Action Committee, was cheered as he read a ''Taxpayers' Declaration of Independence'' to a crowd of about 100 people in downtown Chicago.

In Albany, N.Y., about 50 people, some carrying brooms, rallied at the Federal Building plaza against high federal and state taxes and for the ouster of every incumbent New York congressman in the Nov. 6 election.

''It's time for a clean sweep, sweep out the big spenders from Congress,'' said rally organizer Mitch Goldstein.

About 300 people gathered in front of the federal building in Salt Lake City in a rally organized by the Utah Taxpayers Association.

''My intent ... is to keep Utah's congressional delegation's feet to the fire, to let them know we want results,'' said Howard Stephenson, spokesman for the Utah group.

''We're not going to continue to stand for increasing deficits and higher taxes,'' he said. ''This has been called a deficit reduction plan, but over the next five years it increases the deficit.''

Anti-tax crusader Richard Headlee addressed a lively rally attented by about 4,000 people in Detroit's downtown area.

Headlee said none of the tax increases in the deficit reduction plan were justified. But he was cautious in criticizing Bush personally, saying he felt the president had received bad advice.

Headlee, who chairs the organization Taxpayers United, said he was greatly disappointed in the failure of the legislation to include a spending freeze.

''It's just back to business as usual,'' he said. ''Sacrifices are really on the revenue side by the taxpayers.''

Headlee added there ''should have been a spending freeze for one year and no discussion of revenues until we saw exactly what happened with the spending freeze.''

A protest rally at the Westwood Federal Building in Los Angeles was organized by the Taxpayer's Action Day coalition, a team of 12 taxpayer lobby organizations.

''We don't think there is any excuse for new taxes,'' said Marlo Lewis, research director of Citizen's Against Government Waste. ''The government should be put on a diet - preferably a starvation diet.''

Lewis said instead of tax hikes, he would prefer to cut the deficit by curbing wasteful government spending, as outlined in a Grace Commission study during the Reagan administration. The commission, a panel of business leaders, called for federal budget savings through the conversion of some government functions to private ownership.

About 50 people walked in single file around the post office in Bloomfield, N.J. They carried whisk brooms and signs with slogans such as ''Throw the big spenders out,'' ''Tax revolt'' and ''Senior citizens on fixed incomes.''

One man was dressed like Abe Lincoln, complete with a stovepipe hat with a sign attached that said ''Stop taxes.''

The deficit reduction legislation raises the income taxes of the wealthy, increases taxes on gasoline, tobacco, liquor, wine and beer and hits the elderly with higher premiums and deductibles for Medicare, their health insurance program.

The legislation also slashes benefit programs, ranging from farm subsidies to veterans programs.

BONN (OCT. 28) - German Social Democrats, the main opposition group in parliament, voiced disappointment on Sunday at the outcome of the EEC summit in Rome which decided to name January 1, 1994, as the start of a second-phase transition period towards monetary union, overriding British objections.

The compromise formula found in Rome could endanger the stability of the Deutsche mark, Wolfgang Roth, economic expert of the Social Democratic Party (SPD), said.

Mr. Roth said the summit also failed to set new guidelines for closer cooperation between the EEC and the reforming East European countries and to back Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's reform policy.

ABIDJAN (OCT. 28) - Ivory Coast authorities on Sunday decided to extend voting hours in some polling stations around Abidjan for the country's first multi-party elections, while opposition leaders denounced "countless irregularities."

"Voting has been delayed in some voting bureaus in Abidjan," an interior ministry communique broadcast over national television said, adding that an unspecified number of stations in question would remain open "until the end," without giving a time.

The polls, which opened at 0800 GMT, were scheduled to close at 1800 GMT with the first results expected late Sunday. No major incidents were reported in Abidjan as of 1500 GMT.

President Felix Houphouet-Boigny, who has led the country for 30 years, is facing Professor Laurent Gbagbo, the Ivorian Popular Front (FPI) candidate, who has the backing of the main left-wing parties.

At a news conference Sunday, Mr. Gbagbo denounced the "stuffing of ballot boxes, an archaic fraud," as well as "fake polling stations" and the absence of voter lists at the polling booths.

Mr. Gbagbo showed a pile of 1,464 slips cast for Mr. Houphouet-Boigny and seven for himself taken from a ballot box at Abobo Gare, one of Abidjan's working class districts.

The opposition candidate said his supporters had legally opened the box before the polls were opened and found the slips.

"Our militants were forced to stop the polls" there and in several other stations around Abdijan, he said.

ATHENS (OCT. 28) - Iraqi authorities on Sunday authorized the departure of ten Greek hostages out of a total of 24 held in Iraq since the beginning of the Gulf crisis, the government announced here.

The move followed a series of meetings since Wednesday in Baghdad between two deputies from the opposition Greek Socialist Party (PASOK) and leaders of Iraq's ruling Ba'ath party.

A government spokesman said that the Greek embassy in Baghdad had informed the foreign ministry of the Iraqi decision.

The ten people set free had been included on a list of persons suffering from illnesses, which had been delivered to Iraqi authorities by the Greek embassy, official sources said.

The foreign ministry announced in a statement that it had immediately taken measures to facilitate the return of the hostages.

An official from the foreign ministry's crisis committee told AFP that the Greek government was trying to obtain authorization from Iraqi authorities for a special plane to land in Baghdad as soon as possible to evacuate the hostages.

George Stefanos, president of an organization of families of Greek hostages, said on Greek radio that the decision to free the ten hostages had been reached at a meeting on Sunday between the PASOK delegation and Iraqi First Deputy Prime Minister Taha Yassin Ramadan.

One of the hostages to be released was a woman who had chosen to remain in Iraq with her husband.

Twenty-four Greek nationals are held hostage in Iraq, including one Greek citizen who also holds an American passport.

ROME (OCT. 28) - Belgium has asked France, Germany and the Netherlands to help in the setting up of a proposed African intervention force for war-wracked Rwanda, Belgian Prime Minister Wilfried Martens said here Saturday on the sidelines of the European Economic Community summit.

Rwanda has asked the Organisation of African Unity (OAU) to put together a force to police a ceasefire between Rwandan government troops and rebels who entered the country from neighbouring Uganda at the beginning of the month.

Mr. Martens said he had received a telephone call from OAU secretary-general Salim Ahmed Salim saying that European aid was essential for the setting up of such a force.

The Belgian premier, who reaffirmed that "in any event, the Belgian paratroops will leave Rwanda on November 1", said such aid could take the form of financial or logistical help, although the OAU had not yet stated exactly what kind and how much help it would like.

According to Mr. Martens, the request could be for 20 jeeps and three helicopters.

He did not indicate what the response had been to the Belgian request to the other three European states, saying only that "a country has indicated to us that for it to be able to send military aid, it needed the approval of parliament".

The Belgian government has said it is withdrawing 535 paratroops it sent when the troubles started in order to protect Belgian nationals. A ceasefire was supposed to have gone into effect in Rwanda Wednesday, but the fighting is reported to have continued.

BUCHAREST (OCT. 28) - About three thousand Romanians demonstrated outside the Soviet embassy here Sunday here Sunday in support of the "territorial integrity" of the troubled Soviet republic of Moldavia.

Demonstrators shouted "Bessarabia, Bessarabia, Romanian land" and "Great Romania, old borders", referring to the former name of the southwestern Soviet republic, which was part of Romania before World War II.

The demonstration was organized by a Bucharest-Kishinev cultural association, the Free Democratic Party and the Free Republican Party.

Kishinev is the capital of Moldavia.

Demonstrators in the southern town of Alexandria and in Timisoara said they protested against "destabilizing and separatist activities by the (ethnic Turkish) Gagauz" minority in Moldavia.

Soviet police reinforcements were rushed to Moldavia Sunday after "volunteers" from the republic's ethnic Romanian majority threatened to crush an autonomy bid by the Gagauz.

A state of emergency was imposed in the south of the republic Friday.

The crisis was sparked off when the Gagauz, who number about 150,000 and who proclaimed their own "republic" last August, went ahead this week with elections to their own independent national assembly.

ROME (OCT. 28) - The EEC decided on Sunday to release a 600-million-dollar loan to Hungary, which had been withheld pending evidence of progress in economic and political reforms, official sources said.

Following their two-day summit, the 12 EEC leaders also asked the executive European Commission to study the possibility of creating a financial reserve to assist Eastern Europe in purchasing oil, diplomatic sources said.

The 600-million-dollar loan is the second portion of a billion-dollar EEC assistance package for Hungary. The sum was released due to the precarious state of the Hungarian economy, diplomatic sources said.

The EEC and its member countries declared "that they will help Hungary to overcome its problems, particularly in terms of oil supplies," according to a final statement released by the office of Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti, who holds the rotating EEC presidency.

The EEC also said that it had a "responsibility" to help Eastern European countries to succeed in their economic reforms despite the rise in Soviet oil prices and a world-wide increase in the cost of oil due to the Gulf crisis.

The EEC called on the European Commission to "study a form of specific assistance," a phrase which diplomats said referred to the creation of a reserve of capital to assist Eastern European countries in purchasing oil.

The European commission has estimated that Eastern Europe will need eight billion dollars to offset the effects of increased oil prices.

ROME (OCT. 28) - Italian nationals held against their will by Iraqi authorities called on Italian President Francesco Cossiga Sunday to take all necessary steps for their return home, ANSA news agency reported.

In a message to the agency -- the third in two days following similar appeals to Pope John Paul II and Communist Party chief Achille Occhetto -- the hostages said: "The war machine has gained speed these days in its course to a point of no return".

The hostages said they had the impression that Mr. Cossiga had forgotten about them.

They said the Italian president should "take initiatives to ensure our security and our return to our families".

BUDAPEST (OCT. 28) - The Hungarian government reached a compromise agreement Sunday with business and labor representatives reducing gasoline price increases which had led to a taxi drivers strike and blockade of traffic nationwide.

The government agreed after eight hours of talks to a 12-forint (20-cent) cut per litre in motor fuel prices which were upped last Thursday. The reductions in the increased prices will take place as of Monday midnight.

The new price is to remain effective until parliament votes a deregulation of gasoline prices.

Taxi drivers who went on strike Friday, a day after the government raised motor fuel prices by 65 per cent, had said they would lift road blocks if the increased gasoline prices were reduced.

CAIRO (OCT. 28) - Egyptian police rounded up more than 390 Islamic fundamentalists following the arrest Saturday of eight militants suspected in the assassination of the country's parliamentary speaker, Cairo newspapers reported here in their Monday editions.

Most of those detained in the second wave of arrests late Saturday and Sunday were from the central and southern provinces of Beni Sueif and Assyut, according to the newspapers Al-Gumhouria and Al-Ahram.

Eight of the militants were leaders of the Al-Jihad (Holy War) group that police believe was involved in the killing October 12 in downtown Cairo of Rifaat al-Mahgoub, speaker of the Egyptian parliament.

The second sweep followed police operations here Saturday in which two members of Al-Jihad were killed and eight were captured, including one who was wounded.

Two police officers and three soliders were also injured during raids on the hide-outs of Mr. Mahgoub's alleged killers, according to the interior ministry.

PRAGUE (OCT. 28) - President Vaclav Havel Sunday called on ethnic groups in Czechoslovakia to preserve their country's unity and prevent attempts to destabilize it.

Speaking on the 72th anniversary of the Czechoslovakian independence from Austria, Mr. Havel said the two dominant ethnic groups -- Czechs and Slovaks -- and all other national minorities "must oppose all signs of hatred and racist intolerance, national or political, as well as all attempts to destabilize the young democracy".

He said the current crisis was due to the difficult and slow political changes after last year's peaceful revolution that ended four decades of communism.

"We ... are about to lose the credit we gained in the peaceful and swift revolution,", Mr. Havel said, pointing to "concern, impatience and deception among the people, as well as growing anger".

In his televised speech Mr. Havel also called on young Slovaks "not to listen to nationalist demagogy by people who identify autonomy and national dignity with a return to the ghosts of the past".

The president was referring to the independent Slovak state that was a close ally of Nazi Germany from 1939-45 after the country's Czech region had been annexed by Hitler.

ALGIERS (OCT. 28) - Some 7,000 people demonstrated against soaring food prices Sunday at Jijel in the east of the country on a call by the General Union of Algerian Workers, the official APS agency reported.

There has been an unprecedented doubling over the past few weeks in the prices of fruit, vegetables and meat.

The demonstrators bore banners reading "A loaf of bread and half a bottle of milk are meal for a worker" and a "Stop the speculation".

They also called for an increase in the minimum wage to 4,000 dinars a month (about 420 dollars) and bigger family subsidy payments.

The demonstration came the day after the trade union organisation and the government of Prime Minister Mouloud Hamrouche reached agreement on an increase in the minimum salary level to take it from 1,500 to 2,500 dinars next July.

The unions had been asking for a minimum salary of 4,000 dinars a month and a freeze on the prices of basic commodities.

TOKYO (OCT. 29) - Fuji Bank Ltd. said Monday it has lent 115 million dollars to state-run Air China Co., the first such loan by a Japanese bank to China since the bloody suppression of pro-democracy protests in Beijing last year.

A Fuji Bank spokesman said the loan would enable China's national carrier to buy Boeing 747-200 planes.

He did not say how many aircraft were involved nor give precise details of the loan agreement other than that it would be repayable over 12 years and carry a low interest rate.

This will be the first loan to China by Japanese banks after sanctions were imposed on Beijing following the military crackdown on pro-democracy demostrators in Tiananmen Square in June 1989.

Fuji Bank's loan also comes before the planned visit to China by a high-powered bankers mission slated for November 6-15 to discuss economic and trade relations and Japanese investments.

Announcing the visit last month, Taizo Hashida, chairman of the Federation of Bankers' Associations of Japan, said the time had come to consider the resumption of loans in view of the changed international situation.

The bankers' mission could herald a total lifting of the ban on loans to China banking sources said.

TORONTO (OCT. 28) PR NEWSWIRE - In meetings held this weekend, members of the Canadian Auto Workers union at Chrysler Canada have ratified a new collective agreement by the largest vote yet in negotiations this fall with the big three auto makers. The production workers have ratified the new three-year agreement by a vote of 95.5 percent, and the skilled trades have ratified by a vote of 91.7 percent, for an overall vote of 94.6 percent in favor.

CAW President Bob White has called this agreement, which meets the auto pattern set at Ford Canada and followed by GM of Canada, "the best overall agreement in the history of the auto industry."

He added that this agreement is "an important step toward a better labor relations climate between the CAW and Chrysler."

The new agreement provides for wage increases, including cost-of- living protection, of 7.5 percent in the first year, 6.7 percent in the second year and 4.8 percent in the third year.

The agreement also includes a comprehensive worker security program, more time off the job, improved cost-of-living protection, an annual vacation bonus, and a new joint labor management committee on the environment.

White said that the worker security provision of the new agreement should help provide a framework for legislation to protect workers affected by layoffs and workplace closures.

There are more than 10,000 Chrysler Canada workers at facilities in Windsor, Etobicoke, Brampton, Bramalea, and Ajax, Ontario.

NEW YORK (OCT. 28) UPI - The Daily News said it managed to publish and deliver more than half of its normal run Saturday despite intensified efforts by striking workers to stop distribution of the nation's second-largest newspaper.

News spokeswoman Lisa Robinson said 710,000 newspapers were put out on the street overnight, an increase of about 100,000 papers from Friday. A normal press run for the News is just under 1.2 million, she said.

The struggle to publish the newspaper came as striking workers intensified their efforts to stymie distribution on the third day of the walkout that has seen delivery trucks firebombed and scores of replacement workers pelted with bottles, stones and eggs.

A dozen striking News workers were arrested in overnight violence - including four men caught with a small cache of assorted ammunition, explosives, smoke bombs and weapons, said Sgt. Mary Wrensen, a police spokesman.

A bus carrying replacement workers was attacked Saturday afternoon at the Brooklyn entrance to the Manhattan Bridge, said a police spokesman, Sgt. Edward Burns.

''One guy fired a couple of shots, another broke windows on the bus with a baseball bat,'' said Burns. ''They wore ski masks. One person on the bus had a minor injury, a cut finger. The assailants escaped over the bridge to Manhattan in their vehicles.''

The newspaper dismissed most of its 2,400 union workers Friday as nine of its 10 unions decided to strike following a pre-dawn dispute Thursday over whether a pressman claiming a medical disability could sit down on the job at a Brooklyn plant.

Only the printers union said it would continue working, citing the need to protect their lifetime job guarantees - plans they made known months ago.

With scores of replacement deliverers, pressmen, machinists and others already on the job, the News said more workers - including reporters and editors - were brought in from Illinois and Florida to work on the paper.

Despite the outside help, management announced an undetermined number of jobs were available to members of the nine striking unions and it did not matter whether those who would return to work remained in their unions.

Federal law says employers may not force workers to quit their unions as a condition for work.

''For anyone who wants to come back to work, there are positions that are still available,'' said Robinson. ''They can come back if they have not been permanently replaced.''

The only talks the news has scheduled are with the drivers on Wednesday, said a spokesman, John Sloan.

Tom Pennacchio, secretary-treasurer for The Newspaper Guild, which represents some 800 reporters and editors, said the unions would try to rally public support for a boycott.

He said no talks have been scheduled between management and the unions.

The strike brought to a boil a simmering dispute that began 10 months ago when the Tribune Co. - which owns the News - opened contract talks vowing to seek millions of dollars in cost reductions and impose sweeping control of hours and working conditions.

The company has insisted union concessions are essential to keep the newspaper from drowning in red ink.

Labor leaders, from the outset, have claimed that the company wanted to provoke a strike to break the unions as part of a plan to either close or sell the tabloid - the second-largest circulation newspaper in the country after the Los Angeles Times.

The unions have been working without a contract since March 31.

(OCT. 28) UPI - President Bush says he's reluctant to sign the budget passed by Congress. But Bush says he will sign the deficit-cutting measure. The president says the bill for the first time makes significant and long- term reductions in federal spending. Congress Saturday gave final approval to the budget that will reduce the deficit by 490-BILLION dollars over five years. The reduction will come through tax increases and cuts in benefits.

The budget increases the income taxes of the wealthy... increases taxes on gasoline, tobacco, liquor, wine and beer... and hits the elderly with higher premiums and deductibles for Medicare. The legislation also slashes benefit programs, ranging from farm subsidies to veterans programs.

Americans across the country flocked to anti-tax rallies Saturday following congressional approval of the budget plan. Many protesters wielded brooms to symbolize their desire to sweep out of office any lawmaker who voted for the plan. The demostrations were organized by the Libertarian Party and other anti-tax groups.

Hundreds of weary members of Congress are still trying to finish work and adjourn the session. In addition to giving final approval to a budget... Congress Saturday passed the Clean Air Act, a comprehensive housing assistance measure and an immigration reform bill. The immigration bill is expected to increase the total number of legal immigrants from 530-thousand a year to around 700-thousand... including more skilled workers from Europe.

He also says the government-in-exile is NOT sure what has happened to 25-thousand other Kuwaitis. He says some have been executed. The exiled oil minister of Kuwait says the emirate is losing 60-Million dollars a day as a result of lost oil exports.

The ousted prime minister of Pakistan, Benazir Bhutto, appears headed toward her second election loss in one week. Bhutto's party was defeated in one province and is trailing its rivals in three others in Saturday's provincial government elections. Bhutto's Pakistan's People Party suffered a crushing defeat in National Assembly elections earlier this week.

SOUTHPORT, Australia (OCT. 28) UPI - A swimmer was recovering in Southport

District Hospital Sunday after being savaged by a shark in a waterway near his home on Queensland state's Gold Coast Saturday, police said.

Craig Coleman, 27, of Mermaid Waters, had more than 200 stitches inserted in his legs, doctors said.

Coleman said he was swimming in a salt water canal near his home on a reclaimed residential area at 8.20 p.m. Saturday when he was attacked.

''I suddenly felt it bite me and I thought 'I've got to get out of here' and I started swimming for my life,'' he said from his hospital bed Sunday.

''There was heaps of blood in about five seconds.''

He said he managed to stagger to a nearby house where a neighbor called an ambulance.

Doctors said Coleman would not be able to walk again for some weeks, but was thankful for his life.

It was the second attack in the same canal, which outlets to the sea nearby, in 11 months.

Last November, a 10 year-old boy had 100 stitches inserted in his leg after being bitten. A bait subsequently caught a 6.5-foot bronze whaler shark.

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (OCT. 28) UPI - Ousted Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto's party suffered reverses in elections for all four of Pakistan's provincial assemblies, partial results showed Sunday.

Bhutto's Pakistan People's Party was defeated in two provinces in Saturday's violence-marred polls, was trailing its rivals in a third and had lost a large number of seats in its traditional stronghold of Sind.

The results reflected the outcome of Wednesday's National Assembly elections, in which the PPP suffered a crushing defeat to the Islamic Democratic Alliance an army-backed coalition of anti-Bhutto parties.

In the provincial elections, the IDA gained a massive majority in northeastern Punjab, Pakistan largest Province, winning 203 of the 226 seats announced in the 240-seat Assembly.

In the Northwest Frontier Province, the PPP was also soundly defeated. With 69 of the 80 seats announced, the IDA and its ally had taken 53, while the PPP had six and independents 10.

The PPP had a coalition government in the NWFP until Bhutto's federal administration was dismissed last August.

With 36 seats annnounced in western Baluchistan's 40-member assembly, the IDA and an ally had 15, the PPP two and other parties 19.

The PPP had a realistic chance of forming of a majority only in Sind, where it had secured 43 of the 90 seats announced in the 100-member assembly.

The Mohajir Qaumi Movement, an IDA ally which represents Mohajir migrants from India, had won 27 races, the IDA five and independents 15. However, many of the independents were believed likely to vote with the IDA.

The PPP hopes to win in Sind, where it achieved a huge majority in the last provincial elections in November 1988 and from where it could challenge the authority of the Islamabad government.

About 48 million of Pakistan's 110 million people were eligible to vote in Saturday's provincial elections. Reports from around the country indicated a very low turnout.

Bhutto has charged Wednesday's IDA victory was achieved as a result of ''gross rigging,'' but agreed to take part in the provincial elections. However, international observer teams have said they had no evidence to substantiate Bhutto's charges of massive fraud.

President Ghulam Ishaq Khan fired Bhutto's 20-month-old government on Aug. 6, accusing it of corruption and nepotism and of failing to control law and order. He dissolved the National Assembly and appointed opposition leader Ghulam Mustafa Jatoi to head an interim government until the elections.

The president also set up Special Disqualification Courts to try Bhutto, the 37-year-old daughter of hanged prime minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, and members of her administration on corruption charges. If found guilty they could be barred from politics for seven years.

Tight security was again in force for Saturday's vote, with tens of thousands of troops patrolling the streets throughout the country. Police and the Election Commission said at least 33 people were killed and 92 wounded in clashes throughout the country between supporters of rival parties.

OLONGAPO, Philippines (OCT. 28) UPI - A Philippine fishing boat with 30 people on board was reported missing Sunday in the South China Sea, the Coast Guard said.

Another fishing boat was reported to have capsized in the China sea but its 30 crewmen were spotted by a U.S. Navy helicopter, which dropped an inflatable raft, food and water to them.

Philippine Coast Guard officials, who were notified of the sighting by the helicopter, have sent a rescue ship to the area, 200 miles west of the Philippines.

The helicopter found the 90-foot boat after the Coast Guard had requested for assistance. The other boat was still missing and relatives said it was carrying 30 people.

The Coast Guard said there were no details on why the boats capsized.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (OCT. 28) UPI - The Zulu Inkatha Freedom Party has rejected an invitation from Archbishop Desmond Tutu to join its arch rival the African National Congress in a black leaders' summit on factional violence.

Inkatha decided at a central committee meeting Saturday in it's Natal province headquarters town of Ulundi to turn down the invitation and ''to question (Tutu's) impartiality when he makes suggestions which accept and give ecclesiastical endorsement'' to policies of the multi- tribal ANC.

Tutu, the 1984 Nobel peace laureate, has long supported ANC calls for a constituent assembly to oversee an end to white minority rule and for continued world sanctions against South Africa - policies Inkatha rejects as counter-productive to the black cause.

Tutu called on Oct. 17 for an urgent summit of black political leaders, to include an unprecedented meeting of ANC leader Nelson Mandela and Inkatha President Mangosuthu Buthelezi, and he warned those who refuse to accept face branding as ''enemies of liberation.''

But the ANC, in a conciliatory gesture to Inkatha, said on Oct. 22 it had dropped its objections to a direct meeting between the two men and that such talks would soon take place.

Inkatha said in its statement of resolutions it now invited Tutu to state publicly whether he thought Buthelezi was an enemy of liberation in declining to join the summit.

In calling for the summit on violence, Tutu was apparently trying to be the first to break the logjam and bring the ANC and Inkatha leaders to discuss the fighting between their followers which has killed thousands of people in Natal and Transvaal provinces.

The conflict flared in 1987 in Natal, where it has since killed up to 4,000 people. Battles spread to Transvaal townships around Johannesburg in August and in six weeks killed almost 800 people.

The ANC accused Buthelezi of exporting the strife to consolidate his position among black leaders and undercut the more popular ANC ahead of formal power-sharing talks with Pretoria.

ANC officials also consistently blamed the Natal violence on Inkatha.

But Buthelezi rejected the charges, noting he has been calling for direct talks with Mandela ever since the ANC leader was released from 27 years imprisonment in February.

Neither the ANC nor Inkatha has announced when their leaders will meet, but Buthelezi said on hearing of the ANC concession on a direct meeting he would be happy to arrange a time and venue.

(OCT. 28) UPI - A new poll released Sunday showed President George Bush's approval rating among the American people was slipping and a top U.S. Commander in the Persian Gulf said he would like to spare his troops the horrors of a desert war.

The developments followed reports the United States would send Secretary of State James Baker to Saudi Arabia soon to discuss the possibility of a military strike to force Iraqi troops from occupied Kuwait.

Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, commander of the more than 200,000 U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia, said in an interview published Sunday he wants to avoid a military confrontation with Iraq.

The 56-year-old West Point graduate, whose nickname is ''Stormin' Norman,'' said he hopes the massive military deployment and economic sanctions will pressure Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait, which it invaded Aug. 2.

''Nothing would make me happier than to have presided over this entire buildup to have deployed our forces, to have been ready to fight and then have (Iraqi President) Saddam Hussein withdraw from Kuwait, and have an international settlement and restore peace and stability in threa, and take every single American home, and not have lost one single American in battle,'' Schwarzkopf told the Atlanta Journal and Constitution.

The general, a veteran of the Vietnam war, indicated a desert confrontation with Iraqi troops would be a lethal fight involving American casualties.

''We have developed more sophisticated ways to destroy things,'' he said. ''It will certainly be a much more lethal battlefield. But to the fundamental soldier on the ground, it is still going to be a question of life and death.''

The public opinion poll, published in Newsweek magazine, said only 48 percent of Americans approved of the way Bush was handling his job. It was the lowest approval rating yet for Bush, who has been one of the most popular U.S. presidents in modern history.

Sixty-four percent of the 753 American adults polled Thursday and Friday by the Gallup Organization said they believed Bush was losing his political influence.

The United Nations delayed until Monday a vote on a proposal holding Iraq liable for invasion damages and calling for the freedom of all hostages held in Iraq and Kuwait as human shields against Western attack.

The U.N. Security Council decided at a meeting late Saturday to postpone the vote amid reports the Soviet Union, which called for the delay, was seeking a peaceful solution to the standoff.

Top Soviet envoy Yevgeny Primakov was in Baghdad Sunday where he was expected to hold his second meeting in a month with Saddam. Primakov, who has met dozens of world leaders in the past few weeks, has said repeatedly be believes a settlement can be negotiated, while at the same time reiterating that Moscow demanded a complete, unconditional withdrawal from the oil-rich emirate.

Some diplomats at the United Nations warned that a wrong move by the international organization could tip the 3-month-old crisis into a war.

Also late Saturday, Congress approved a complicated $15 billion foreign aid bill that could lead to the abolishment of Egypt's $7.1 billion military debt.

The bill authorizes the Bush administration to consult arms manufacturers about the proposal and to clarify to Congress why it is in the U.S. interest to write off the debt.

Egypt has been a strong backer of U.S. policy in the gulf and has sent Arab troops to serve with the U.S.-led multinational force.

In Cairo Saturday, police arrested more than 10 Moslem fundamentalists in the assassination of a high-ranking government official whose death was originally blamed on pro-Iraqi terrorists.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (OCT. 28) UPI - A powerful explosion on a Norwegian freighter off the Namibian coast killed two crew members and swept three others overboard, including the captain and second officer, a South African search and rescue official said Sunday.

The three, washed into the icy Atlantic after the blast around midnight Friday were presumed dead, the official of Cape Town's Silvermine naval search station said.

The explosion rocked the coal-carrier Berge Charlotte some 810 nautical miles west of Namibia's port of Walvis Bay and the ship contacted Silvermine, which serves the southern African coastline, 12 hours later, the official said.

But he noted the South African Air Force had no aircraft with the range to reach the stricken vessel from its air-rescue base in Pretoria without refueling and a rescue aircraft would not have arrived over the spot before dawn Sunday.

Authorities decided against sending an aircraft as ''the crew told us that the three who went overboard were not wearing protective clothing. In those waters we are presuming they died and a search would have been fruitless,'' he said.

Silvermine alerted ships in the area to look out for the three but the heading of the Berge Charlotte was not known.

The official would not speculate on the cause of the explosion.

JERUSALEM (OCT. 28) UPI - Israel reopened transit Sunday to the West Bank and Gaza Strip, allowing tens of thousands of Palestinian workers to return to their jobs in Israel after a four-day closure.

Defense Minister Moshe Arens ordered stricter checks on Arab workers to prevent those who represented a security or criminal risk from entering Israel.

Lt. Gen. Dan Shomron, the chief of staff, said there were no plans for issuing magnetic identification cards to West Bank Arabs. Gazan workers received the cards last year. Shomron said employers would be asked to make sure their workers had proper identification papers.

More than 110,000 Palestinians work in Israel, primarily in construction, agriculture and menial service positions. Palestinian sources reported that some Arab workers who returned to work were informed that they had been dismissed.

With the lifting of the closure order, thousands of workers streamed into Israel and work was resumed at construction sites. Authorities closed the territories to halt a wave of attacks on Jews by Arabs and anti-Arab resprisals.

The abrupt closure caused immediate turmoil in the Israeli economy where Palestinians make up about 20 percent of the industrial workforce. Many employers said they would hire newly arrived Russian Jewish immigrants to replace the Arabs but others said no Jews wanted menial, low-paying jobs, such as dishwashers in restaurants.

ROME (OCT. 28) UPI - Ugo Tognazzi, the popular Italian movie actor, died in a Rome clinic late Saturday after a cerebral hemorrhage, doctors said. He was 68.

Tognazzi, who had been ill for some time, was hospitalized Thursday after a stroke. Doctors said that he stopped breathing at 11:15 p.m. Saturday.

Hailed as the king of Italian comics, Tognazzi was born in Cremona in Northern Italy on March 23, 1922. One of the much-loved post-war generation of Italian comics, Tognazzi worked with some of the best known Italian movie directors of his day, including Dino Risi and Marco Ferreri.

Among his most acclaimed movies were two directed by Marco Ferreri: the 1963 film ''L'Ape Regina'' (The Queen Bee) and ''La Grande Bouffe'' (The Great Gorging) in 1973. He also starred in ''I Mostri'' (The Monsters) directed by Dino Risi in 1963.

MANILA, Philippines (OCT. 28) UPI - President Corazon Aquino lashed out at communist rebels Sunday for the violence that marred a general strike for higher wages last week but said her officials were negotiating a compromsise with labor leaders.

In her taped weekly radio talk show, Aquino said the bombing of facilities and the burning of buses by the rebels showed a ''serious diminution'' in their ''strength and capabilities'' because they had to coerce Filipinos to support their mass action.

''I condemn the violent manner with which the strike was carried out, '' Aquino said.

''Again, there is no doubt that elements determined to overthrow our constitutional government made use of the right guaranteed and protected by the same Constitution to advance their cause.''

She said property damage was more than $971,000. At least 10 people were killed in the strike that began Wednesday but fizzled out later in the week. The military said 24 vehicles, mostly buses, were torched.

Aquino said some labor leaders who participated in the strike were willing to ''favorably consider'' a compromise to their demand for a $1.48 increase on top of the minimum daily wage of $3.46.

The workers, who said prices went up after the government raised oil prices because of the Persian Gulf crisis, later reduced their demand to $.97. They suspended the strike Friday pending further negotiations.

Aquino said Labor Secretary Ruben Torres ''continues to discuss this matter with our top labor leaders ... in the hope that an agreement acceptable to all could be reached.''

''The strike would have made its point without causing so much pain and agony on the part of ordinary commuters and workers,'' said Aquino, who added that she has ordered the prosecution of those involved in the violence.

It was the first time the 19,000-member New People's Army, which has been fighting the government for 21 years, has openly supported a strike called by leftwing trade unions.

Suspected communist guerrillas, meanwhile, exploded a grenade at a private radio station in the central island of Samar Sunday, shattering glass windows but causing no injuries, officials said. Two men were seen escaping after the grenade attack on radio station DYSM, they said.

ROME (OCT. 28) UPI - European Community leaders agreed Sunday not to send representatives of individual countries to Iraq to negotiate for release of their hostages.

The 12 EC leaders, on the final day of a two-day summit, said they ''reaffirm their total solidarity in achieving the freedom of all foreign citizens trapped in Iraq and Kuwait.''

The heads of state, in a final summit communique, ''affirm their determination not to send representatives of their governments in any capacity to negotiate with Iraq the release of foreign hostages and to discourage others from doing so.''

The summit in the Italian Senate library was the first meeting of EC leaders since Iraq invaded Kuwait on Aug. 2.

The heads of state said they would ''scrupulously adhere to the United Nations embargo against Iraq and to the other measures decided by the (U.N.) Security Council'' and are ''prepared to consider additional steps consistent with the U.N. Charter.''

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher stressed the willingness to take other measures and said ''the unity of the 12 nations on this matter is a very powerful signal to Iraq.''

The summit communique also called for an overall solution to problems in the Middle East, expressing ''deep dismay at the continuing violence in Lebanon'' and this month's killing of 20 Palestinian protesters by Israeli soldiers in Jerusalem.

Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti, who holds the rotating EC presidency, said he received a letter Saturday from Palestinian Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat, ''calling our attention to the matter of the Palestinians.''

The final communique called for ''protecting the rights of the Palestinian people'' and called ''once more on Israel to meet its obligations'' to protect civilians under the Geneva Convention.

''The tragic events that have occurred in Jerusalem show once more that the status quo in the Occupied Territories is unsustainable,'' the EC leaders said.

ROME (OCT. 28) UPI - European Community leaders, with only Britain's prime minister dissenting, agreed Sunday to begin the next stage toward a single European currency in 1994 with an eye to completion by the end of the decade.

The next phase of EC monetary union will include creation of a central bank, the ''Eurofed,'' and EC officials said a common currency could be achieved by the year 2000 despite the reservations of Britain's Margaret Thatcher.

Economists say a common currency will save citizens of the 12-nation EC up to $26 billion a year in exchange costs.

''With the achievement of the final phase of economic and monetary union, exchange rates will be irrevocably fixed,'' EC leaders said in the final communique of a two-day summit at the Italian Senate library.

''The European Community will have a currency of its own - a strong and stable European Currency Unit - which will be an expression of its identity and unity '' the communique said.

EC finance ministers will report to heads of state within three years after the next stage of monetary union begins Jan. 1, 1994, and passage to the final stage ''will occur within a reasonable time.''

Asked if a single currency will be a reality by the end of the decade, the powerful president of the EC executive agency, Jacques Delors, said, ''I am more ambitious than that. As history accelerates, we have to accelerate along with it.''

The final communique listed Thatcher's objections separately.

''We will not have a single currency imposed on us,'' she told a news conference. ''There is no stronger expression of a nation's sovereignty than its own currency.''

Instead of a single currency, Thatcher has proposed a parallel 13th currency, backed by a new European Monetary Fund, that would compete alongside the 12 national currencies.

Other EC leaders downplayed Thatcher's objections, saying they had heard her ''sovereignty'' arguments before.

''As usual, eventually she will arrive,'' French President Francois Mitterrand said of the British prime minister.

''We consider the road we have taken is the right road, and we hope that at some stage this will be recognized,'' said Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti, who holds the rotating EC presidency.

''We will work together with the British so that the next summit may end in success,'' added German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

EC leaders hold their next summit on Dec. 13 in Rome.

The next day, twin EC constitutional conventions, on monetary union and political union, begin in Rome to chart the path toward greater integration, which will require amendments to the Community's founding treaty.

The EC leaders, with Thatcher again dissenting, called for closer political adhesion including ''a common foreign and security policy.''

The EC, which currently lacks a security dimension, has been criticized for its scattershot response to the Gulf crisis. Only Britain and France have sent ground troops to the region.

Thatcher said NATO should continue to anchor European security, and she termed current ideas on EC political union a ''ragbag of proposals.''

Besides monetary and political union, the EC leaders discussed the Gulf crisis world trade talks and financial aid to Eastern Europe.

The heads of state agreed not to send representatives of their governments to Iraq to negotiate the release of their hostages, and reaffirmed their ''total solidarity'' in winning the release of all foreign nationals from Iraq and Kuwait.

The summit communique urged EC governments to quickly agree on a negotiating position in the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. They have been hopelessly divided for weeks over how deeply to slash farm subsidies. U.S. President George Bush telephoned Andreotti on Saturday to request speedy progress in the GATT talks, which end in just six weeks in Brussels.

EC leaders said they hoped to approve an aid package for the Soviet Union at the December summit, but ''will take whatever decisions are required'' before that date in the event of a winter food crisis or other emergency.

(OCT. 28) UPI - Members of Congress are heading home to campaign or rest, but they made plans for a special session if the Persian Gulf situation requires it. Congress adjourned this morning. It finally passed a budget yesterday along with other major bills. The adjournment resolution allows congressional leaders to call the lawmakers back to Washington if events warrant. Usually only the president can recall Congress. Some members believed President Bush might order military action without consulting Congress.

Before adjourning, Congress approved changes in the immigration law to encourage more skilled workers from Europe. Since 1965, most legal immigrants have come from Asia and Latin America. Legal immigration under the new law is expected to increase from 530-thousand to 700- thousand. The new bill puts a ceiling on immigration to reunite family members.

Because of reports about diplomatic activity in the Persian Gulf crisis, the U-N Security Council will wait to consider new measures against Iraq. It met yesterday but at the Soviet Union's request recessed until tomorrow. Diplomats said a wrong move could worsen the crisis. Diplomats say Iraqi President Saddam Hussein sent French President Francois Mitterrand a message Friday and Mitterrand will discuss it today with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev. A Soviet envoy also is in the Iraqi capital, Baghdad.

A group called the Memorial Society will set up a monument of natural stone Tuesday near the K-G-B's headquarters in Moscow. The monument is a boulder brought from the Solovetsky Islands, where a monastery became the Soviet Union's first labor camp after the 1917 revolution. Millions of people were imprisoned in the Gulag camps during the Lenin, Stalin and Brezhnev regimes. Striking workers kept other workers away from the French entrances of the English Channel tunnel yesterday. Some 100 pickets demanding higher pay blocked the way. Only about 40 percent of the work force got through. The tunnel is being dug from two directions. In the next few days, workers tunneling from France are expected to meet up with workers tunneling from England.

One of President Franklin Roosevelt's sons, Elliot Roosevelt, died yesterday at age 80. He died in Scottsdale, Arizona. Elliot Roosevelt was a decorated flier in World War Two and wrote a book about his parents. James Roosevelt, a former member of Congress from California, is the only one of Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt's five children now living.

This is a 25-hour day. At 2 a-m clocks should have been changed back to 1 a-m as most of the United States switched from daylight saving to standard time. In April they will be set ahead again. The memory device is- ''Spring forward... fall back.'' If you don't have plans for that extra hour, the International Association of Fire Chiefs suggests this is the time to replace the batteries in smoke detectors.

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 28) UPI - In a bizarre new twist on game shows, divorced couples will soon be facing off on syndicated television for fun and prizes.

First there was ''The Dating Game.'' Then there was ''The Newlywed Game.'' The ''Divorce Game'' is apparently the next logical step.

The one-time spouses will square off before TV cameras during segments of the syndicated game show ''Tic Tac Dough'' set to air Nov. 19-23.

Thirteen couples who once battled in court will again strive to outsmart and outmaneuver each other. This time, they'll be vying for $2, 500 in prize money and the approval of a studio audience that, presumably, will include their children, their former in-laws and even their current spouses.

Only in America, you say?

Dan Enright of Barry & Enright Productions, the executive producer of the show insists that it is not quite as outlandish as it may seem at first blush.

Television viewers, he said, ''will be intrigued by the prospect of watching two former adversaries meet again in another field of combat.''

Enright and his colleague, Chris Sohl, the shows' producer, came up with the idea during a brainstorming session.

''We figured people would tell us, 'You're out of your mind,''' Enright recalled.

To test the waters, the two placed a classified ad in the Oct. 21 Los Angeles Times. It read: ''Wanted Divorced Couples (On Speaking Terms) For New TV Show, Potential Big $$$.''

''By speaking terms,'' Enright said, ''we meant something other than 'Drop dead.'''

By noon the next day, 30 divorced people had responded, saying either that their ex-mates would cooperate or could probably be talked into it.

Sohl believes the show will demonstrate that a failed marriage isn't so terrible.

''One out of two marriages end in divorce within the first five years. In more and more cases, there's a certain civility to divorce. It's almost like two partners who break up a business but still remain friends,'' he said.

Most of the potential contestants now being interviewed for the shows are young or middle-aged. The producers said they are especially hoping that an elderly divorced couple will turn up.

''I'd like to find a couple around 75 or 80 years of age,'' Enright said. ''That would be touching or poignant. Maybe a couple with seven children. It would be great to have the seven children in the studio.''

Like any other contestants, the former spouses are expected to be good sports while competing to answer trivia questions correctly and line up their Xs or Os in the game board.

But the producers said they wouldn't be surprised - or terribly disappointed - if old hostilities are rekindled and old battles re- enacted.

''That would be rather interesting,'' Enright said. ''We certainly wouldn't encourage it - but it would add another dimension to the show.''

And isn't there always a chance that spectating family members, like children or current spouses, will object to what could become a painful exercise in emotional exhibitionism?

''It would depend,'' Enright said, ''on how much they need the $2, 500.''

ORANGE, CA (OCT. 28) UPI - A Mrs. Fields Cookies store employee has been arrested on suspicion of food tampering after metal staples were found in a cookie purchased at an Orange County mall, police said Sunday.

No one was injured in the incident, which the company said was the first in its 12-year history.

The suspect, Michael Steven Connors, 20, was arrested Saturday at his Anaheim home after a Mrs. Fields company policy helped police determine that the adulterated cookie was baked between 3 p.m. and 5 p.m. Friday, when he was working in a baking position.

Debbi Fields, president of chief executive officer of the Utah-based firm, said Connors was fired. Police had no motive, calling Connors a ''disgruntled employee.'' A company statment said cash was also found missing from the store register.

Police were called about 6 p.m. Friday after a customer returned a cookie because it contained several metal staples.

''A disgruntled employee place some foreign objects in the cookie dough and other baked goods,'' Orange Police Lt. Timm Brown said.

Company officials immediately closed the store and surrendered 48 cookies and three trays of brownies to investigators assigned to the case. A company policy that requires employees to rotate from sales to baking positions at intervals helped them track down Connors.

Connors was booked on suspicion of a felony charge of putting harmful matter into food and also on $2,700 in outstanding traffic warrants.

In a prepared statement, Debbi Fields said she was ''shocked and concerned'' about the incident and added that, although the company believes the incident was an isolated one, anyone who bought cookies at the Mall of Orange store on Friday would be eligible for a refund.

(OCT. 28) UPI - Congress has adjourned after passing the 490-BILLION-dollar package to reduce the federal deficit. The adjournment resolution allows congressional leaders to call a special session if the Persian Gulf situation gets worse.

Striking workers blocked the French entrances to the English Channel tunnel yesterday. Most workers were kept away from their jobs. The tunnel still is being built. The workers want more pay.

Warsaw Pact members have agreed on how to divide tank and artillery cuts among them to permit a treaty with NATO nations. The Soviet news agency Tass says the agreement means there no longer is any need for the Warsaw Pact.

The U-N Security Council will wait until tomorrow to consider new measures against Iraq. The council met yesterday, but it delayed action because of reports diplomatic moves are under way.

Daylight saving time ended this morning. Clocks should have been turned back one hour. Fire departments across the nation suggest that today is a good time to replace batteries in smoke detectors.

ROME (OCT. 28) UPI - The 12-nation European Community remained divided on major trade issues Sunday as British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher accused France and Germany of practicing protectionism for their farmers.

''It's quite clear there are some members who quite openly take the view that the Community is protectionist and will quite openly remain protectionist,'' Thatcher said at the end of a two-day summit of EC leaders.

The EC has been unable to agree on how to cut farm subsidies in the 105-nation talks of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, which are due to end in just six weeks in Brussels.

At a 16-hour meeting of EC agriculture and trade ministers in Luxembourg on Friday, France and Germany again rejected a proposal by the EC Executive Commission to cut farm supports by 30 percent in the decade ending in 1996.

The United States has proposed slashing agriculture subsidies by more than 75 percent by the end of the decade.

''It is urgent'' that the EC quickly reach agreement, said Thatcher, who supports the EC Commission plan. ''We have been trying to formulate the Community's negotiating position since September 1986,'' when the trade talks began in Uruguay.

French President Francois Mitterrand played down Thatcher's criticism but acknowledged that ''France does not accept the proposal of either the United States or the Commission.''

Another meeting of EC ministers was scheduled for Tuesday in Luxembourg, but there were indications the meeting could be postponed until later in the week.

''We will spare no effort. Our interest is that the discussion be concluded soon,'' said Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti, who holds the rotating EC presidency.

President Bush wrote to Andreotti on Friday and telephoned him on Saturday, urging a quick GATT agreement.

The United States says the GATT talks will collapse unless substantial reductions in farm supports are achieved.

Developing countries that produce food cheaply seek deep reductions in market-distorting export subsidies, while industrialized countries seek new GATT rules on services, investment and intellectual property.

GATT currently covers only merchandise trade, and not agriculture or the other areas.

CINCINNATI (OCT. 28) UPI - The bride and groom looked gruesome and may have been as nervous as any other couple, but still said their ''I do's'' in a little out-of-the ordinary wedding in their backyard.

Anthony Taylor was dressed as Frankenstein, his bride, Debra Hutcherson, was the Bride of Frankenstein as they culminated their six- year courtship with a Halloween-themed wedding Saturday.

''You always see pretty brides and pretty weddings,'' said the 32- year-old bride. ''I just wanted my day to be different.''

She got the idea of a Halloween-themed wedding when she and her sister, Beverly Whitehead, were making plans for the ceremony.

''When I realized the date was near Halloween I suggested we have everyone dress in costume,'' said Whitehead, the matron of honor in a Popeye the Sailor costume.

Not everyone was easy to convince, especially the groom.

''He threatened to call it off if we didn't have a regular wedding,'' Debra said.

''I was kind of leery at first,'' said Taylor, 34. ''But I'd rather be married to Debra in costume than not at all.''

The minister came in his usual churchly garb, but friends and relatives came as clowns, witches, superheroes and jailbirds.

''I've never heard of anything like this before,'' said a guest, Woody Roberts dressed as a bum.

The bride's 14-year-old daughter, Yolanda, wasn't surprised.

''She's done crazy things before,'' she said.

The groom says the wedding will be memorable if nothing else.

''Twenty years from now, I'll probably still think it's crazy,'' he said.

TBILISI, Georgia, U.S.S.R. (OCT. 28) UPI - Georgians voted Sunday in their republic's first free elections to form a parliament from a bewildering array of 1,900 candidates from more than 30 parties challenging Communist supremacy.

Voting in the ancient capital of Tbilisi was brisk with lines at polling stations and election officials reporting heavy early turnout.

''The elections are being held on a multiparty basis for the first time in the years of Soviet power,'' the official Tass news agency said.

Representatives of the competing parties joined international observers from eight Western countries in monitoring the voting at polling stations displaying the burgundy-black-and-white Georgian national flag. The red Soviet banner with its hammer and sickle was not on display.

Voters at several polling stations in Tbilisi clustered around posters on walls showing the campaign platforms of candidates or the 30 parties grouped in 11 different blocs. A total of 1,900 candidates registered to run in the elections.

''It's the first experience for the whole population,'' said an elderly man as he left Polling Station No. 7 in Tbilisi. ''It's too much - so many parties, so many candidates. Before there was just one (party). But you can see that people are more interested now. They want to take part now.''

Opposition leaders had charged that Georgia's Communist government would try to sabotage the elections for a 250-seat legislature, but there were no early reports of problems.

''Everything is going smoothly,'' said Alexander Dolbaia, monitoring Polling Station No. 2 in downtown Tbilisi for the Round Table-Free Georgian opposition bloc. ''I haven't seen any indication of irregularities.''

The chairman of the election committee at Polling Station No. 2 said that 20 percent of the eligible voters in his district had cast their ballots in the first four hours.

Voters made their choices in nearly 3,000 precincts across Georgia, showing their red internal Soviet passports, registering in thick log books and receiving a green ballot to vote for a party or bloc and a white ballot for an individual candidates.

Half, or 125, of the seats in the Georgian Parliament were to go to individuals and half were slated for blocs that will fill any posts they win with candidates of their choosing.

Each ballot was signed on the back by a local election official to counter fears that the Communists had printed extra ballots and planned to stuff the ballot boxes. The republican Central Election Commission was chaired by a Communist, but the major parties had representatives on it.

''The results of the elections will impartially show whether they were held democratically,'' Irakli Zhordania, the election commission head, told Tass.

Despite their warnings of potential sabotage by the Communist government, opposition leaders said Saturday that the polls should go ahead as a first step toward independence for the Transcaucasian republic.

''People are excited by the chance to finally really vote, but they are confused,'' one opposition activist said. ''They don't know what the difference is between all the parties.''

All 11 blocs - even the Communists still loyal to the Soviet Communist Party - campaigned on pledges to work for independence for the southern republic. Few specified when and how they plan to achieve that goal.

To add to the confusion, many of the parties had similar names. Three parties were called the Popular Front and a fourth was the Popular Party. Five parties used ''democratic'' in their names.

There were opposition charges that the wounding Friday of National Democratic Party leader Georgi Chanturia outside an alternative Georgian congress was part of a plan to make the election fail.

''This is a provocation, an attempt to stop the election,'' said Ziad Gamsakhurdia, a former dissident and leader of the strongest opposition bloc, ''Round Table - Free Georgia.''

Chanturia, whose party believes the elections cannot be fair under the Communists and is boycotting them, was wounded in the arm while he was leaving the congress hall on Tbilisi's main Rustaveli Avenue. Local police said there were no suspects in the case.

Tbilisi's newspapers appealed for calm, and opposition leaders asked their supporters to not let themselves be provoked and to go ahead with the elections.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 28) UPI - Attorney General Dick Thornburgh denounces it as an attempt to ''tear apart the moral fabric of our society.'' FBI Director William Sessions says his department is ''deeply committed'' against it.

An old offense with a new name, incidents of ''hate crime'' appear to be on the rise in America and have triggered a flurry of recent activity by the Justice Department, capped by a symbolic trip to Oklahoma by the nation's top law enforcement officer.

''Racial, ethnic and religious violence is not a one-victim crime, but a crime against an entire community,'' Thornburgh said in announcing the indictment in Tulsa of six ''skinheads'' - young toughs often associated with bigotry and violence.

''By spreading their hatred across our neighborhoods, public accommodations, houses of worship and even graveyards,'' Thornburgh added, ''these groups seek to make all citizens their victims and to instill fear in a wide variety of innocent Americans.''

While Thornburgh was in Oklahoma, Assistant Attorney General James Turner, head of the department's civil rights division, told reporters in Washington that hate crimes are his department's ''absolute highest priority.''

He said that since 1988, the Justice Department has won more than 100 convictions in 20 states on charges ranging from desecration of synagogues to racially-motivated murder.

Despite such pronouncements and some high-visibility prosecutions, the Justice Department is getting mixed reviews for its hate crime initiatives. While some praise the department's recent crackdown on skinheads and other hate groups, others complain that the Bush administration's commitment is uneven and falls short of what is needed to combat, as one activist calls it, ''the most insidious crimes that exist in our society.''

Earl Shinhoster, southeast regional director of the NAACP, got reacquainted with hate crime last year when a tear gas letter bomb exploded in his Atlanta office. He maintains that Thornburgh has not backed up his words with action.

''I think the Justice Department needs to go beyond holding news conferences '' Shinhoster said. ''They have to make sure local and state law enforcement understands their responsibility in cooperating with the federal government in identifying and assisting in investigating these kinds of crimes.''

''There's much more the Department of Justice could be doing,'' added Kevin Berril, director of the anti-violence project at the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force. ''I think they could show greater concern and involvement in anti-gay crimes across the country.''

Berril cited persistent complaints that a Justice Department hate crime hotline has discouraged homosexuals from making reports. Although the department assured him the hotline was open to homosexuals, Berril said, ''We still receive complaints that telephone staffers are turning away gay victims.''

Yet others give the Justice Department high marks on hate crime.

''We are extremely pleased with the conduct of the Justice Department,'' Jeffrey Sinensky, national civil rights director for the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, said. ''They are taking these matters seriously.''

And Khaled Rahhal, a 43-year-old Lebanese-American, says he is ''glad and impressed'' by the federal effort. Rahhal, a college-educated father of four, was beaten unconscious last year by a group of skinheads at Club Nitro, his underground Tulsa dance hall. One of Rahhal's attackers wielded a brick, opening a gash on his head that required 28 stitches to close.

''I'm very happy about the indictments,'' he said by telephone from the club that was terrorized for two years by skinheads who suspected patrons of ''racial mixing.'' Ironically, Rahhal described club patrons as almost exclusively ''white yuppies.''

''I am glad and impressed the federal government jumped on this one and stayed with it,'' he said.

When the Tulsa indictments were announced, Sessions said, ''The FBI is deeply committed to defeating acts of racial hatred.''

Sessions added, ''Our overall aim is to reduce the incidence of federal civil rights violations and to ensure that the federally protected rights of persons in the United States are not violated.''

WASHINGTON (OCT. 28) UPI - For the 32 senators seeking re-election, the vote on the $490 billion, five-year cut in the federal deficit was a dicey gamble as they go into the final days of the campaign.

The budget vote presented a double-edged dilemma to the candidates, many already fearing an anti-incumbent mood among voters.

A vote for the package could expose them to charges that they backed higher gasoline, beer, tobacco and liquor taxes as well as higher premiums for the elderly on Medicare. A vote against the package opened them to accusations that they are unwilling to do anything about the mushrooming deficit.

A majority of the senators running this year apparently thought a no vote was the lesser of two evils.

Surprisingly, a majority of the Republican candidates - eight of 14, decided to back the package during Saturday's 54-45 vote in favor of the deficit-chopping plan. Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., was absent but he had his position recorded as no.

Democrats were more skittish. In their case, only six of 17 voted to cut the deficit.

Assistant Senate Republican leader Alan Simpson of Wyoming, who voted for the bill, was asked if support for the package would become a campaign issue and hurt those who supported it.

''If the people aren't at a point, in their duty as citizens, to realize what we're doing, then, you know, it won't matter what we do 30 years out,'' he said.

''It won't, if they tell the truth,'' Simpson said. ''You don't have any problem campaigning about what the alternative is for this country if we do nothing.''

In addition to Simpson, the Republicans who voted for the deficit-cutting package were Sens. Ted Stevens of Alaska, Nancy Kassebaum of Kansas, Rudy Boschwitz of Minnesota, Thad Cochran of Mississippi, Pete Domenici of New Mexico, Strom Thurmond of South Carolina and John Warner of Virginia.

With the exception of Boschwitz, who is in a tight race against an unknown political scientist, Paul Wellstone, these senators are not threatened in the election. Democrats did not even field a candidate against Warner or Cochran.

The six Democrats running for re-election who supported the bill were Sens. David Pryor of Arkansas, Sam Nunn of Georgia, Daniel Akaka of Hawaii, David Boren of Oklahoma, Al Gore of Tennessee and John Rockefeller of West Virginia.

Only Akaka has a close race, against Republican Rep. Patricia Saiki. Pryor and Nunn have no GOP opponents and the rest have easy races.

But senators from both parties who face serious challenges in the election shied away from deficit-cutting package.

Among the Democrats, they included Sens. Tom Harkin of Iowa, John Kerry of Massachusetts, Carl Levin of Michigan, Paul Simon of Illinois, Max Baucus of Montana, James Exon of Nebraska and Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island.

But just as many considered shoo-ins, or close to it, also voted against the package.

They included such top-heavy favorites as Sens. Joseph Biden of Delaware, Howell Heflin of Alabama and Bill Bradley of New Jersey. Even Sen. Bennett Johnston of Louisiana, who has won re-election, voted no.

Republicans who anticipate a close race also went against the leadership and President Bush to vote against the package. They were Dan Coats of Indiana, Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, Jesse Helms of North Carolina and Larry Pressler of South Dakota.

But so did strong favorites such as Sens. William Cohen of Maine and Phil Gramm of Texas.

The six Republican House members running for the Senate all voted against the package. They were Hank Brown of Colorado, Larry Craig of Idaho, Lynn Martin of Illinois, Saiki of Hawaii, Claudine Schneider of Rhode Island and Tom Tauke of Iowa.

BUDAPEST (OCT. 28) UPI - A three-day nationwide blockade of major transport routes in Hungary was eased Sunday but negotiations between the government and protestors stalled with the threat of a general strike.

Despite declaring its desire for compromise, the government maintained its support for the nearly 70 percent increase in gasoline prices imposed late Thursday that sparked a strike by taxi drivers that mushroomed and resulted in nationwide road blockades.

The price rises stemmed from a cutback in oil deliveries from the Soviet Union and a rise in crude oil prices on the world market during the Persian Gulf crisis.

The chairman of the National Trade Union Association, Sandor Nagy, warned in a statement that a general strike could be called Monday if no compromise was reached.

Demonstrators hoped the government would drop the price rise by 20 cents or from 65 percent to 33 percent.

Opponents of the 65 percent rise said the government should have shown restraint in the face of inevitable fuel price rises during the gulf crisis and not increased budget revenue by incorporating a tax in gasoline prices.

In Sunday's negotiations, the representatives of trade unions and employers urged the government to assist in a quick resolution of the crisis because time was ''running out.''

By late afternoon the only government concession was to give up its control over gasoline prices and allow them to fluctuate according to market pressures.

Industry Minister Akos Peter Bod said the liberalization of gasoline prices could be done in 3 to 14 days, depending on how soon legislators endorse the relevant bill.

The employers' spokesman, Parliamentary Deputy Janos Palotas, welcomed the liberalization as a ''compromise solution'' of a 33 percent price hike instead of the government's 65 percent that would ''put the burden of world market prices on the population.'' He said there was a consensus that people on the street would carry the extra burden.

Palotas urged government negotiators to stop procrastinating and said the government should not insist on the extra revenue from the 65 percent price hike.

Bod argued that there was a danger that the country's reserves would run out and said the government introduced the hikes to prevent such a scenario.

Palotas said the statement ran against market rules because higher prices never produced higher demand. Nagy said to prevent gasoline shortages a committee should be set up to work out procedures that would prevent depletion of the country's reserves.

Also Sunday, more than 5,000 pro-government demonstrators gathered in front of the Ministry of Labor building, shouting ''We want order,'' ''We are the majority'' and ''There won't be any coup.'' The protestors demanded roadblocks be removed immediately and accused Hungarian television of biased reports, calling for a government press. The group was addressed by the ministers of Defense and Home Affairs.

As part of the partial lifting of the blockade Sunday, border crossings between Hungary and Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Austria were cleared to allow foreign visitors out of the country.

(OCT. 28) UPI - The French Foreign Minister says the estimated 330 French hostages held in Iraq and Kuwait will fly to Paris tomorrow. Radio Monte Carlo says 27 French are staying in Iraq, most of them to complete business deals. A French spokesman says the diplomats who have been at the French Embassy in Kuwait probably will be on the flight. But he says the embassy will not be formally closed as Iraq demands.

Protests were held around the United States yesterday against the tax increases in the new federal budget plan. Many protesters wielded brooms to show they want to ''sweep'' supporters of the plan out of office. A spokesman for the Utah Taxpayers Association said the budget will increase the deficit... not reduce it. A Detroit speaker said a one-year spending freeze should be tried.

Ugo Tognazzi, a popular Italian movie actor, died in Rome last night. Doctors say he suffered a cerebral hemorrhage. Tognazzi was 68. Tognazzi was hailed as the king of Italian comics and worked with well known Italian directors such as Dino Risi and Marco Ferreri. His most acclaimed movies included ''The Queen

Bee,'' ''The Great Gorging'' and ''The Monsters.''

The European Community winds up a special weekend summit meeting in Rome today far off their original topic of aid to the Soviet Union. Instead the 12 leaders have argued over what position to take on farm subsidies at the coming talks on the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. The E-C executive agency wants farm subsidies cut 30 percent. Germany and France say that is too much. The United States wants 75- percent cuts by the year 2000.

A black South African groups invited to a summit on violence has rejected the invitation. The Zulu Inkatha Freedom Party questioned Archbishop Desmond Tutu's impartiality in calling for the meeting. Tutu also invited the African National Congress. Inkatha said Tutu had made suggestions giving ''ecclesiastical endorsement'' of the African National Congress' policies.

South African authorities say two crew members of a Norwegian freighter were killed in an explosion Friday and three others are presumed dead. The three missing include the captain and second officer. Since they were NOT wearing protective clothing they are presumed dead and NO search was made. The explosion rocked the coal-carrier Berge Charlotte west of the Namibian coast.

A Coast Guard officer says most of a major kerosene spill in the Hudson River was cleaned up yesterday. But the entire clean-up may take several days. 160-thousand gallons of kerosene spilled from a barge 70 miles north of New York City Friday. The Coast Guard says the kerosene will NOT harm residents along the river, but it could destroy marine life.

NAIROBI, Kenya (OCT. 28) UPI - Kenyan Olympic Committee secretary Tom Omuombo said Sunday South Africa's return to the Olympic movement will depend on the outcome of an African Olympic Committee meeting to be held in Zimbabwe in November.

Omuombo said more than 100 AOC delegates were expected to attend the meeting, scheduled to take place in the Zimbabwean capital, Harare.

''The delegates' recommendations will be studied by the International Olympic Committee before a decision is taken to readmit South Africa to international sport,'' Omuombo said.

He said, however, South Africa's return to world sports was no longer just an IOC issue. ''It is now an issue for African National Olympic committees,'' Omuombo commented.

Sports observers in East Africa have agreed with Omuombo's appraisal that the South African problem could only be solved by Africa itself.

Omuombo said before South Africa fully re-entered world sport, it would have to fulfill several conditions such as the establishment of a multiracial national sports association and Olympic committee.

He was optimistic this would happen after South Africa abolished the apartheid system of racial segregation.

At present, the South African National Olympic Committee, headed by Johan du Plessis, is run by whites.

He declined to comment, however, on persistent suggestions by some members of Olympic committees that South Africa might participate in the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta.

One sports source in Nairobi said during the Harare meeting the executive chairman of the South African Non-Racial Olympic Committee, Sam Ramsamy, was expected to present a report on South Africa's return to international sport.

''I'm sure Sam has definitely compiled a favorable report on changes in sport in South Africa, since authorities there lifted a ban on the African National Congress,'' the source said.

South Africa was expelled from the Olympics after the 1960 Rome Games.

(OCT. 28) UPI - Members of the 101st Congress headed home early today after giving final approval to a deficit cutting budget plan acceptable to President Bush. The hard fought package will cut 490-BILLION dollars in federal red ink over five years, but is NOT all that different from the mix of tax hikes and cutbacks the president rejected earlier this month causing a shutdown of NON-essential government services during the Columbus Day weekend. Bush says it will sign the bill.

Before adjourning, the Senate also approved a pollution-fighting clean air bill that would force nearly every major industry to make significant cuts in urban smog, acid rain and other toxic emmissions. Senators also gave final approval to a comphrensive housing assistance bill and sent to the Oval Officean immigration bill that would boost the overall number of legal immigrants to the United States to about 700- thousand a year.

(OCT. 28) UPI - TODAY'S PEOPLE:

FONDA ON EXERCISE: Jane Fonda's movie career may have slowed down lately but she's keeping busy with her exercise empire. ''I have several movie projects cooking but who knows?'' she said. ''I don't like to discuss them because they may never be made or someone is liable to come along and pick up on the ideas. At the moment, I don't have a movie coming out. I don't have one about to go into production and I really don't care much. But it's a fact of life that even the best middle-aged actresses aren't working very often. There aren't a lot of good parts for women in successful pictures.'' Fonda will always have good parts in exercise videos and she just issued her 12th one. '''Lean Routine' is the first tape I've done of an hour of interval aerobics training, which increases the intensity so that your pulse goes up, then down, and builds again and down again several times,'' she said. MEMPHIS MEMORIES: Te movie ''Memphis Belle'' is bringing back memories for Harold Loch, who was a turret gunner on one of the most famous B-17 bombers of World War II. Loch, 70, who started a home- building business in Green Bay, Wis., after the war, says the movie is fairly faithful to the crew's exploits. Loch and his crewmates became so famous that they met the queen of England and he once danced with actress Olivia de Havilland at a Hollywood party. ''I ate steak and lobster every day for 80 days. It was rough,'' Loch said. In the movie, Reed Diamond plays a character based loosely on Loch, who was nicknamed ''Virgie'' by crew members because he was a virgin.

Writer-director Charles Burnett, whose new movie, ''To Sleep With Anger,'' stars Danny Glover, sides with those who say some of Robert Mapplethorpe's controversial photographs are pornographic. The danger is (that) there's a lot of people with a lot of mental problems out there and you end up supporting them. There are such things as taboos. ... Freedom of speech is one thing but I think people need to be held accountable.''

BEIRUT, Lebanon (OCT. 28) UPI - Syria and Lebanon Sunday agreed to speed up a planned demilitarization of war-battered Beirut that would 15 years of militia rule, political sources said.

The sources said the agreement was reached during a meeting in Damascus early Sunday that included Syrian Vice President Abdel Halim Khaddam, Lebanese Defense Minister Albert Mansour and Mohsen Daloul, Lebanon's minister of agriculture.

The conferees agreed that a process already begun to rid Beirut of warring militias should be finalized by the coming weekend, the sources said.

Mansour and Daloul met with Nabih Berri, chief of the pro-Syrian Shiite Amal militia,immediately after they returned from Damascus late Sunday. Berri later issued a statement saying he agreed with the plan to create the demilitarized zone.

''I have already given orders to my followers to start prepare for the zero hour to shut down their offices,'' Berri's statement said.

A ranking source said ''the zero hour for the creation of a (demilitarized) greater Beirut area will be declared by the end of the week.''

Daloul, in an interview with United Press International earlier this week, indicated that the government intended to clean out arms caches in the city.

''A political decision to clear Beirut completely of guns has been taken, but such a complicated operation will be carried out by the army, '' Daloul said.

The two ministers have met with various militia leaders since holdout Christian Gen. Michel Aoun was driven from the presidential palace by a Syrian-Lebnanese force Oct. 13.

Sources said the Christian Lebanese Forces militia, which patrols a ghetto in east Beirut, and the pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem Hezbollah organization, which maintains bases in southern Beirut, have already withdrawn heavy arms. The government plan to rid Beirut of militia presence was in line of a national reconciliation accord that was crafted by the Lebanese Parliament in Saudi Arabia last October, stipulating military and political steps to achieve constitutional reforms and end 15 years of bloody crises.

Aoun had rebuffed the internationally blessed accord for failing to ensure a speedy and full withdrawal of Syria's 35,000 troops from the country.

After being driven from the palace, Aoun took refuge in the French Embassy on the eastern outskirts of Beirut. French President Francois Mitterrand has rejected a request from the Lebanese government to hand over Aoun to stand trial.

The Israeli Cabinet today unanimously accepted a commission's report on the October 8th Temple Mount shootings that killed at least 20 Palestinians and wounded 150 others in Jerusalem. (OCT. 28) UPI - Iraq today freed 10 Greek nationals held as human shields against attack. Officials in Athens say the Iraqi Foreign Ministry gave the Greek Embassy in Baghdad a list of 10 names of Greeks who are being given exit visas on health grounds. About 14 Greek citizens will remain behind as captives in Iraq.

The release of the Greeks comes as an estimated 350 French citizens in Iraq and Kuwait prepare to return to Paris. The French had been expected to leave during the weekend but their departure was held up when Iraq said it would only permit them to leave aboard an Iraqi Airways plane. About 27 French nationals are staying in Iraq for business reasons.

(OCT. 28) UPI - Congress adjorns after passing budget plan... European Community leaders end Rome summit calling for U-N to negotiate with Iraq... Soviet President Gorbachev in France for Gulf talks. Today's news, next, from the wires of U-P-I:

Tired from months of squabbling over the budget, Congress finally left Washington today after passing a 490-BILLION-dollar deficit reduction plan that President Bush supports and says he'll sign.

In the end, the budget vote produces a double edged dilemma for the representatives and senators seeking re-election in 10 days. It hikes taxes for the wealthy, but slaps added taxes on Americans who drink, smoke, drive and like to buy luxuries.

Lawmakers may face an angry backlash from taxpayers because of the gasoline and alcohol levies as well as retribution from the powerful senior citizens lobby because of higher premiums for Medicare.

Farmers, veterans and students will lose federal benefits.

The vote in the Senate was surprising in that eight of the 14 Republicans up for re-election on November 6th joined Democrats in approving the deficit chopping plan on a 54-45 vote.

Assistant Senate G-O-P leader Alan Simpson of Wyoming said he supported the budget plan because- ''You doN'T have any problem campaigning about what the alternative is for this country if we do NOTHING.''

House Speaker Tom Foley is defending the record of the 101st Congress. Over a two-year period the Congress passed the first major overhaul of the Clean Air Act in 13 years... the first change in the federal housing program in a decade.... and the first hike in the minimum wage in nearly 10 years.

In the rush to adjournment, Congress also passed a bill increasing legal immigation from 490-thousand to 700-thousand people... and a new program of tax credits for working families who need child care.

Still, Vice President Quayle took a parting shot at the lawmakers, saying- ''This is truly a great day. Congress has finally left town and America is now safe.''

(OCT. 28) UPI - British Prime Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was the odd-person out at the just-ended Rome summit of European Community leaders.

Thatcher dissented when leaders of the other 11 member nations agreed to move ahead on the next stage toward a unified European currency. And the British prime minister accused France and Germany of protectionism for their farmers.

Thatcher said at the end of the two-day meeting that it's quiet clear some members openly remain protectionist.

Economists say creating a common currency could save citizens of the E-C nations up to 26-BILLION dollars a year in exchange costs.

The next stage of monetary union for the European Community will include establishment of a central European bank, called the ''Eurofed.'' Leaders say... despite the British reservations... they're optimistic a common currency will be in use in Western Europe by the year 2000.

Thatcher has proposed creating a 13th parallel currency that would exist alongside the 12 other national currencies like pounds, francs and marks. Her new currency would be backed by a new European Monetary Fund.

The European Community leaders also agreed today to rely on the United Nations to negotiate the release of foreigners held hostage by Iraq.

In a final communique, they said individual countries should NOT send negotiators to Baghdad.

Soviet President Gorbachev is in Paris today for two days of talks on the Persian Gulf crisis and other international issues.

Gorbachev, his wife Raisa, and Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze were met by French President Francois Mitterrandand Foreign Minister Roland Dumas, who both attended the European Community summit in Rome.

Mitterrand and Gorbachev are expected to hold formal talks before a state dinner tonight at the Elysee Palace. They'll meet again outside Paris tomorrow to sign a friendship and cooperation treaty.

(OCT. 28) UPI - Iraq's President Saddam Hussein fired the nation's oil minister today and scraped gasoline rationing ordered last week. Iraq did NOT indicate why Saddam canceled the gasoline rationing program announced by the oil minister October 19th.

The reason for rationing plan was NEVER explained, but western observers speculated Iraq's refineries are running out of spare parts because of the U-N embargo. Iran did NOT ration gasoline during the entire eight-war Persian Gulf war with Iran.

Iraq is also demanding France send medicine aboard a chartered Iraqi Airways jetliner scheduled to fly about 300 French nationals out of Baghdad to Paris. Iraq last week said it was releasing all French citizens held hostage. The demand for the medicine was added today.

Faced with a threatened general strike, Hungarian officials today agreed to roll back a more than 65 percent hike in gasoline prices. Taxi drivers staged a road-blocking three-day protest paralyzing parts of Budapest and major transporation routes across the country.

State-run Hungarian television says the government will lower the gasoline price increase to 33 percent on Tuesday. The Finance Minister says the government did NOT yielded from weakeness and is seeking a national consensus with disgruntled labor leaders.

(OCT. 29) UPI - The San Francisco 49ers survived a scare Sunday to stay undefeated but because they got one, Bud Carson may have survived another week as coach of the Cleveland Browns.

San Francisco, 7-0, escaped with a 20-17 victory when Mike Cofer kicked a 45-yard field goal with five seconds remaining. The loss dropped the Browns to 2-6.

Owner Art Modell implied Carson's job hung on a solid effort. Although they struggled, the Browns rallied from a 14-point deficit in the fourth quarter to tie the score with 70 seconds left.

The comeback came after starter Bernie Kosar was benched in favor of Mike Pagel, who completed 13 of 21 passes for 156 yards and two touchdowns.

The Browns crept within 17-10 with 9:13 left when Pagel threaded an 11-yard scoring strike through linebacker Keena Turner's hands to Webster Slaughter. Felix Wright intercepted Joe Montana at the San Francisco 27 to set up the drive.

Pagel engineered a 66-yard, 11-play drive to tie the score with 70 seconds remaining. He hit Ozzie Newsome with a 4-yard toss on a fade pattern in the end zone to make it 17-17.

Montana completed just 17 of 37 passes for 185 yards, one touchdown and a pair of interceptions that led to 10 Cleveland points. It was the worst afternoon Montana had since he went 17 of 40 for 222 yards and one touchdown in a loss to Denver in 1985.

Montana was 6 of 18 for 70 yards and two interceptions in the second half but on the final drive, completed a 35-yard strike to Mike Sherrard and a 5-yard pass to Jerry Rice to set up the kick.

''We feel like we're probably one of the best teams in the league when it comes down to the two-minute drill,'' said fullback Tom Rathman, who scored on a 1-yard dive in the first half. ''And we didn't even have two minutes today.''

The 49ers came into the contest so thin at wide receiver that backup quarterback Steve Young was used as wide out when they went four wide. Then in the fourth quarter, Sherrard broke his right ankle and was lost for four to six weeks. He missed nearly two seasons recovering from a twice broken right leg.

The 49ers recorded four sacks, forced three turnovers, held the Browns twice inside the 20 on fourth down and gave up just 38 yards on 18 attempts on the ground.

''The bottom line is that it doesn't matter if you get beat by 3 or 30,'' Pagel said. ''You still lose the ball game.''

It remains to be seen if anyone loses their job.

In other games, the New York Giants defeated Washington 21-10, Buffalo beat New England 27-10, Detroit downed New Orleans 27-10, Miami routed Indianapolis 27-7, the New York Jets got by Houston 17-12, Green Bay dropped Minnesota 24-10, Philadelphia nipped Dallas 21-20, Chicago ripped Phoenix 31-21, San Diego trounced Tampa Bay 41-10 and Atlanta defeated Cincinnati 38-17.

Iraq's President Saddam Hussein fired the nation's oil minister today and scraped gasoline rationing ordered last week. Iraq did NOT indicate why Saddam canceled the gasoline rationing program announced by the oil minister October 19th.

The reason for rationing plan was NEVER explained, but western observers speculated Iraq's refineries are running out of spare parts because of the U-N embargo. Iran did NOT ration gasoline during the entire eight-war Persian Gulf war with Iran.

Iraq is also demanding France send medicine aboard a chartered Iraqi Airways jetliner scheduled to fly about 300 French nationals out of Baghdad to Paris. Iraq last week said it was releasing all French citizens held hostage. The demand for the medicine was added today.

Faced with a threatened general strike, Hungarian officials today agreed to roll back a more than 65 percent hike in gasoline prices. Taxi drivers staged a road-blocking three-day protest paralyzing parts of Budapest and major transporation routes across the country.

State-run Hungarian television says the government will lower the gasoline price increase to 33 percent on Tuesday. The Finance Minister says the government did NOT yield from weakness and is seeking a national consensus with disgruntled labor leaders.

There are strings attached to tomorrow's planned release of 300 French hostages held by Iraq. Officials in Paris say Baghdad is demanding that France send medicine on a plane scheduled to fly home about 300 French hostages from Baghdad tomorrow. French officials say they'll consult with the United Nations to determine if the shipment would violate U-N sanctions against Iraq.

SAN JOSE, CA (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Silicon Valley Group Inc. (NASDAQ, NMS:SVGI) announced that it has received one of its largest orders ever with a contract agreed upon by Motorola for its MOS 11 facility.

Estimated to value more than $50 million, this two-year contract encompasses SVG's most advanced track and deposition systems and is scheduled for implementation in three primary phases.

The order follows an extensive, competitive review from which SVG's recently introduced 90 Series track systems were selected to serve as the exclusive photoresist processing tools for the new fab. The deposition systems chosen, the VTR-7000 Series, represent the company's flagship line of vertical thermal reactors which are designed and manufactured by SVG's Thermco Systems Division.

Motorola officials report that the SVG systems will be used to manufacture leading edge memory and microprocessor devices on the MOS 11 eight-inch production line. The proven ability to process these 200 mm wafers was a key selection criterion. Currently, SVG has the largest installed based of 200 mm VTR systems in the world. Similary, the 90 Series was specifically designed to meet the challenges posed by these larger diameter wafers.

Due to the magnitude of the order and the term of the contract, SVG will maintain full time process support and service engineers at MOS 11. Signifying the extent of the partnership, Motorola will retain dedicated engineers at the SVG research and manufacturing centers to ensure that product enhancements and new product development programs meet Motorola's emerging requirements, both now and in the future.

Silicon Valley Group Inc. is a leading supplier of automated wafer processing equipment for the worldwide semiconductor industry, and is a member of Semi/SEMATECH. The company's operations consist of the Track Systems Division focused on photoresist processing equipment, the Thermco Systems Division, offering oxidation, diffusion and low pressure chemical vapor deposition (LPCVD) processing systems, and SVG Lithography Systems Inc., which delivers photolithography exposure tools utilizing step-and-scan technology.

SAN FRANCISCO (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - You say interconnecting your Local Area Networks (LAN) with private lines is putting your company in the poorhouse.

You say the ultrasound images you send over your existing computer network take so long you can read Gray's Anatomy waiting for one to appear. You say you've got chronic insomnia worrying that the new high-speed data communications equipment you ordered won't talk to hardware you've got in place.

Well, put the aspirin back in the bottle. Pacific Bell is stepping up its efforts toward a solution.

The telecommunications company announced Monday four new participants in its technology test of Switched Multimegabit Data Service (SMDS), bringing the economical high-speed, fiber-optic-based transmission service closer to reality.

Pacific Bell said that Apple Computer Inc., Tandem Computer Inc. both located in Cupertino, Calif.; Sun Microsystems Inc., Mountain View, Calif.; and Pacific Gas and Electric Co., San Francisco, will take part in a six-month technology test of the proposed service.

The companies will join Stanford University, which was announced earlier as a participant.

Pacific Bell said that all five participants in the test, which is scheduled to begin in November, will be served out of its central switching office in San Ramon, 30 miles east of San Francisco, which is the first central office in the nation to be equipped for SMDS operation.

''The willingness of these companies to test SMDS for the first time provides a real-world evaluation of switched broadband technology,'' said Jerry Parrick general manager for Pacific Bell's Data Communications Group. ''These companies offer a wide variety of bandwidth-intensive applications, which we can use to validate SMDS.''

Parrick said that the potential applications for testing include medical imaging, multimedia conferencing, LAN interconnection, bulk file transfer and intercompany communications.

Pacific Bell is a subsidiary of Pacific Telesis Group, a diversified worldwide telecommunications corporation based in San Francisco.

(Sunnyvale, Calif.) have signed a comprehensive agreement in which Performance will provide its advanced PACE III process and manufacturing services and serve as an alternate source for Crosspoint's new generation of high-performance, high-density field-programmable gate arrays (FPGAs).

PACE III technology is Performance Semiconductor's most advanced CMOS fabrication process, based on 0.75-micron drawn channel length (0.6-micron effective channel length for 5-volt applications). PACE III Technology is acknowledged in the industry to be the highest-performance CMOS logic process in production today.

The agreement covers integration of technology, manufacturing support and jont development. Initially, Crosspoint will integrate its proprietary interconnect technology into Performance Semiconductor's standard PACE III manufacturing flow. In the long term, the two companies will jointly develop extensions to the current product line as well as a new generation of high-performance FPGAs.

Crosspoint Solutions Inc., completed first-round financing of $6 million in June 1990. The company subsequently moved into a new 15,000-square-foot facility in Santa Clara.

Crosspoint Solutions Inc., is a semiconductor company formed in 1990 to exploit a unique approach to field-programmability in gate-array logic devices. The company's technology has significant competitive advantages over other field-programmable logic implementations.

A proprietary cell and routing architecture, coupled with a unique interconnect technology, enable Crosspoint to meet the performance and density demands of the mainstream CMOS gate array market. For more information, contact Vacit Arat, director of sales and marketing, Crosspoint Solutions Inc. 5000 Old Ironsides Drive, Santa Clara 95054; telephone 408/988-1584.

ANCHORAGE, AK (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - The Alaska Housing Finance Corp. (AHFC) posted a $34.3 million profit for fiscal year 1990, Chief Executive Officer Thomas Behan reported Monday.

This year's profit represents the best performance by the corporation in the last four years. AHFC last reported a profit in fiscal year '87 at $20.9 million. The last time a profit exceeded this year's was in FY '86 when the corporation posted a $41.8 million profit.

Last fiscal year AHFC reported a loss of $124 million. The loss was the result of increasing AHFC loan loss reserves by $113 million, based on estimated foreclosure expense projections for the succeeding five years.

This year's profit is due to a strengthening real estate market as well as sound financial management of the corporation, Behan said.

With regard to financial management, during FY '90 AHFC decreased expenses relating to foreclosed properties and increased sales of foreclosed properties. Also, new investment policies and bond refundings contributed to the net profit.

The AHFC profit and other leading housing indicators continue to suggest that Alaska's housing recession was over at the end of the 1980s, as Behan has predicted.

The past due rate on AHFC loans dipped to 6.23 percent in August, the most recent figure available. That was down from 6.49 percent in in July and 9.56 percent a year ago.

Foreclosures also continue to slow. In August, AHFC foreclosed on only 104 loans, down from 128 in July and 228 a year ago.

AHFC continues to sell homes at a high rate. In August, AHFC sold 199 homes. Alaskan Home Properties, AHFC's home sales division, has been averaging sales of 250 per month for the past six months.

RICHARDSON, TX (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Computer Automation Inc. Monday reported net income of $216,000, or 8 cents a share, for the three month period ended Sept. 30, 1990.

Revenues for the first quarter of fiscal 1991 were $3,109,000. In the first quarter of fiscal 1990, as restated, the company incurred a loss of $620,000, or 26 cents per share, on revenue of $3,681,000. Results for fiscal 1991 and 1990 include the automatic test equipment activity, which was shown as discontinued operation when presented in the prior year.

George Pratt, the company's chairman and chief executive officer, noted that while revenues declined some 15 percent from the year-earlier quarter, gross margins improved and expenses related to selling, engineering and administration were sharply reduced. Consequently, the company recorded a profit for the first quarter of fiscal 1991.

Pratt said that the improved operating results have begun to alleviate the cash flow problems that have severely hampered the company for the past two years. He cautioned, however, that it was essential for the company to increase its revenues in order to achieve a consistent profit.

William L. Osmundsen, the company's president and chief operating officer also noted that the company's ability to announce its first operating profit since fiscal 1989's third quarter was the result of the effort and diligence of the company's employees and their ability to institute the plans made in April 1990 to return the company to profitability.

During the first quarter, Osmundsen stated, the company's focus on its existing automatic test equipment and traditional OEM products generated approximately $4.5 million in orders, most of which will ship during the current fiscal year. However, he noted, the company still must succeed in developing revenues from its Q/Fax and TUFF products in order to achieve a successful year.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Adobe Systems Inc. (NASDAQ:ADBE) Monday announced that Texas Instrument Inc.'s new microLaser XL family of desktop page printers will provide high-volume PostScript language printing at a new low price point, setting a new standard for affordable PostScript printing in a departmental page printer.

Three microLaser XL models are offered, all rated at 16 ppm print speed and an average 25,000 pages per month. The similarly configured microLaser XL PS35, priced at $4,499, provides software for 35 scalable PostScript fonts.

The lowest-priced model, the $3,449 microLaser XL, offers .5MB memory and HP LaserJet II emulation. It can be upgraded with a new board, 1MB memory and PostScript software, at a cost of $550 for 17 PostScript language typefaces or $1,050 for 35 PostScript language typefaces.

''We are very pleased to have PostScript print quality available in high-volume printers at these very affordable prices,'' said Dr. Charles Geschke, president and chief operating officer, Adobe Systems. ''We believe this will encourage more companies to avail themselves of the best available print quality.''

The microLaser XL printers have a compact footprint, 15.8'' wide x 16.6'' deep x 10.8'' high. The standard 250-sheet input drawer tucks inside the printer to conserve desk space. Up to four printer configurations can be stored and selected via the interactive front panel or software command. A help key provides set-up assistance, and a 16-character liquid crystal display provides instructions in words rather than numerical codes.

A Centronics-type parallel interface is standard on all microLaser XL models. RS232, RS422, and AppleTalk interfaces are optional.

SAN DIEGO (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Fujitsu Systems of America Monday announced the completion of an automated route distribution system rollout with Channel Island Beverage Group, a major Pepsi-Cola distributor.

The system, Fujitsu's System29, consists of handheld computers, printers and communications interface units as well as beverage route distribution software.

''Channel Island's goal is to maximize customer support by providing service and deliveries 24 hours a day,'' said Robert Fredella, Channel Island's director of management information systems. ''To accomplish this, our strategy was to automate our entire route distribution system. We have upgraded our existing systems and fully integrated our route distribution operation with our mainframe and PC networks.

System29 is based on a compact, lightweight, handheld computer. It also includes printers and a communications interface unit that allows communication directly to a mainframe computer.

The system is designed for use in particularly harsh route distribution environments. Examples of this ruggedized design include its fully sealed casing and optical connector. The completely sealed unit prevents liquids, dirt and dust from contaminating the interior of the handheld computer. The optical connector, used to link the handheld computer to printers, communications devices and battery rechargers, lasts significantly longer than other pin-type connectors.

Salespeople enter orders during their daily routes and immediately provide customers with an invoice from the system's printer. Printers are available in two configurations, either truck-mounted or a portable model that is housed in a briefcase.

Channel Island Beverage Group has franchises in San Diego as well as Ventura and Bakersfield. Formed in 1953 by Bud Lindsey, today it provides services to over 15,000 accounts under the leadership of his son Jim.

Fujitsu Systems of America Inc. is one of the Fujitsu Ltd. family of companies. A global leader in computer and telecommunications technology, Fujitsu Ltd. has annual revenues of more than $16 billion. In addition to handheld computers, the company designs, develops and markets point-of-sale (POS) systems and scanners for the retail market and automated teller machines (ATMs) for the financial services industry.

CLEVELAND (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - The beryllium industry Monday announced it was sponsoring a program of research on the cause and prevention of chronic beryllium disease.

The project will be funded by a million dollar contribution from Brush Wellman Inc. of Cleveland, and NGK Metals Corp. of Reading, Pa., the two largest producers. ''We hope other firms will follow suit and assist us in the funding of this worthy endeavor,'' said Robert Rozek, Vice President of Brush

Wellman. Yasuhito Niwa, vice president, NGK added, ''Several Government agencies are now either funding research or are interested and we are trying to coordinate our efforts to maximize the benefits to be derived.''

An advisory committee, consisting of prominent members of the medical and scientific community and chaired by Dr. Merril Eisenbud, has been assembled by the industry to solicit and evaluate proposals for carrying out the program's objectives. The Beryllium Research Advisory Committee held its first meeting recently in Washington, D.C. at which medical researchers from Europe, Asia and the United States reviewed the current state of knowledge of beryllium disease.

Chronic Beryllium Disease is an allergic response to inhalation of beryllium dust that affects only a small percentage of the workers but does cause a serious lung impairment in those individuals who are susceptible.

''If we could identify in advance those people who will become sensitized we could screen them out before exposure,'' Dr. Thomas Markham, Medical Director of Brush Wellman stated. ''Other possibilities might be to learn how to desensitize individuals before they become ill or to develop a cure for the disease itself.''

KANSAS CITY, MO (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - UtiliCorp United (NYSE:UCU) announced Monday that third quarter net income and primary earnings per common share declined compared with the 1989 period.

UtiliCorp remains on target, however, to achieve record financial results for 1990.

For the third quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990, UtiliCorp reported net income of $10.1 million, compared to $11.3 million in the 1989 period and primary earnings per share of 35 cents, compared with 45 cents in last year's quarter. Operating revenues were $147 million, versus $140 million in the prior third period.

Average common shares outstanding increased from 20.8 million in last year's third quarter to 23.6 million in this year's period. The increase is primarily due to a public offering of 2 million new shares in December 1989.

For the nine-month period this year, net income was $37.9 million and earnings per share were $1.37, compared to net income of $34.4 million and earnings per share of $1.48 in the same period last year. Operating revenues for the first nine months of this year were $574 million, vs. $495 million in last year's nine-month period.

Utilicorp Chairman and President Richard C. Green Jr. attributed the decline in third quarter results to the need for electric rate relief at the company's Missouri Public Service division. However, a record year still is anticipated in part because of the favorable resolution of separate electric and gas rate increase requests at Missouri Public Service.

Significantly higher earnings contributions from the company's PSI subsidiary and a full year of contributions from UtiliCorp's Michigan Gas Utilities division also should help achieve the record, Green said. Michigan Gas Utilities was acquired in May 1989.

Based in Kansas City, UtiliCorp provides electric and gas service to 820,000 customers located in eight states and in British Columbia.

CUPERTINO, CA (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Apple Computer has created the Customer Assistance Center, a new toll-free customer relations telephone line.

The Customer Assistance Center opens Monday and will be available Monday through Friday from 6 a.m. to 5 p.m. Pacific time by dialing 1-800-776-2333. All Apple customers are eligible to use the service.

The new toll-free line is not designed to be a technical support hotline, but instead is an extension to the comprehensive Apple customer relations effort. The Customer Assistance Center is a backup system to the many existing forms of customer support and service already available from Apple resellers and others.

In the U.S., Apple sells and provides support through a network of authorized Apple dealers, higher education sales consultants, on-campus support centers, user groups, systems integrators and consultants.

''Apple doesn't want to circumvent the reseller relationship with the customer '' said Jackie Whiting, Apple Assistance Center manager. The Customer Assistance Center can answer questions about Apple sales programs and policies. Owners of Apple products should call the Customer Assistance Center when they believe their problems or concerns are not being adequately addressed by Apple resellers or by regularly designated support or service providers.

When customers call the toll-free number to discuss a sales or support concern they should be prepared to provide basic information including a description of the problem, a list of products being used, support sources previously contacted and the outcome of the contact.

The Customer Assistance Center includes individuals with Apple product knowledge and diverse business and computer experience. This team is backed by a state-of-the-art call tracking system which will ultimately drive a report system designed to give Apple resellers fast, detailed feedback on customer concerns.

RENO, NEV. (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - O'Hara Resources Ltd. of Reno, Nev., confirms its acquisition, through its wholly owned subsidiary, O'Hara Resources (Ghana) Ltd., of a 75 percent increase in a substantial diamond and gold concession in the Republic of Ghana in Western Africa.

The concession is approximately thirty square miles in size and presently has three mining production licenses authorized by the Ghanian government. A feasibility study prepared by Sofreaines of France (an internationally respected mining consultant) indicates one carat of diamonds per cubic meter.

O'Hara has recently shipped 500 tons of equipment for erecting three washing plants on our concessions. The company has arranged the working capital necessary for production startup. The initial production will be 500 cubic meters per hour. The diamond product generally reflects an 80 percent industrial to 20 percent gemstone ratio, with a going price in the $15.00 per carat range.

Production costs are not expected to exceed $2.50 per cubic meter.

The company's vice president of exploration, who has been familiar with the property for more than five years, is now the company's resident representative in Ghana. He is a professional geophysicist, geologist, and registered engineer, holding degrees in his profession from four major universities, and is a well-known consultant throughout the Republic of Ghana.

He has assured management that, assuming arrival of the mining and production equipment by Nov. 20, 1990, production from the project will commence during December 1990.

While the initial placer production facilities are being readied for operation at the site, company representatives have selected additional areas for mining by dredge. The company is negotiating the purchase of a dredge, tugboat and barge for housing the recovery plant.

The anticipated property for the dredge is estimated to run at three carats per cubic meter which would greatly enhance the total production. This dredge and ancillary equipment would increase our production by approximately 500 cubic meters per hour.

MILPITAS, Calif. (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Diasonics Inc. (ASE:DIA) Monday announced sales and earnings for its third quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990.

Net income for the three month period totaled $14.4 million, or 23 cents per share, compared with a loss of $5.9 million, or 8 cents per share, in the third quarter of 1989. Net sales for the third quarter were $61.7 million, up 33 percent from $46.4 million in 1989.

Income from continuing operations for the third quarter totaled $3.0 million, or 5 cents per share, on 64 million shares in 1990, and $1.2 million, or 2 cents per share, on 74 million shares in 1989. The decrease in the number of shares reflects the repurchase of a total of 14.5 million shares to date under a previously announced repurchase program.

Income from discontinued operations was $11.4 million, or 18 cents per share, for the third quarter of 1990. This reflects a final settlement related to the sale of the Magnetic Resonance Imaging Division to Toshiba.

In commenting on these results, Rod Young, Diasonics' president, said, ''The strong financial performance of our X-Ray and European businesses offset flat sales in our domestic ultrasound business.''

''Continued delays in obtaining FDA approval for the Therasonic Lithotripsy System also hurt third quarter results,'' Young noted.

''In September, we initiated shipments of an enhanced version of our Spectra Ultrasound system which incorporated significant improvements in color flow imaging,'' Young continued.

''In addition, we have taken several steps to reduce the expense level of the domestic ultrasound business, including staff and overhead reductions; and we are in the process of further restructuring our Lithotripsy business to lower our breakeven level.''

During the quarter, production and shipments of our new UroView 2000 urology system increased significantly and we also began initial shipments of the FASTable, Fixed Angiographic Surgical Table.

In August, the company entered into a $7 million product development program with PaineWebber R & D Partners. The program will fund development and commercialization of an ultrasound therapeutic device to treat benign prostatic hyperplasia, a condition which afflicts more than half of all males over 60 years of age.

''We entered our fourth quarter in good financial condition, with cash and cash investments of $71 million as of Sept. 30, 1990. The outlook for the quarter is for continuing strong performance in our X-Ray and European businesses and improving results in our Ultrasound and Lithotripsy operations '' Young concluded.

Diasonics Inc. develops, manufactures and markets ultrasound and X-Ray based systems for diagnostic and therapeutic applications. Diasonics is headquartered in Milpitas.

INT'L TOTALIZATOR SYSTEMS REPORTS NET LOSS OF $864,000 FOR THIRD QUARTER

CARLSBAD, CALIF. (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - International Totalizator Systems Inc. (NASDAQ/NMS:ITSI) recorded for the quarter ended Sept. 30 a net loss of $864,000, or (9 cents) per share, on $4.3 million in revenue, compared with the third quarter 1989 with net income of $1.2 million, or 15 cents per share, on revenues of $10.1 million.

The company attributes the loss to its lowest quarterly revenues since the fourth quarter of 1986 combined with higher contract and research and development costs and cost variances for initial production of the airline ticketing (ATB) printer.

Revenues for the first nine months of 1990 were $21.9 million vs. $24.4 million recorded for the like period in 1989. Year-to-date net income amounted to $832,000, or 9 cents per share, compared with $2.3 million of income, or 28 cents per share, recorded for that period in 1989.

The earnings decline of $1.4 million was heavily influenced by the $1.1 million increase in research and development expenditures releated to the ATB printer and next generation wagering terminals.

As Chief Financial Officer Ken Hoitt forecasted in a prior release, a loss is anticipated for the fourth quarter ending Dec. 31 as well. Hoitt sees weakness in that quarter reflecting low revenues due to the fact that a significant portion of current backlog is not scheduled to be filled until 1991. However at this point, Hoitt expects ITS to end the fiscal year 1990 profitably.

The company has met some meaningful objectives so far this year: ATB production, acquisition of McKinnie & Associates and development of next-generation wagering products. And the company continues to increase its sales efforts in the United States and Europe to accelerate growth of its travel, wagering and lottery business.

Financially, ITS has significantly improved its balance sheet by virtually eliminating long-term debt, a very important factor given the current economic environment. In addition, a current ratio of 2.75 to 1, and a $4 million unused credit line are quite adequate for short-term and intermediate-term needs. Backlog at Sept. 30 totaled $20 million.

ITS is an international leader in customized ticketing systems for computerized parimutuel wagering, lotteries and travel industry products. McKinnie & Associates, a wholly owned subsidiary, markets a proprietary management information systems for parimutuel wagering, lotteries and sporting and entertainment facilities.

REDWOOD CITY, CALIF (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Precision Image Monday announced the availability of its DECnet Interface, IF-DENET, for their complete line of electrostatic plotters.

This is the only DECnet interface developed for a wide format electrostatic plotter.

Under the Digital Network Architecture, DECnet interfacing allows the plotter to operate as an end node on the IEEE 802.3 network and to poll up to 16 workstation or file server nodes for a plot file. When a plot file is detected, the plotter automatically initiates a file transfer and begins the plotting process.

Priority among the defined workstation nodes can be established by assigning a polling interval for each node. This assures that the highest priority node has the greatest access to the plotting resource and gives direct access to other workstations, thus minimizing traffic on the network.

Precision Image manufactures a full line of color and monochrome electrostatic plotters and recently introduced a monochrome thermal plotter. CAD/CAM, architecture, mapping, and engineering are markets Precision Image has targeted since 1985.

DECnet, together with TCP/IP, expands Precision Image's networking options, giving users total flexibility within their Local Area Networks. Priced at $3,800, IF-DENET is available for shipment and can be purchased directly from Precision Image.

Precision Image D- and E-size electrostatic plotters are well-known for their use of proprietary drum-based technology to eliminate the media shrinkage, stretching, and poor color registration normally associated with roll-fed web plotters. The material is held tightly in place on the drum by a vacuum seal, preventing the shrinking and stretching caused by humidity and tension changes.

Founded in 1985, Precision Image has headquarters in Redwood City. The company has a broad installed base of customers in the United States, Canada, Europe and the Pacific Rim. Precision Image maintains sales and service offices worldwide.

RICHLAND, WASH (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - The Fast Flux Test Facility at Hanford completed a four-month successful operating cycle at 2 p.m. Sunday with an ongoing world-record achievement -- its fuel.

Two of the FFTF's advanced fuel assemblies have achieved a level of burnup more than four times greater than commercial nuclear power plants, said Plant Manager Dan Swaim of Westinghouse Hanford Co.

''This means we're demonstrating a fuel design that's ideal for the future, one that can extract far more useful energy from a given amount of fuel,'' he added. The latest achievements also surpass previous fuel records established at FFTF as well as performance at other liquid-metal-cooled nuclear power plants in the world.

''In straightforward terms, each pound of this nuclear fuel -- about one cubic inch -- has produced the energy equivalent of 1,450 barrels of crude oil,'' Swaim reported.

The performance records are being chalked up by two advanced oxide fuel assemblies which have been undergoing FFTF irradiation since 1985. The full-size assemblies have achieved approximately 210 megawatt days of energy produced for each kilogram of fuel material, a level comparable to nearly four years of steady full-power operation. Most commercial nuclear fuel must be replaced after a year, having produced 40-50 megawatt days of energy per kilogram of fuel.

As the FFTF plant begins its scheduled maintenance and refueling outage, the two assemblies remain in the reactor to continue irradiation exposure for up to another year. Westinghouse Hanford scientists and engineers predict the total fuel lifetime will prove to be the equivalent of five years of steady power operation before replacement.

Westinghouse Hanford Co. operates FFTF for the Department of Energy.

APPLETON, WI (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Valley Bancorpation (NASDAQ:VYBN) Monday announced that it has reorganized its bank management structure into four geographical regions to enhance market and management focus.

Valley is also creating a service corporation to achieve expense control by consolidating bank backroom operations to include item processing, operations and accounting.

Valley's 116 Wisconsin banking locations have been placed into four major market regions. The two northern regions, which make up the North Division, cover markets which include Appleton, Green Bay, Eau Claire and LaCrosse. The two southern regions, which make up the South Division, cover markets which include Madison, Milwaukee and south central Wisconsin.

Peter M. Platten III, president and chief executive officer of Valley

Bancorporation, stated: ''This reorganization lodges responsibility for regions under the leadership and direction of Richard H. Jones, John F. Mack, John W. Johnson and Rowland J. McClellan, all senior vice presidents of Valley Bancorporation.

As part of the reorganization, Valley is implementing a service corporation concept where all day-to-day bank operational activities, including data processing, will be managed centrally and performed at three regional centers. Relieved of various backroom operational responsibilities, banks will have the opportunity to focus more on business development and customer sales and service.

Sal Troia has been appointed president of Valley Service Corp. Troia's most recent position was senior vice president/chief financial officer with Valley Bank, Madison.

Platten feels Valley's reorganization will improve sales and service levels and provide significant cost savings and operating efficiencies to support Valley's continued growth in the 1990s.

Simultaneous with the management and operational reorganization, work will continue on implementing Valley's new systemwide data processing network called VISION. Once this state-of-the-art system is fully installed by late 1991, Valley's data processing will be handled in-house. Currently, outside processors handle approximately 35 percent of bank processing requirements.

Valley Bancorporation is the third-largest bank holding company with headquarters in Wisconsin. Valley, with assets of $3.3 billion, currently serves Wisconsin through 116 banking offices with additional financial-service companies engaged in leasing, insurance, data processing, trust service, brokerage and credit-card servicing.

CUPERTINO, CA (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - The Motorola Computer Group (MCG) Monday announced that its Commercial Systems Division (CSD) has been awarded a contract to provide the company's Delta Series 3000 super microcomputer systems and accompanying software and training to the State of Tennessee.

The contract spans five years and has a potential value of $55 million.

The award announcement is the culmination of a two-year-long competitive bid process that included Motorola, International Business Machines Corp. (IBM) and Digital Equipment Corp. In its invitation to bid (ITB), the state did not specify that vendors bid open or non-proprietary systems.

However, Motorola's proposal was the only finalist bid that relied on systems that incorporate industry standard, non-proprietary architectures and are based on the UNIX operating system.

The purpose behind the contract award was to establish a single vendor standard for departmental-level computer systems for the state. Until now, this computing niche has been filled by incompatible systems from multiple vendors. With this contract, the state intends to standardize on Motorola's platforms.

Since this is a statewide contract, all state agencies, city and county governments and educational institutions can purchase systems from Motorola.

The agreement initially covers 12 months, with four options to renew, up to a maximum of 60 months. Under the terms of the agreement, Motorola will provide the state with up to $55 million in computer hardware, software, service and training. While the contract covers Motorola's Delta Series 3000 Model 3640 and 3840 computer families, other Motorola platforms may be considered in the future.

The contract is effective immediately. The State of Tennessee has already begun submitting orders for the Motorola equipment.

The Commercial Systems Division of the Motorola Computer Group, based in Cupertino, designs and manufactures multi-user business workstations, network computers and turnkey hardware/software solutions -- all based on ''open'' standards -- for commercial and government markets. These products are marketed to end users, value-added resellers, distributors and original equipment manufacturers.

Motorola is one of the world's leading providers of electronic equipment, systems, components and services for worldwide markets. Products include two-way radios, pagers, cellular telephone systems, semiconductors, defense and aerospace electronics, automotive and industrial electronics equipment, computers, data communications and information processing and handling equipment.

SUNNYVALE, CALIF. (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Focusing on their mutual goal of meeting Hewlett-Packard and Apollo users' needs, the International Association of HP Computer Users (INTEREX) and Apollo Domain User Society (ADUS) will hold their 1991 conferences concurrently in San Diego.

The decision resulted from a meeting attended by INTEREX and ADUS representatives during the October 1990 ADUS Conference in San Diego, according to Douglas A. Eltoft, the new ADUS president.

Carrying on a tradition begun when HP acquired Apollo, two INTEREX board members attended the ADUS meeting. The ''board member exchange'' program developed to ''build on mutual goals as much as possible,'' explained Eltoft.

With INTEREX represented by chairman Lloyd Davis and treasurer Loran Vanden Oever, the group agreed to hold concurrent conferences in San Diego next year. ''The two user groups are interested in working together,'' the ADUS president said.

Since the ADUS and INTEREX conferences will occur at the same time, users who are interested in workstations as well as other HP/Apollo product lines can view the state-of-the-art technology in both environments. In addition, attendees can save in both time used to attend the conference and money invested in traveling and accomodations.

TALLAHASSEE, FL (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - MHI Group Inc. (MH/NYSE) announced today that it has completed a restructuring of the interest of a major investor, MH Associates, that is designed to permit access to additional sources of financing for MHI's acquisition program.

MH Associates, a private equity investment vehicle for the partners of the New York investment of Kellner, DeLeo, has agreed to exchange its subordinated notes and preferred stock in MHI, which together were convertible into 1,900,000 shares of MHI Common Stock, for a nonconvertible $2.1 million of MHI's 10 percent Subordinated Notes due 1996.

MH Associates will continue to hold its option to purchase 1.9 million shares of MHI Common Stock, which was originally granted in 1986. The expiration date of the option has been extended to April 22, 1996, and its exercise price reduced to $0.5625 per share.

As a result of the restructuring, three members of MHI's board of directors designated by MH Associates will resign from the board, leaving George Kellner as the sole MH Associates representative on the Board. The restructuring has also eliminated covenants restricting, among other things, MHI's ability to borrow and issue additional securities.

Fred O. Drake, Jr., chairman and chief executive officer, commented, ''We view the restructuring as a very significant achievement. By stabilizing MH Associates' interest in our company, we have won the freedom to seek new, permanent equity investments and continue to pursue our corporate goal growth through carefully planned acquisitions in the funeral and cemetery industry.''

MHI Group, Inc. markets and sells pre-need and at-need funeral and cemetery services, including pre-arranged insurance.

FREMONT, CALIF. (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - VeloBind Inc. (NASDAQ:VBND), Monday announced sales for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990, of $11,535,000, a record and an increase of 6 percent over sales of $10,858,000 in the third quarter of 1989.

Sales of $33,181,000 for the first nine months of 1990 also marked a record, up 6 percent over sales of $31,381,000, for the first nine months of last year.

Net income for the third quarter of 1990 was $100,000, or 2 cents per share, lower than the $405,000 (8 cents per share) for 1989's third quarter. Earnings for the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990, were $794,000 (17 cents per share), compared with $877,000 (18 cents per share) for the first nine months of 1989.

Profit for the third quarter of 1990 was reduced by unusual start-up costs associated with the manufacturing and introduction of DocuBind, a combination plastic-comb binding system and three-hole punch, offered at significantly less than the cost of two separate machines. Market reception to DocuBind continues to be strong.

Carl J. Swenson, VeloBind's president and chief executive officer, said, ''Our basic business continues to make progress in a difficult economic environment. We experienced good sales performance in the office products market and our international sales were a record for a quarter.

''We announced the sale of VeloBind to General Binding Corp. of Northbrook, Ill., late in the quarter, which resulted in temporary disruption within our direct and dealer sales organizations,'' continued Swenson. ''We believe these groups are now refocused and we intend to turn over an even more attractive company to General Binding.''

VeloBind has manufactured and marketed professional-quality office binding systems for more than 20 years. The company's products are widely used by law offices, accounting firms, government agencies, schools, and other organizations that require attractive, securely bound documents.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK. (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Worthen Banking Corp. (ASE:WOR) has announced that the corporation's Little Rock affiliate, Worthen Bank & Trust Co., N.A. (Worthen Bank), has acquired from the Resolution Trust Corp. (RTC) certain assets and deposit liabilities of First State Savings Bank, FSB of Mountain Home, Ark. (First State).

First State operates two offices in Mountain Home and one branch each in Bull Shoals and Salem, Ark. The four offices of First State will open as branches of Worthen Bank on Monday, with the Northeast branch in Mountain Home also being open on Saturday as a branch of Worthen Bank.

Worthen Bank submitted the winning bid of approximately $1.1 million for the acquisition of First State, which includes approximately $100 million in deposits. The acquisition gives Worthen Bank total assets of approximately $956 million and Worthen Banking Corp. total assets of approximately $2.1 billion.

''With this purchase, Worthen Bank expands its role as the first commercial bank in Arkansas to operate a statewide network of branches,'' said Curt Bradbury, chairman, president, and chief executive officer.

''While Worthen Banking Corp. has had a statewide presence through its affiliate banks prior to this, the purchase of First State by Worthen Bank enhances our existing market penetration in north central Arkansas and introduces us to several new communities,'' Bradbury said.

In addition to its 15 branches in Little Rock and Maumelle, Worthen Bank now has branches in Fayetteville, Springdale, Rogers, Bentonville, Belle Vista, Bull Shoals, Mountain Home, Salem, Callico Rock, Pocohontas, Walnut Ridge, Jonesboro, Harrisburg, Newport, Ashflat, Batesville, Heber Springs, Searcy, Des Arc, and Hot Springs, Ark.

Worthen representatives met with the former First State employees late Friday. Worthen has established a hotline telephone number (1-800-477-2264) for First State customers and is sending additional Worthen Bank staff to assist the First State branch personnel in greeting customers, answering questions and providing other information about the transition.

Customers may continue to use their existing First State checks, deposit slips and other materials during the transition period, Bradbury said.

''We are very excited about our new employees and the opportunity to serve our new customers in Mountain Home, Salem, and Bull Shoals,'' Bradbury said.

Included in last year's second quarter net income was a $1,648,000 gain on the sale of a majority interest in Silvar-Lisco's Belgium development subsidiary, and $742,000 in revenue from a N.V. Philips development contract. This year's second quarter loss per share was 3 cents based on 7,403,354 shares, compared with earnings of 23 cents per share based on 7,390,471 shares in the like quarter a year ago.

The net loss for the six months ended Sept. 30, 1990 was $405,000 on revenue of $4,915,000, or 5 cents per share, based upon 7,400,648 shares, compared to a net income of $1,717,000 on revenue of $7,029,000, or 23 cents per share, based on 7,418,134 shares.

Anthony Wainwright, president and chief executive officer of Silvar-Lisco attributed last quarter's loss to a shortfall in U.S. sales. ''As I touched on last quarter, we are still in the process of rebuilding our U.S. sales base '' stated Wainwright. ''Bringing an experienced sales director on board, like Dick Bosenko, who knows the U.S. market, will build on the company's current efforts to increase domestic sales for the remainder of fiscal year 1991.''

Dick Bosenko joined Silvar-Lisco as the director of U.S. sales in August of this year. Bosenko has over 20 years of experience in the computer industry with such companies as Digital Equipment Corp., and Tangent Systems Inc.

Previously, Bosenko held the position of director of Tangent Products for Cadence Design Systems.

Wainwright also commented on how the current economic conditions will impact the financial success of the company. ''During tougher economic times, we are fortunate to provide products that increase employee productivity. Indeed, our tools will aid companies that are looking for ways to increase the efficiency of their operations,'' stated Wainwright.

HOLLYWOOD, FL (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Suncoast Savings and Loan Association (the ''Association'') reported Monday a revised unaudited net loss for its fiscal year ended June 30 to $4.3 million, or $2.33 per share.

The Association had previously reported a net loss of $3.3 million, or $1.80 per share, including a $4.4 million after-tax downward adjustment stemming from unexpected prepayment experience related to mortgage servicing assets created from loans sold in several prior years.

The additional $972,000 net loss is primarily due to a $500,000 increase in the after-tax adjustment to mortgage servicing assets, a $200,000 addition to the general loss reserves and a $400,000 downward adjustment to the gains on the sale of loans recorded in fiscal 1990. The revised results are being reviewed by the Association's independent public accountants.

''The Association and its accountants are moving forward as quickly as possible to release audited results,'' said Albert J. Finch, chairman.

The Association also announced Monday earnings of $246,404, or 13 cents per share, for the first quarter ended Sept. 30. This compares with net income of $487,024 or 26 cents per share for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1989.

After the adjustments set forth above, the Association met its tangible and core regulatory capital requirements at June 30, but fell short of its risk-based capital requirement by $396,000.

On Sept. 30, due to certain asset restructuring, the Association believes that it was in compliance with its risk-based capital requirement, with a 6.5 percent ratio or $188,000 in excess of its requirement. Finch said, ''We are committed to meeting and exceeding all of our regulatory capital requirements.''

CHARDON, OHIO (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Essef Corp. (NASDAQ/NMS:ESSF) Monday announced the election of Thomas B. Waldin as president and chief executive officer of the company.

James A. Horner, who founded the company 36 years ago as a manufacturer of composite plastic tanks for use in water storage and treatment resigned as the company's president and chief executive officer. He will remain as the Chairman of the Board of Directors.

Waldin, 48, has most recently been a private investor managing several small companies as well as an economic advisor to the Prime Minister of Estonia. Prior to that, Waldin worked for Donn Inc., a private worldwide manufacturer of building products, where he concluded his eleven year tenure as its president and chief executive officer.

Upon the acquisition of Donn Inc. in 1986 by U.S.G. Corp, a conglomerate with annual revenues of approximately $2.5 billion, Waldin became executive vice president and chief operating officer of U.S.G. Interiors, a new subsidiary which was formed from Donn Inc. and other U.S.G. units and had sales of about $600 million/yr. Waldin held that position for the year following the acquisition to help integrate Donn Inc. with the conglomerate.

''Essef Corp. is a company with strong core businesses,'' said Waldin. ''We are committed to increasing the value to shareholders of this company by returning Essef to a stable and growing designer, manufacturer and marketer of high performance polymer products.''

As Essef Corp. announced earlier this month, the company intends to sell its FAME Plastics subsidiary which comprises substantially all of its business machine segment. The company's other two business segments are its water treatment and its swimming pool and spa segments.

As part of his compensation package, Waldin will receive options to buy up to 971,800 shares of the company. The vesting of the options is staggered over the next two years and no option is exercisable until the price per share of company stock is consistently equal to or greater than $5.00 per share for a 90 day period.

The company's common shares are quoted on the National Association of Security Dealers' NASDAQ National Market System under the symbol ''Essf'' and are reported elsewhere as Essef Corp. The company designs and manufacturers products for selected markets through the application of high performance polymeric materials and innovative process technologies.

NEW YORK (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Kankaku Securities Co. Ltd. (formerly The Nippon Kangyo Kakumaru Securities Co. Ltd.) and Scudder, Stevens & Clark Inc. have launched in Japan a $50 million offshore equity fund, primarily for Japanese investors, that will invest in small emerging companies on a global basis.

The Kankaku/Scudder fund is one of the first global emerging company funds of its kind. The fund builds on Scudder's small company investment experience overseas and in the United States with such funds as The Japan Fund, Scudder New Asia Fund, Scudder New Europe Fund and Scudder Development Fund.

The new fund also reflects increasing interest among Japanese investors in an expanding horizon of ivestments and utilization of the expertise of a non-Japanese investment manager, like Scudder, with extensive global experience.

Douglas M. Loudon, a Scudder Managing Director, said the focus on small companies globally reflects an evolution from international and global investment trends beginning in the 1980's, and the anticipation of emerging investment opportunities in the coming decade.

Scudder, Stevens and Clark has been an innovator in international investing for nearly four decades. In 1953, Scudder established the first SEC-registered international fund, the Scudder International Fund. In 1984, the firm opened the first investment channel to expanding Korean markets, by launching the Korea Fund.

In recent years, Scudder launched the first publicly-traded U.S. funds to invest throughout Southeast Asia (Scudder New Asia Fund), in Brazil (The Brazil Fund) and throughout Eastern and Western Europe (Scudder New Europe Fund). Last year, Scudder and Merrill Lynch created the first fund, listed on the London Stock Exchange, that invests in high yield sovereign debt obligations, the Sovereign High Yield Investment Co. N.V.

This is the fourth fund to be launched by the Kankaku/Scudder joint venture since it was created in 1988 to jointly manage assets of U.S., Japanese and other Asian investors. The new small company, global fund will be managed by a team headed by Andrew Economos, a portfolio manager for the Scudder New Asia Fund and Gerald Moran, a Scudder small company portfolio manager.

PHILADELPHIA (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - West Virginia bank merger activity was up during the first eight months of 1990, versus the same period in 1989.

Through August 1990, seven bank acquisitions were announced by three acquirors versus only four announcements by four acquirors in 1989, according to Berwind Financial Group.

This stands in contrast to bank merger activity in other states, which generally declined. Part of the reason for the continued activity in West Virginia was the price performance of bank stocks, typically used as currency in mergers, as these stocks only marginally underperformed the broad market, and outperformed most other bank and financial stocks.

The investment banking firm noted that, from the beginning of this year to the end of August, the broad Dow Jones Industrials, Standard & Poor's 500, and New York Stock Exchange averages have each lost between 5.04 percent and 9.26 percent. At the same time, the NASDAQ OTC Composite index fell 16.18 percent. In general, financial stocks declined substantially more.

The Standard & Poor's and New York Stock Exchange financial averages lost 23.32 percent and 20.37 percent respectively during the same period, compared to a 26.60 percent loss for the NASDAQ OTC Banks index.

Berwind Financial Group's index of West Virginia commercial banks fell just 10.80 percent during the eight months ended Aug. 31, marginally underperforming the broad market.

''The year 1989 was an especially disappointing one for West Virginia bank stocks -- they declined in the neighborhood of 4 percent, while the broad market gained about 27 percent.

Berwind Financial Group offers investment banking services to financial institutions and middle market companies, and makes merchant banking investments as principal. NEW YORK (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - MSR Exploration Ltd. announced Monday that its board of directors has signed an agreement in principle to purchase all of the outstanding shares of Houston Petroleum Co. of Houston, subject to evaluation and verification of oil and gas properties by MSR's consulting petroleum engineers and further approval of the board of directors of MSR Exploration Ltd.

Houston Petroleum is a privately held company which has been in continuous operation since 1961. It is an oil and gas exploration and producing company which operates primarily within the upper Texas Gulf coast.

Its reserves are located within the prolific Frio, Yegua-Wilcox trends, Southern East Texas basin, and along the Mexia-Talco fault trend of Central Texas. Houston's management estimates that its proved discounted reserves exceed $7.5 million and their possible reserves exceed a discounted $70 million.

Based upon preliminary data presented by Houston Petroleum to MSR, the board of directors of MSR believes that this acquisition could significantly increase its revenues and cash flow in the coming six months by virtue of Houston's current acreage under lease, its work over potential and its highly experienced exploration team. If this acquisition is consummated, the approximate price will be $5 million in cash and securities.

MSR Exploration Ltd. is an oil and gas producing company and is listed and traded on the American Stock Exchange and on the Toronto Stock Exchange under the symbol "MSR".

The initial order has been received and all stores will be stocked from Nov. 5 to Nov. 12. Von's, which has approximately 27 percent of the grocery market share in Southern California, will stock for resale all four flavors of Vegas Chips in the 7-ounce size.

Vegas Chips Inc. has a promotional and marketing plan in place with Von's for the next year to promote, display and advertise Vegas Chips through their stores. Vegas Chips has also been approved for sale of its products in Scolaris Warehouse Markets, a 17-store chain headquartered in Sparks, Nev. NASHVILLE, TN (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - O'Charley's Inc. (NASDAQ/NMS:CHUX) Monday reported record revenues and net income for the first three quarters of its current fiscal year, with net income up 88 percent to $708,900 from $377,000 last year.

Revenues increased by 35 percent during the three quarters ended Oct. 7, from $26,826,000 in 1989 to $36,095,000 for the current period. For the third quarter revenues were $11,137,000, up 32 percent over $8,419,000 last year and net income rose 107 percent to $228,000 for the quarter vs. $110,000 last year.

Fully diluted earnings per share were up slightly for the year to date, 29 cents vs. 24 cents, and down slightly for the quarter, 6 cents vs. 7 cents. Weighted average shares outstanding for the third quarter totalled 4.1 million reflecting the 2.5 million more shares issued in a public offering mid-year, compared with 1.7 million when last year's per share earnings were computed. Results are reported on a pro forma basis.

During the quarter the company opened its second company store in the Louisville, Ky., market, had a company store under construction in Memphis, Tenn., and is scheduled to open a franchised restaurant in Montgomery, Ala., on Nov. 6. ''We will finish the year with 31 company and franchised restaurants in operation, exactly as we had planned,'' Wachtel said.

Wachtel noted that the dilutive effect of the public offering on per share earnings comparisons would prevail through the second quarter of 1991. In late September the company announced that its board of directors had authorized open-market purchases by the company of up to 500,000 shares of the company's common stock.

Wachtel said management believes the current market valuation of the stock, which is below book value, does not properly reflect the true value of the company.

Third quarter net revenues were $326.2 million, compared with $348.3 million for the same quarter last year. Operating income for the three months was $2.5 million, compared with $16.4 million during the same period in 1989.

A net loss of $22.7 million occurred during this year's third quarter, compared with a loss of $2.5 million in 1989 which included a gain of $10.6 million from open-market debt purchases. Net cash provided by continuing operations was $22.2 million, compared with $41 million in last year's third quarter. For the nine months, net revenues were $991.8 million, compared with $1 billion in the first nine months of 1989. Operating income for the nine months was $17 million, compared with $50.6 million for the same period last year. The company incurred a net loss of $53.2 million for the nine months, compared with a loss of $27.6 million during last year's first nine months.

This year's results included a gain of $6.9 million from open-market debt purchases, while last year's results for the nine months included a gain of $11.3 million from debt purchases. Net cash provided by continuing operations was $28.9 million, compared with $53.5 million last year.

Peter C. Browning, newly elected president and chief executive officer, said that the declines in net revenues, operating income, and net cash provided by continuing operations, and the increase in net loss resulted primarily from a 7 percent decrease in average wallboard prices, compared with the same period last year. Browning also noted that billings by The Austin Co., though down slightly from last year's third quarter, remain near record levels.

Earlier Monday, National Gypsum and its parent, privately held Aancor Holdings Inc., announced that they had filed on Oct. 28, voluntary petitions for protection under Chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas, Dallas Division. The Austin Co., a wholly owned subsidiary of National Gypsum, was not included in the filing.

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - American Vanguard Corp. (NASDAQ:AMGD) Monday announced that its wholly owned subsidiary, Amvac Chemical Corp., has successfully brought its new $11 million plant expansion to manufacture pentachloronitrobenze (''PCNB'') on stream.

The first commercial shipments of PCNB were made last week.

PCNB is an agricultural fungicide that has wide use in many important food and ornamental products. According to Glenn A. Wintemute, president and chief operating officer, ''PCNB in its technical form has been in critically short supply in the United States market place due to purity requirements of the finished product. Amvac has the only plant in the country that has successfully manufactured PCNB to the requirements of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

'' We have expended over $3,000,000 in conducting PCNB toxicological and environmental fate studies for the protection of the environment and are continuing studies in accordance with the current requirements of the EPA and the California Department of Food and Agriculture (CDFA).''

Wintemute further stated, ''Over the past several years, with no U.S. source of supply of PCNB, demand for a local source of PCNB has been building steadily. We look forward to meeting that demand with U.S. manufactured PCNB and expect that sales of this chemical will begin contributing to revenues in the current year.''

PORTLAND, MAINE (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - ImmuCell president, Thomas G. Adelman, Ph.D., reported in a letter to be delivered to stockholders that the development of ImmuCell's first immunopreventive product, First Defense(tm), was nearing launch, with its clinical trials completed, and final submission for USDA registration scheduled for early November.

It is intended that First Defense will be used to reduce the incidence of enteritis in dairy and beef calves.

Adelman stated that ''...the projected launch of First Defense will inaugurate a new strategic direction for ImmuCell--one that focuses upon disease prevention products, not only for animal health care but also for human health applications. I believe that the technology that ImmuCell has been developing over the past three years can successfully address not only some well-defined animal health needs, but also a series of specific human disease prevention needs. We estimate that the total domestic human and animal markets for immunopreventive products that satisfy those needs potentially could exceed $400 million. ImmuCell's long term success will depend on our ability to capture a significant portion of that market.''

ImmuCell's strategy for approaching that market was outlined by Adelman: ''...we intend to first commercialize the animal health product applications of this antibody technology to increase revenues and generate earnings. We hope that the sales of First Defense and subsequent animal products will develop credibility for our technology. As exposure to our animal immunopreventives grows, we anticipate that we will be well positioned to introduce, with an appropriate corporate partner, enteritis prevention products into discrete human markets. These markets include different groups of people with a significant risk of enteric disease: certain AIDS patients, other immunocompromised patients, hospitalized infants, post-surgical patients children in day-care, and travelers to non-industrialized countries.''

The company has already begun research on its first human disease prevention product, which, if successful, could be used to treat cryptosporidiosis, an often fatal infection that occurs in some AIDS patients.

Adelman concluded by saying that the company ''...hopes that the impending launch of First Defense and the initiation of our own human immunotherapeutic product development will raise the profile of ImmuCell within the biotechnology industry and contribute to our objective of attaining profitability.'' BRAINTREE, MASS (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Nellie Mae, the largest holder of federally reinsured student and parent loans in New England, announced 1990 third quarter earnings of $3.4 million an increase of 72 percent over third quarter 1989.

Earnings for the nine month period ending Sept. 30, increased 45 percent over the 1989 period to $8.0 million.

The corporation, established in 1982, presently holds $1.2 billion in federally reinsured student loans and $140 million in supplemental loans. This represents a 50 percent increase over last year's portfolio which totalled almost $860 million dollars. At Sept. 30, 1990, total assets were $1.4 billion, an increase of 44 percent over Sept. 30, 1989.

Nellie Mae's portfolio contains over 400,000 student loans, of which more than 85 percent are those of students who attended four year colleges, universities or graduate schools. Less than 4 percent of the of the loans held by Nellie Mae belong to students who attended proprietary or trade schools. In 1989, Nellie Mae had an actual default rate of just over 2 percent.

Recently, attention has focused on the issue of loan defaults in the 25 year old Stafford Student Loan Program formerly known as the Guaranteed Student Loan Program. The New England experience continues to be extremely positive. Of the tens of thousands of students who have participated in this program, 97 percent begin making payments immediately upon graduation.

Of the 3 percent who do default, principally due to an inability to pay, nearly 50 percent later repay. The Stafford Student Loan Program will be scrutinized by Congress in 1992 as part of the Reauthorization of Higher Education Act. At this time, the federal government may modify the loan program and other sources of federal financial aid.

Nellie Mae, located in Braintree, Mass., supports higher education through its secondary market programs working with over 400 lenders in New England and New York, four supplemental education loan programs, and philanthropic endeavors.

MINNEAPOLIS (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Itasca Systems Inc. Monday introduced the Data General Aviion version of its ITASCA object database management system (ODBMS).

ITASCA is the first object DBMS to run on the popular line of UNIX-based workstations and servers. The company also announced it has become a member of Data General's Independent Software Vendor (ISV) program.

Introduced in August, the ITASCA ODBMS is a distributed, multi-client, multi-server system that supports highly complex workstation applications. It is based on the ORION prototypes developed by the Object-Oriented and Distributed Systems Laboratory of the Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp. (MCC).

Object (also called object-oriented) database management systems differ from hierarchical, network, and relational systems in using ''persistent objects''--reusable modules of data code -- rather than serial lines of code as the fundamental units of application programming. This enables ITASCA to operate on complex data significantly faster than the other, comparable systems.

The Data General's Aviion workstations and servers incorporate the Motorola 88000 RISC (reduced instruction set computer) microprocessor, providing a high-performance hardware platform for graphical applications in the areas of computer-aided design (CAD), computer-aided software engineering (CASE), computer-integrated manufacturing (CIM), computer-aided publishing (CAP) and mechanical computer-aided engineering (MCAE).

Founded in 1989, Itasca Systems Inc. develops and markets object-oriented database management systems and related products for the computer workstation market. Itasca Systems is a privately held, independent business entity partially funded by Control Data Corp. As a member of MCC, it is licensed to market the results of research by the MCC Object-Oriented and Distributed Systems Laboratory in Austin, Texas.

Data General Corp., which is headquartered in Westboro, Mass., was founded in 1968. The company is a leading worldwide supplier of computer systems for business, industry, education and the government. In fiscal year 1989, Data General reported revenues of $1.31 billion.

Net income for the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990 was $7,289,000, an increase of $1,337,000 or 22% over the comparable period of 1989. Net income per share increased to 37 cents for the three months ended Sept. 30, 1990 over 25 cents per share for the same period of 1989. For the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990, net written premiums of $73,857,000 increased 14% over the $64,838,000 reported for the nine months ended Sept. 30 1989. Net earned premiums for the quarter and nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990 were $23,972,000 and $70,568,000, respectively, compared with $22,163,000 and $64,869,000 for the comparable periods of 1989.

The statutory combined ratio for the third quarter and nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990 was 98.1% and 98.8%, respectively, compared with 101.0% and 98.9% for the 1989 third quarter and nine months period, respectively. 1989 third quarter results were adversely impacted by net losses of $721,000 attributable to Hurricane Hugo. The effective income tax rates of 17.7% and 17.2% for the quarter and nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990, respectively, and 11.8% and 13.4%, for the comparable prior year periods result principally from the effects of tax-exempt interest income. Effective rates are increasing due to the negative impact of alternative minimum taxes.

Cash flow from operations aggregated $22,718,000 for the nine months ended

Sept. 30, 1990 compared to $20,739,000 in the corresponding period of 1989.

CINCINNATI (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - CBIS announced Monday the appointment of L.L. Hendrickson as head of its European operations.

CBIS President Richard A. Licursi said, ''This appointment reflects our commitment to the European marketplace and to developing CBIS as a global corporation.'' Hendrickson was formerly president and CEO of LDN Communications Inc., another Cincinnati Bell Inc. subsidiary.

Since its inception, CBIS has targeted international markets and has won contracts in Europe, the Asia/Pacific region, Australia and Mexico. Substantial international growth has come from Europe, where the company has done business with British Telecom, Copenhagen Telephone (KTAS), Telecom Eireann (Ireland), and Uniqueair (U.K.)

CBIS also established a strategic foothold in the European mobile communications market earlier this year by agreeing to supply (through Digital Equipment Corp.) a complete cellular support system to Deutsche Telepost Consulting GmbH (DETECON) for the pan-European digital mobile communications network, D1.

''There are tremendous growth opportunities for CBIS in Europe,'' said Hendrickson. ''The establishment of a full-service multinational operation in Europe gives us the capability to capture those opportunities and to offer our European clients responsive, high-quality service. CBIS does not want to be an American company merely importing its products and services into Europe. Rather, we intend to become an important member of the European business community.''

Hendrickson, an M.I.T. and Harvard Business School graduate, has been in the telecommunications industry since joining AT&T in 1964. After serving as director of strategic planning during the restructuring of the Bell System in the early 1980s, Hendrickson moved to the unregulated subsidiary of AT&T that developed and marketed business communications equipment and computers.

CBIS, a subsidiary of Cincinnati Bell Inc., provides information management solutions to financial, telecommunications and government entities.

NEW YORK (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - AT&T and Deutsche Bundespost Telekom (Germany) have agreed to lower accounting rates 17 percent effective April 1, 1991.

Accounting rates are the basis for the charges phone companies pay each other to complete calls in their networks.

The two companies also agreed to connect electronic mail systems and to offer companies in both countries one-stop shopping in provisioning private lines.

John Berndt, president of AT&T International Communications Services, said, ''We are pleased with the progress that has been made in negotiating lower accounting rates with the Bundespost, and are looking forward to continued progress. This is an important step to help us reduce AT&T's costs for international calling.''

Today's agreement also allows users of AT&T Mail and Telebox, the German Bundespost's electronic mail system to exchange messages and take advantage of the features of both systems. AT&T Mail has similar X.400 interconnections with 19 electronic mail systems around the world today. AT&T Mail and Telebox are compatible with the International Telegraph and Telephone Consultative Committee (CCITT) X.400 Message Handling System standard.

Under the one-stop shopping segment of the agreement, customers can choose either carrier to arrange for and provide telecommunications services between the two countries. The service, designed to streamline network procurement and management, will be used for leased lines. Pilot applications are already underway and the service will become generally available in the first half of 1991.

NEW YORK (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - For the quarter ended Sept. 30, Harris & Harris Group Inc., (''H&H Group'' or the ''Company'') reported net income of $81,000 or 1 cent per fully-diluted share, vs. $14,000 in the third quarter of 1989.

Revenues increased by 12 percent to $2,568,000 vs. $2,303,000.

For the nine months ended Sept. 30, H&H Group reported net income of $221,000 or 2 cents per fully-diluted share, vs. $369,000 or 4 cents per fully-diluted share last year. Revenues increased by eight percent to $7,890,000 vs. $7,326,000 last year.

The increase in revenues in both the three-month and nine-month periods reflected the continued growth of Capital Trust Company and a near doubling of revenues by the company's smaller insurance-brokerage operation, Harris & Harris of Georgia. Not including interest-income, H&H Group's revenues (not including any revenues from 50-percent owned Ag Services of America Inc.) increased by 18 percent in the third quarter and 13 percent in the nine month period vs. last year.

Interest income declined because of the company's use of cash to repurchase shares of its stock in 1989 and to purchase 50 percent of Ag Services in April of 1990.

Year-over-year, the company's income from operations expanded sharply in both periods: from $121,000 to $193,000 in the third quarter, and from $299,000 to $585,000 in the first nine months.

The decline in net income in the first nine months of this year, to $221,000 from $369,000 last year, reflected the inclusion in last year's first nine months of $441,000 in net gain on investments (vs. $19,000 this year) and $140,000 in extraordinary income (vs. $6,000 this year).

Pre-tax income in the three month and nine-month periods of 1990 included, respectively, $217,000 and $417,000 from the company's equity interest in the earnings of Ag Services.

In the fourth quarter, such one-time consulting expenses are estimated to be approximatley another $70,000. No additional consulting expenses are currently scheduled thereafter. This program of reviews reflects an overall corporate program being instituted to emphasize profitability and cash flow from existing operations.

PERRIS, Calif. (OCT. 29) BUSINESS WIRE - Modtech Inc. (NASDAQ:MODT), a leader in California manufacturing of modular relocatable classrooms, Monday announced operating results for the third quarter and the nine months ended Sept. 30.

For the third quarter, pro-forma net income increased to $1,153,000, or 31 cents per share, on revenues of $15,458,000 vs. pro-forma net income of $587,000, or 20 cents per share, on revenues of $12,971,000 for the like period last year.

For the nine months ended September 1990, the company's pro-forma net income rose to $2,421,000, or 74 cents per share, on revenues of $38,535,000 compared with pro-forma net income of $1,091,000, or 38 cents per share, on revenues of $31,418,000 for the like period in fiscal 1989.

In reviewing the results for the first nine months of fiscal 1990, Evan Gruber chief executive officer, attributed the company's increase primarily to additional production at its expanded manufacturing facilities in response to continued overall demand for modular relocatable classrooms, as well as increased sales of the customized classrooms built by the Del-Tec division under the company's management.

Gruber further noted that the growth in population in California, both from births and from immigration, will continue to lead to increasing school enrollments. Changes in population demographics have left many existing permanent schools with excess capacity.

Consequently, in 1986, California adopted legislation that requires, with certain exceptions, that 30 percent of all new classrooms constructed with state funds be relocatable structures. Modular relocatable classrooms take less time to construct and install and cost less than conventional ''red brick'' schools. In addition, modulars permit a school district to relocate the classrooms as student enrollment shifts.

With its improved financial position due in large part to the July 1990 initial public offering, Modtech Inc. is prepared to benefit from the opportunities in its niche of the infrastructure market.

Modtech Inc. designs, manufactures, markets and installs modular relocatable classrooms. The classrooms are sold primarily to school districts throughout California.

By MICHAEL STRAUSS - Comtex Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (OCT. 29) COMTEX - President Bush is expected to sign into law a package of securities reforms passed by the House last Friday which would give the Securities and Exchange Commission greater authority to prosecute securities fraud on a global basis.

The bill, which was approved by the Senate on Thursday, would allow the SEC to cooperate with foreign governments during the investigation of securities violations, including insider trading cases.

It also gives the SEC greater jurisdiction in its sanctioning of securities professionals over foreign securities law violations and grants the SEC an exemption from the Freedom of Information Act to ensure confidential treatment of records by foreign securities authorities.

The measure seeks to improve the information flow between shareholders and share issuers by requiring banks and brokers to forward proxy materials to mutual fund shareholders and provides the SEC with funding levels of $178 million for fiscal year 1990 and $212.6 million for fiscal 1991.

"This omnibus bill sends yet another message to the marketplace that the pathology of greed that characterized the 1980s is over," said Rep. Edward Markey (D-Mass.), the chairman of the House subcommittee which oversees the SEC.

BAGHDAD (OCT 29) - Iraq has started producing and selling powdered milk for children over one year old in response to the embargo imposed by the world community, a senior official said here Monday.

"Large quantities of powdered milk for children over one year old are now being produced," Milk Industry Director General Ghasan Ibrahim Hussein said in an interview with Iraq television.

He said milk officials were also experimenting with making powdered milk for infants under one year old.

Iraq moved in August, in the face of a United-Nations-backed embargo following its invasion and occupation of Kuwait August 2, to ration a dozen key food products. This included powdered milk, had previously been imported.

Thousands of children holding empty bottles demonstrated on October 13 in Baghdad in front of the U.S. and British embassies.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein this week ended rationing of gasoline, saying Iraq had enough chemical additives to continue refining fuel for cars from oil.

BERN (OCT. 29) - The Swiss authorities have agreed in principle to let embargo-bound Iraq send a plane to Geneva to pickup medical supplies, a foreign ministry spokesman said here Monday.

The date for the plane to arrive to fetch 15 tonnes of medicine bought by Iraq has not been set, the spokesman said.

Iraq has been embargoed by the United Nations for its occupation of Kuwait since August, but medicines are not part of the cut-off of the flow of goods.

A U.N. observer will be allowed to inspect the Iraqi plane, the spokesman said.

He added that if the plane came to Switzerland bringing Swiss among hostages held in Iraq, then "that would be a good surprise."

He stressed, however, that Switzerland was against any negotiation for the release of hostages held in Iraq.

Separately, some 270 French hostages were due in Paris later Monday from Baghdad. The Iraqi Airways plane bringing them is expected to return home with medicine.

Westerners from several states are being held in Iraq, which faces a United-States-led force of over 200,000 troops stationed in Saudi Arabia and enforcing the embargo.

ROME (OCT 29) - The IRI government holding company announced approval on Monday of the merger of Banco di Roma and Cassa di Risparmia di Roma, a savings bank. The combined company will be the biggest Italian banking group.

IRI, which controls both banks, announced its decision after a meeting of its Board of Directors.

It added that by next January, the merged entity would be joined by Banco di Santo Spirito, a subsidiary of Cassa di Risparmia di Roma, to constitute a banking group with total client deposits of 96.15 trillion lire (83.5 billion dollars) and with 24,000 employees at 780 establishments, primarily in central Italy.

WASHINGTON (OCT 29) - U.S. Secretary of State James Baker warned Iraq Monday that using chemical or biological weapons would bring "the most severe consequences."

He said Iraqi President Saddam Hussein "must realize there is a limit to the international community's patience" in trying to secure Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait, which Iraqi troops invaded August 2.

"He must also realize that should he use chemical or biological weapons, there will be the most severe consequences," said Mr. Baker, whose comments were prepared for delivery to the Los Angeles World Affairs Council.

He added that while the United States was pursuing a diplomatic solution to the Gulf crisis, it has excluded no option.

"Let no one doubt: We will not rule out a possible use of force if Iraq continues to occupy Kuwait," said Mr. Baker.

"Saddam Hussein's way is not the way of peace. His is a prescription for war. And I will say this bluntly: If his way of doing business prevails, there will be no hope of peace in the area," he said.

U.S. troops have been sent to the Gulf, he said, to provide an "effective and decisive military response" if needed.

Mr. Baker will leave as early as Friday for Saudi Arabia and other Gulf states with stops in Europe to consult with "coalition partners about the general situation in the Gulf," the State Department said Monday.

LUXEMBOURG (OCT. 29) - Environment ministers of the 12 European Economic Community states agreed here Monday to try and hold down emissions of carbon dioxide gas -- believed to be responsible for the phenomenon known as "global warming" -- to their present level by the year 2000.

An Italina official said that a disagreement involving Britain, which wanted the deadline to be set in the year 2005, had been resolved by the other countries agreeing to keep their own emission levels proportionately lower, so that the overall target can be reached.

The decision comes as a week-long world environment conference is opening in Geneva. A ministerial meeting is due to close the conference in a week's time.

Carbon dioxide, produced by the burning of fossil fuels by cars, power stations and other devices, is believed by scientists to be responsible for the so-called "greenhouse effect."

This traps solar radiation in the earth's atmosphere, which is therefore expected to slowly heat up, with disastrous effects for the environment.

MANAMA (OCT 30) - The U.S. and British embassies are now the last two functioning Western diplomatic missions in Iraqi-occupied Kuwait following the evacuation of the French Embassy on Monday.

(The seven remaining French diplomats in Kuwait returned to Paris Monday in a plane carrying all of the country's nationals who had been held against their will in Iraq and Kuwait.)

With their compounds encircled by Iraqi troops, U.S. and British diplomats are reported to be living under extremely difficult physical conditions.

Lacking sufficient reserves of potable water, the 12 U.S. envoys have been forced to drink from their swimming pool.

They have been living without electricity but will hold out as long as possible, according to the designated U.S. ambassador to Kuwait, Edward Gnehm, who is currently based here in Bahrain.

Only two British diplomats remain in Kuwait, Ambassador Michael Watson and Consul Larry Banks.

Iraq in August instructed all embassies in Kuwait to close down and relocate to Baghdad, arguing that as the emirate had become part of Iraq there was no need for diplomatic missions in Kuwait City.

When most governments refused to comply with the ultimatum, Iraqi troops cut off supplies of water and electricity to the missions.

The embassies that were finally obliged to cease functioning stressed that the closures were temporary, as the international community has refused to recognize Iraq's seizure of Kuwait.

SAN FRANCISCO, California, Oct 29 (AFP) - Police arrested 61 demonstrators Monday who burned flags and trashed a fast-food restaurant in protesting U.S. involvement in the Gulf.

"They broke tables and windows and scattered food around" in a McDonald's restaurant, said police Sergeant Bob Crosat.

At least 200 demonstrators had gathered outside the Pacific Stock Exchange just after dawn, and almost an equal number of police met them, said Sgt. Crosat.

The crowd, chanting and carrying signs, marched down Market Street and had turned violent by the time it reached the restaurant, he said. Some protesters burned American flags.

U.S. President George Bush was in San Francisco Monday and said he would not hesitate to use force in the Gulf if provoked. But the demonstration did not appear timed to coincide with his visit.

BRUSSELS (OCT 30) - Government troops in Rwanda appear to have started a new offensive in the civil war, despite a ceasefire concluded a few days ago, a Belgian radio report said Monday.

Government forces in the former Belgian colony in East Africa have advanced on major positions held by rebels who infiltrated from neighbouring Uganda, the report said. The offensive concentrated on towns in the border area near Uganda.

Thus, the ceasefire which had been mediated by Belgian Premier Wilfried Martens lasted less than a week.

HAMBURG (OCT 30) - Mental jogging makes for a healthy mind, according to Erno Rubik, inventor of the world-famous Cube and other devices for cerebral acrobatics.

After the physical fitness craze of the last decade, the 1990s will be the decade of the mind, the Hungarian professor of architecture predicts.

In his Budapest workshop Rubik has come up with four new playthings designed to help boost brainpower. Take ''Triamid'', a brightly-coloured pyramid consisting of ten pieces, for instance.

The four surfaces of the components which go to make the pyramid are coloured differently and can be manipulated to display an almost endless number of combinations. A high degree of mental stamina is then needed to restore the jumbled-up pyramid to its original form.

''Tangle'', ''Fifteen'' and ''Dice'' are three other exasperating inventions from Rubik.

Tangle consists of 25 puzzle pieces emblazoned with a symbol which looks a little like a fisherman's knot. All are the same, apart from subtile differences in colour, and the idea is to fit them together ensuring that the pattern is maintained throughout.

Fifteen entails rearranging rows of numbered pieces in a frame to arrive at the correct sequence of 1 to 15 which inspired the name of the game. Turn the puzzle over and a new brain teaser awaits a solution.

Finally, Dice players must grapple with a hollow cube full of different-coloured particles which tumble about until all the dots on the dice face are picked out in white.

Rubik says the games are designed for different personalities ranging from the strategic thinker to the playful type through to contestants with an analytical mind.

There's nothing to stop a player opting for the device, which on the surface at least, seems least suited to his personality but Rubik has even devised a test for would-be mental he-men who want to see where their talents lie.

KAMPALA (OCT. 29) - Uganda on Monday denied Kenyan press reports that Kenyans were being expelled from Uganda in retaliation for the deportation of Ugandans living illegally in Kenya.

An immigration department official here told Agence France-Presse: "Those reports are baseless."

On Monday the pro-government Kenya Times said that "by Saturday over 500 Kenyans had been arrested and lined up for repatriation".

But the Ugandan immigration official, who declined to be named, said: "If any alien commits an offence, those aliens are brought before court. We are not victimising any one nationality."

More than 1,200 foreigners in Kenya have been arrested and served with expulsion orders, according to Kenyan press reports, since President Daniel arap Moi ordered the expulsion of illegal aliens more than a week ago in a move that targetted Ugandans and Rwandans.

HANOVER, GERMANY (OCT. 29) - The German Federal Railway System (Bundesbahn) is about to enter a new age of rail transportation.

With the summer schedule that goes into effect June 1, 1991, a new generation of Inter-City Express (Ice) trains designed to reach speeds up to 250 kilometers an hour will be introduced in western Germany along the north-south axis between Hamburg, Frankfurt and Munich.

''We hope that new high speed trains will improve our income situation,'' says Werner Remmert, president of the Bundesbahn regional branch in Hanover. As in most countries in the world, the railways in Germany have been a chronic money-loser.

The motto of new Bundesbahn services is, ''Twice the speed of the automobile, half the speed of the airplane''.

Since railway stations are generally located in city centers, train users who would otherwise use their car don't have to fight traffic congestions and look for parking space, and those who would travel by air save the time of going to and from the airport.

Passengers using Ice trains from next year will not only reach their destinations faster but will also meet an expanded service.

The new coaches will have onboard telephones to make and receive calls. Available for businessmen will be conference compartments with telephone, telefax and computer connections.

Every seat will have a headphone outlet for six audio programs, three of which will be produced by the railway authorities.

On a trial basis, the back rests of seats on some passenger carriages will be equipped with video screens to test a railway tv program.

Colombo (OCT. 29) - Heavy rains have slowed down an army offensive against rebels forces of the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (Ltte) in northern Sri Lanka, miliitary sources said Monday.

Government troops were unable to push forward from captured areas and the weather has hampered the use of aircraft to bomb rebel positions.

Security forces were bogged down some 2,000 kilometres inland from the Kankesanthurai harbour area which they had reached early last week, sources said.

Government forces had captured six areas between Palaly military camp and the harbour, totalling about 40 square kilometres.

Independent reports said the rebels were also experiencing difficulties with many of their bunkers flooded.

TOKYO (OCT. 29) - Meiwa Trading Co. Ltd., a medium-sized Japanese trading company, said Monday it would import 3,000 cubic meters (105,000 cubic feet) of lumber in November from Vietnam in a bid to tap new sources of tropical lumber.

Meiwa officials said the November imports, worth 400,000 dollars, would likely be followed by monthly imports of 1,000 cubic meters (35,000 cubic feet) from next year.

The agreement followed a recent move by Japan's major lumber suppliers, Indonesia and Malaysia, to limit timber cutting and ban lumber exports in line with their policy of protecting their forests from Japanese exploitation, industry sources said.

Other Japanese lumber importers are expected to follow suit soon, following Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thac's remarks October 23 in a meeting here with Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu that "the time has come for a strengthening of overall ties" between the two countries.

Japan was at one time Vietnam's second largest trading partner after the Soviet Union, but relations between Tokyo and Hanoi have been strained since the Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia in December 1978 to oust the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge.

MANILA (OCT. 29) - The Philippine government is setting aside nearly 40 percent of its reduced 1991 budget to service domestic and foreign debts, Budget Secretary Gullermo Carrague said here Monday.

Debt service would eat up 107.7 billion pesos (4.18 billion dollars) or 39.5 percent of the revised 1991 budget of 272.4 billion pesos (10.58 billion dollars), Mr. Carague said at a press forum.

He gave no breakdown, but the total debt service is split about evenly between domestic and foreign loans because of high interest rates of government securities arising from Manila's mounting deficit spending in recent years.

The 1990 debt-service appropriation was 37.7 percent of the budget.

The cash-strapped national government agreed to trim its 1991 spending and increase revenue collections in a "budget summit" held with cngress leaders last week to address a worsening financial crisis.

The government originally proposed a 1991 budget of 297.4 billion dollars (11.55 billion dollars), but agreed to the revised figure after an outcry in Congress and domestic problems spawned by the Gulf crisis.

Some lawmakers are insisting that budget cuts are not enough, and want the government to reduce allocations for debt service, but President Corazon Aquino has warned that unilateral action on the foreign debt would damage Manila's credit standing.

Madrid (OCT. 29) - The Basque Nationalist Party (Pnv) emerged as the largest party in Sunday's elections for a new legislature in the Spanish Basque region final results showed Monday.

The Pnv, which held 17 seats in the old legislature, won 28.5 percent of the vote for 22 seats in the 75-member parliament.

The Spanish Socialist Workers Party (Psoe), the Pnv coalition partner in the outgoing parliament, suffered slight losses, winning 16 seats compared to the 19 it obtained in the polls four years ago.

The two parties are expected to continue their coalition.

The political wing of the Basque Eta extremist organisation, the Herri Batasuna (Hb or People's Unity) retained its 13 seats.

The two other Basque parties, Eusko Alkartasuna (Ea) and Euskadiko Eskerra (Ee), lost votes. The Ea saw its number of seats drop from 13 to nine 13 while the Ee fell to six from nine.

The conservative Popular Coalition (Cp) expanded its number of seats to 6 from 2 before. The Union Alavesa (Ua) entered the legislature for the first time and will have 3 seats. The Democratic and Social Centre (Cds) failed to capture any seats.

MOSCOW (OCT. 29) - Another nationalist dispute was brewing in the troubled western Soviet republic of Moldavia even as negotiators Monday sought to defuse a crisis in the Gagauz region.

The latest dispute involves the Russian minority which has proclaimed a "republic of the Dniester" in the eastern part of the republic and which now proposes to hold its own "parliamentary" elections on November 25. The Moldavian parliament has proclaimed the Dniester republic unlawful.

Tass news agency Monday reported that the village of Gisca had voted in an unofficial referendum to place itself under the jurisdiction of the Russian-dominated town of Bendery, rather than neighbouring Kaushany, a town mostly inhabited by ethnic Moldavians.

Meanwhile, Moldavian militia (police) units and Soviet interior ministry troops were preparing to enter areas in the south of the republic, home to the 150,000-strong Gagauz community, where a state of emergency was declared Friday, Tass reported.

The Moldavian-imposed emergency measures were declared after the Gagauz, an ethnic-Turkish minority who last August proclaimed their own "republic", held elections last week for their own independent "parliament".

Senior Soviet interior ministry officials were busy negotiating both with Moldavian and Gagauz representatives in a bid to defuse tension which has led to "volunteers" from both sides flocking to border areas to set up roadblocks.

The interior ministry forces were trying to get both sides to agree to withdraw their "volunteers", Tass said.

The ethnic-Romanian Moldavians have themselves been waging an anti-Moscow separatist campaign, prompting increasing fears among the republic's minorities.

Out of the republic's 4.1 million inhabitants, 63 percent are Moldavians, 14 percent Ukrainian, 12 percent Russian and 3.5 percent Gagauz.

BRAZZAVILLE (OCT. 29) - Persistent strikes which have swept many sectors of the Congolese economy for the past few weeks are threatening the government's attempts to revive the flagging economy despite aid from international institutions, according to analysts here.

In addition to financial losses in affected industries, the stoppages have forced the government to make costly concessions in salaries and social benefits.

Employees of the Transcongolese Communication Agency (ATC), which runs railway river and maritime traffic, won raises of up to 30 per cent last month following a week-long strike that paralyzed the country.

During that week alone, ATC sustained losses estimated at more than one billion CFA francs (four million dollars), one-third of its total operating deficit for 1989.

The agency had already undergone drastic restructuring in 1985 aimed at reducing its losses, and had shed almost half its 7,000 staff under a plan worked out by the government with help from the World Bank.

Recent salary increases are also reducing chances that a national economic recovery program designed by the government and World Bank will succeed.

Plans to privatize Hydro-Congo, the state company that handles distribution and commercialization of hydrocarbons, were shelved following a strike that caused fuel shortages nationwide. President Denis Sassou Nguesso had announced the firm could no longer meet its bills and had ruled out giving it bank credits.

Elsewhere, the government agreed to pay rises for employees of the ailing national electricity company SNE even though the company has reported an annual budget deficit of three billion CFA francs (12 million dollars).

Sources close to SNE said the company needs an additional 26 billion CFA francs to balance its books. They attributed its financial troubles to poor management and the failure of some clients, particularly government agencies, to pay their bills.

As a result, the World Bank may now reconsider extending a loan to the company which was pledged on the understanding that it underwent structural reorganization, according to sources in various economic circles in the Congolese capital.

However by far the worst blow to the nation's economy could stem from pay rises sought by some 55,000 civil servants and 22,000 soldiers.

Negotiations on government workers' salaries are underway with the country's sole trade union, the Congolese Trade Union Confederation (CSC).

If the civil servants get their way, their salaries would double, and in some cases triple. The resulting outlay would swallow up most of the federal budget and cripple state development projects.

The present labour unrest comes at a time when the country already faces severe financial problems because of its large foreign debt, estimated by Western sources at 1,200 billion CFA francs (4.8 billion dollars).

To make matters worse, despite the recent rise in world oil prices, the Congo's oil revenues have dropped, with the total decline for the year projected at 40 billion CFA francs (160 million dollars).

PARIS (OCT. 29) - European Community Commission president Jacques Delors expressed his exasperation Monday with Britain's foot-dragging on the E.C. monetary union question, but said he would keep working to narrow the Community's differences with London.

Delors made his remarks on French radio a day after the special E.C. summit in Rome, where 11 Community members agreed on a timetable for the next phase of achieving a monetary union, with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher the lone dissenter.

He told the radio that the 11 other E.C. members had been ''tired of waiting'' on London and so went ahead with the monetary union decision.

But he assured that he would continued to work ''to bring the positions of the 11 and of Mrs. Thatcher closer together''.

At the E.C. summit, the Community leaders agreed to set January 1, 1994 as the date to start the second phase of the European monetary union scheme aiming toward a common E.C. currency and a central European bank.

TOKYO (OCT. 29) - Japan's Tokai Bank Ltd. said Monday it planned to acquire full control of Japan International Bank Ltd., a London-based investment bank owned by Tokai and six other Japanese financial institutions.

Tokai, which currently holds 20 percent of the bank, said it hoped to complete the buyout early next year pending approval from the Bank of England.

"The co-owners seem to have lost enthusiasm for joint management," Tokai president Kiichiro Ito told a news conference.

Mr. Ito said the price paid for the 80 percent interest would be determined after assessing the bank's assets although reports said it would amount to several billion yen (tens of millions of dollars).

Japan International Bank was set up in 1971 and is capitalised at 18 million pounds (35 million dollars). Sumitomo Bank Ltd., Fuji Bank Ltd., Mitsubishi Bank Ltd. and Tokai each hold 20 percent while Daiwa Securities Co. Ltd.,

Nikko Securities Co. Ltd. and Yamaichi Securities Co. Ltd. own the rest.

JAKARTA (OCT. 29) - Indonesia, already a major oil exporter, is now pinning its hopes on coal as a future source of income.

The island republic is pursuing an ambitious plan which, if the Jakarta government's calculations are fulfilled, will make Indonesia a major competitor with such leading coal exporters as South Africa on world markets.

Indonesia, the sole Asian member of the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries, is now enjoying the blessing of higher oil earnings as a result of the steep increase in prices resulting from the Gulf crisis.

While the oil drilling stations are operating at full power, Indonesia's coal mines are waking up from a long slumber. Experts' calculations put Indonesia's coal reserves at a gigantic 25 billion tonnes.

So Indonesia's coal production of 6 million tonnes - 2.5 million of which went for export - in 1989 was by comparison a small pile. But now, Indonesian coal mines are stepping up the pace to meet rising world demand for coal, Mining and Energy Minister Ginandjar Kartasasmita believes that with the introduction of new technology and know-how from foreign partners, Indonesian coal output will reach at least 30 million tonnes by the year 2000.

BRUSSELS (OCT. 29) - Italy, which chairs the EEC Council of Ministers, on Monday delayed indefinitely a meeting of EEC agriculture ministers due to be held in Luxembourg on Tuesday to make a final effort at solving deadlock over GATT proposals, an Italian diplomatic source said.

Agriculture ministers from the European Economic Community (EEC) have been unable to agree of counter-proposals for demands to massive cuts in farm subsidies in the Uruguay Round of tariff-cutting negotiations within the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

The meeting will be held "probably in the near future" but no date has been set, the source said.

The meeting would have been the sixth by the ministers on the subject. Agreement has been prevented mainly by objections from France and Germany.

The final ministerial session of the Uruguay Round issue is to be held between December 3 and 7.

MOSCOW (OCT. 29) - The Ukraine is set to introduce rationing as of next month in a bid to control stocks amid ever-growing shortages, Pravda, the communist party newspaper reported Monday.

The "consumer cards with coupons" are due to be introduced as of November 1, though local informed sources said they had not yet been distributed.

The coupons will be issued through places of work and will allow individuals to spend up to 70 percent of their legal earnings in state-owned shops where prices are subsidized.

Customers will pay cash but will also have to hand over coupons showing they have a right to spend the money for any item costing more than 20 kopecks (36 cents at the official rate), local sources said.

Coupons - with a maximum individual allowance of 800 rubles worth (1,440 dollars) a month - will be used to buy all foodstuffs and consumer goods. Payment for products costing more than 800 rubles will have to be made from savings, through bank accounts.

Meanwhile, the Ukrainian parliament Monday was due to debate the government's plans for radical economic reform, involving the privatization of 50 to 60 percent of state shops within a year.

The plans also call for denationalization of republican entreprises with shares being partly sold and partly given to Ukrainian nationals.

The government, which says it intends to set up a Ukrainian currency, also wants to create a national bank.

BEIJING (OCT. 29) - China plans to surpass Taiwan, India and Bangladesh to become the world's leading shipbreaker, an official report said here Monday.

Kang Guangzhi, vice president of the China National Shipbreaking Corporation, told the China Daily that China would become a "shipbreaking kingdom."

Beijing's plans come as a worldwide acceleration of ship replacement is expected, the report said.

Only seven years old, China's shipbreaking industry employs 100,000 people in about 100 enterprises. The China National Shipbreaking Corporation (CNSC) is seeking to recruit foreign experts, especially Taiwanese, to link up to form join ventures, the English-language daily said.

The China Daily, citing international experts, said that some 13 million tons of shipping would have to be replaced annually worldwide in the coming decade.

In 1988, China dismantled 466,000 tons of shipping, or 22 percent of the world total, making it the second-largest shipbreaker that year, the report said.

Many of the vessels broken up for scrap came from Europe, the United States and Japan, a CNSC spokesman said.

Mr. Kang said that nearly all of the materials gained from the dismantling of ships could be recycled, particularly in China, which suffers from a scarcity of many raw materials.

In the last seven years, 1.2 million tons of scrap steel and 60,000 tons of nonferrous metals have been recovered by China's new industry, the report said.

Jerusalem (OCT. 29) - The official inquiry into the Temple Mount killings of October 8 was one-sided, unreliable and ignored fundamental facts relating to the incident, the Israeli human rights group B'tselem said Monday.

Some 20 Palestinians were killed and hundreds injured in the incident which prompted an international controversy and led Israeli Premier Itzhak Shamir to appoint a commission to study the event.

In a statement released Monday, B'tselem claimed that the inability of the commission to subpeona witneses meant that Palestinians who objected to cooperating with the commission were not heard.

''Attempts to reconstruct the truth relying almost entirely on the testimony of one side is limited and its results should be considered with scepticism,'' said the statement.

Other shortcomings of the report, said B'tselem, was its lack of serious investigation into the circumstances under which shooting took place, and the commission's refusal to detail the evidence and sources for its conclusions.

KATHMANDU (OCT. 29) - Political unrest in parts of India has disrupted the supply of petroleum and oil products to Nepal, directly affecting the country's economy, an informed source here said Monday.

The state-run Nepal Oil Corporation said Monday that student protests in the Indian northeastern state of Assam had disrupted the regular supply of petroleum products from Barauni in the state of Bihar for the past several months.

Required products such as kerosene and diesel were temporarily brought in from the port city of Haldia in the state of West Bengal, but this has not been possible for the past eighteen days because of the non-movement of oil tankers and other trucks resulting from the unrest in Assam.

The resulting shortage in Nepal has led to mile long queues forming outside petrol pumps and other distribution depots.

Nepalese exports through Haldia have also been disrupted by political violence in other parts of India.

A spokesman for the Consumers' Forum said the difficulty of transporting Indian goods to Nepal had resulted in price hikes on those goods of between ten and fifteen percent in the past two weeks.

LONDON (OCT. 29) - The Royal Navy on Monday despatched the royal fleet auxiliary Argus, which has been converted into a hospital ship, from Plymouth in southwest England to the Gulf, the ministry of defence said.

The ship was carrying 90 medical staff, including 10 surgeons and 40 nurses for 100 hospital beds, and was equipped to treat war wounded, including troops suffering from the effects of chemical weapons.

The Argus, displacing 28,000 tons, had been used for the training of helicopter pilots, and was carrying four Sea King helicopters as ambulances.

The Argus was due to arrive in the Gulf in two to three weeks' time.

Meanwhile in Dublin Irish Prime Minister Charles Haughey has asked three members of the Irish parliament to abandon a planned visit to Iraq in the light of a statement by leaders of the European Economic Community (EEC) in Rome on Sunday condemning individual moves to obtain the release of hostages.

Mr. Haughey said: "My obligation now is the responsibility to discourage others from going to Iraq to negotiate the release of hostages."

About 50 Irish nationals were in Kuwait and about 300 were in Iraq before Iraq invaded Kuwait on August 2.

BEIJING (OCT. 29) - Moslem clerics in China's northwest Xinjiang region are banned from meeting foreigners or teaching "the history of holy war," under a set of draconian new regulations seen here Monday.

The regulations were adopted in mid-September by Xinjiang's regional government, four months after a two-day Moslem rebellion in a village that left 22 police and civilians dead by official count.

Published in the official Xinjiang Daily, the regulations also apply to Tibetan monks as well as clergymen in China's state-sponsored Catholic and Protestant churches working in the region.

Such "religious professionals," they state, are banned from espousing separatism, opposing the Communist Party leadership, or using religion to challenge China's strict birth-control policies.

"They shall not accept visits or interviews by foreigners and foreign religious organizations, or solicit money from them in any form," the regulations add.

Strictly interpreted, the ban would include any chance encounter that a Moslem cleric might have with Afghans, Pakistanis, or Moslem natives of Soviet Central Asian republics who regularly visit Xinjiang.

The regulations also state that clerics "shall not propagate the 'history of holy war' and incite ethnic hatred under any circumstances."

Effectively outlawing proselytizing outside places of worship, the regulations defend what is termed a citizen's "freedom not to believe in any religion," and stipulate that clerics must be approved by government authorities.

Clerics who break the regulations may be stripped of their credentials, or face legal proceedings.

Sixty per cent of Xinjiang's 40.3 million people -- spread across an area of Central Asia three times the size of France -- are Moslems, the majority of them Turkic-speaking Uygurs, Kazaks and Kirgiz.

Pockets of Tibetans also inhabit the region, which borders on Afghanistan, Pakistan and the restive Soviet Central Asian republics.

Simmering Moslem discontent -- fanned, diplomats say, by some of the worst poverty in China -- exploded in violence April 5-6 with bloody rioting in Baren, a village south of the Silk Road town of Kashgar.

Official reports blamed the so-called "counter-revolutionary armed rebellion" on an obscure separatist group, the Islamic Party of East Turkestan, which allegedly received support from "hostile foreign forces."

HARARE (OCT. 29) - African journalists meeting here agreed Monday to send letters to four African leaders and to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein protesting the treatment of journalists in their countries.

The African states targetted by the meeting of some 50 journalists from more than 20 countries are Sudan, Zaire, Uganda and South Africa. The journalists were told their colleagues in those countries were being detained, attacked and generally harassed.

President Hussein is to receive a protest letter because, the meeting was told some African journalists are being held hostage in Iraq and Kuwait.

The three-day meeting, which began Sunday and aims to strengthen journalists' unions on the continent, was organised by the International Federation of Journalists and the Union of African Journalists.

TOKYO (OCT. 29) - An extreme leftist group was suspected of scheming to obstruct Japan's famed bullet train carrying Emperor Akihito as part of its campaign to stop his enthronement on November 12, press reports said Monday.

Meanwhile, to boost the government's anti-terrorist drive, post offices might require senders to open parcels in order to vefify their contents from November 1 to 25, the post and telecommunications ministry said.

In a raid Saturday at a hideout of the extreme leftist group Chukakuha (Hardcore Faction), police confisticated notes showing a detailed plan of a tunnel on the Tokyo-Osaka superexpress line, press reports said.

The plan was most specific in describing the power line, the reports said.

Tokyo police suspected that Japan's largest radical leftist faction was scheming to destroy the power line to obstruct railway operations when Emperor Akihito and Empress Michiko use the railway, the reports said.

Another group, Kakurokyo (Revolutionary Workers Council), claimed responsibility Monday for arson attacks at the weekend to dramatise its vow to crush the emperor system.

In billboards on a university campus, the group said its members had planted incendiary devices at the home of a professor advocating a strong imperial system and on the Shinto shrine dedicated to General Maresuke Nogi.

The general, a hero of the 1904-1905 Russo-Japanese War, committed ritual suicide with his wife in 1912, on the funeral day of Emperor Meiji, Akihito's great grandfather.

TOKYO (OCT. 29) - A leading Japanese economist on Monday ruled out any further increase in the Bank of Japan's discount rate.

"I don't think there is any probability of a new discount-rate hike," said Ryo Watanabe, general manager of the economic research department at Nomura Research Institute, an affiliate of Japan's biggest securities firm.

Mr. Watanabe told a news conference that the factors contributing to the tightening of credit since May last year were gradually dispappearing.

"The yen has appreciated, there are some signs of declining real-estate prices and signs of a decline in the growth rate of the economy," he said.

Mr. Watanabe said monetary authorities might have even considered lowering the discount rate - charged on central bank loans to financial institutions - had it not been for the Gulf crisis. The rate is currently six per cent.

Announcing the institute's forecasts for the next two years, Mr. Watanabe said that Japan's gross national product (GNP) was expected to grow by 4.8 per cent in the year to March, down from 5.1 percent last year.

Growth in the following year is forecast to slow to as low as 3.3. percent with oil prices at 30 dollars a barrel or four percent at 20 dollars a barrel.

The forecasts, however, are based on an exchange rate of between 135 yen and 140 yen to the dollar and don't take into account the currency's recent appreciation to less than 130 yen to the dollar.

Mr. Watanabe said Japan was "not particulary disadvantaged" by higher oil prices compared with the United States and Germany.

Efforts by Japanese banks to meet new international capital standards will be "the worst point when we talk about economics next year," he said, noting that banks will not be able to raise capital as easily in the past.

The need to raise funds to meet guidelines stipulated by the Bank for International Settlements will in turn reduce capital flows from Japan to the rest of the world, notably the United States and developing countries, he said.

Mr. Watanabe said that corporate investment in new plant and equipment would be more affected by higher interest rates than the household sector. Higher rates on fixed deposits at banks and financial deregulation will "completely offset" the 40 percent plunge in Japanese share prices this year, he said.

COLOMBO (OCT. 29) - Tamil guerrillas have extended until Wednesday a deadline issued to Moslems to vacate Mannar island in the north or be killed, Moslem representatives from the area said Monday.

Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) rebels had issued an ultimatum to the Moslems to vacate the Sri Lankan island by Sunday, the representatives, who did not want to be identified, told journalists here.

They said that by late Sunday more than 8,000 Moslems had already fled the area while community leaders successfully pleaded with the guerrillas for more time.

Nearly half of Mannar's 95,000 people are Moslems.

The representatives said armed guerrillas went around Erukkulampiddi village on October 21 and rounded up about 60 Moslem community leaders, who were held and interrogated. They were released after paying hefty ransoms.

The rebels later went on a three-day looting spree. Those who questioned the guerrillas or resisted were badly assaulted, one source said.

"They did not even spare little girls, who were relieved of their jewellery," he added.

On October 24, the LTTE announced over speakers fitted to vehicles that all Moslems should vacate Mannar by late Sunday or face death. Tamil Tigers recently massacred more than 200 Moslems in the eastern Batticaloa district.

Some 5,000 refugees travelled more than 130 kilometres (80 miles) south by boat to neighbouring Puttalam district, while another 3,000 had reached another town about 75 kilometres (45 miles) to the southeast, the sources said.

They said Mannar island had been virtually isolated since June, when the rebels blasted the road and rail bridges linking it with the mainland.

One of them said the nearest army camp was about three kilometers (two miles) away at Thalladi on the mainland, "but the security forces have not entered Mannar since June," when fighting broke out with the rebels.

Meanwhile, Sri Lanka Moslem Congress general secretary M.J.A. Saheed on Monday urged the government to take steps to safeguard Moslems in the north, wipe out the "fascist Tigers" and resettle the Moslems in their homelands.

LINZ, AUSTRIA (OCT. 29) - A 72-year-old widow in the Austrian town of Neukirchen am Walde recently received a letter sent to her 43 years ago, the Austrian news agency Apa reported.

The letter, sent in 1947 by American military officials, informed the woman she was entitled to 162 Reichsmarks confiscated from her husband after being taken prisoner in February 1944.

The woman sent a document certifying her late husband's release from the Wehrmacht to the Bavarian Red Cross and promptly received a check for 41 Deutschmarks, the rough equivalent.

It turns out the letter took so long because it was addressed to Neukirchen vor dem Walde, which is a town in Bavaria. So postal officials assumed the intended destination was somewhere in Germany.

What complicated the matter was that there are 26 towns called Neukirchen in western Germany and another seven in what was formerly East Germany.

Offenbach (OCT. 29) - Kraftwerk Union (Kwu), the power engineering subsidiary of the Siemens concern, announced here Monday it has won a contract from Egypt to head an international consortium to build a 660 megawatt conventional power plant.

Kwu said the contract value for the ''Cairo West'' power plant is over 220 million marks (145 million dollars). The project will be financed by the African Development Bank based in Abidjan.

Under the order, placed by the Egyptian Electricity Authority, Kwu will head a German-Italian consortium to build the new power plant northwest of Cairo, directly on the Nile River.

The plant, which can be fueled either by oil or natural gas, will go on stream in the autumn of 1993, Kwu said.

Over the past decade, the German power engineering firm has won orders for six power plants combining for some 2,500 megawatts of installed capacity.

Wiesbaden (OCT. 29) - Spurred by rising fuel prices, the cost of living index in Germany has reached its highest annual inflation rate in seven years, authorities said here Monday.

The Federal Office of Statistics, presenting preliminary figures for October, said the index had jumped 0.6 percent from September, putting the annual inflation rate at 3.3 percent.

The last time inflation was that high was in August 1983, the office said, presenting data from four key federal German states. The final October figure based on data from the entire country will be reported in mid-November.

The office said rising motor vehicle fuel and heating oil costs were responsible for the October cost of living increase.

Wolfsburg (OCT. 29) - The German carmaker Volkswagen said here Monday it expected its earnings for 1990 to match last year's record 1.04 billion marks (688 million dollars) profit.

A vw spokesman made the disclosure to counter press reports over the weekend which had said the company was going to suffer a massive drop in its earnings for 1990.

The reports, citing internal company estimates, had said Vw's pre-tax profit would reach only 1.8 billion marks, compared to last year's 2.9 billion marks. The chief factor in the decline were the high losses suffered by subsidiaries in America, the reports said.

In its half-year report, Vw conceded that profits were dropping in Brazil, where Vw and Ford operate their Autolatina joint venture. In the United States, VwAudi sales have risen four percent to around 125,000 cars, but earnings were being adversely affected by the low dollar rate, high distribution costs and a narrower profit margins.

PESHAWAR, PAKISTAN (OCT. 29) - Legendary mujahedeen commander Ahmed Shah Masood is promoting himself as the Afghan resistance movement's saviour and unifying force for the first time since the Soviet Union's withdrawal from Afghanistan 20 months ago.

For the past 15 days, Mr. Masood, the "Lion of Panjsher," been working on a major political shakeup of the faction-ridden mujahedeen, after refusing for 12 years to leave Afghanistan and the area he controls.

His goal, and that of other rebel leaders still inside Afghanistan, is to unify the Sunni and Shiite Moslem resistance and step up pressure on Afghan political leaders in exile in Peshawar to regroup and make up for time lost since the last Soviet soldier left Afghanistan on February 15 last year.

"It is necessary to resolve the impasse and fill the gaps," the 37-year-old Mr. Masood said several times during a meeting on the outskirts of Peshawar with a group of Western journalists late Saturday.

He said the new "political and military" strategy drawn up by resistance commanders had been accepted by "the majority" of Peshawar leaders whom he criticised as ineffective.

"If from now on, the mujahedeen forces are used effectively and rationally," the Soviet-installed regime in Kabul "will collapse" and an Islamic government which conformed to the will of the people would replace it, he said.

Mr. Masood rejected the idea of a direct mujahedeen offensive on Kabul as proposed by his main rival in the resistance, fundamentalist leader Gulbuddin Hekmatyar.

Instead, he called for simultaneous attacks this winter on the regime's "weak points" before mounting larger scale operations against targets including Kabul, next spring.

During his vist to Pakistan, Mr. Masood has met the heads of the seven Sunni rebel guerrilla groups.

LAGOS (OCT. 29) - A bizarre rumor of disappearing male genitals has gripped black Africa's biggest city, leading to mob attacks on suspected organ-robbers and extensive coverage in Nigeria's free-wheeling press.

The rumour, whose origins are unclear, states that some unscrupulous persons use bodily contacts such as handshakes to make genitals disappear.

The purloined organs are believed to later reappear in possession of these persons, who are said to sell them in Nigeria's thriving witchcraft trade, where they are believed -- well, rumored -- to fetch thousands of dollars.

Dozens of suspects have been beaten up by irate mobs or arrested by policemen in various parts of this city of an estimated seven million residents in the last two weeks.

The fact that no one has so far come forth to show conclusive proof of having been robbed of their private parts has failed to make the slightest dent in the belief.

On Friday, in the prosperous Lagos neighborhood of Falomo, police barely were able to save the life of a man being beaten by a mob who believed he had just appropriated another man's genitals, a diplomat who witnessed the incident reported.

Another mob at Obalende, a teeming Lagos slum, stripped two suspects naked after beating them up.

The men owed their life to the quick intervention of the police, a woman who witnessed the incident told AFP Sunday.

The Nigerian press has given extensive coverage to this latest social phenomenon. Two independent national newspapers, the Sunday Champion and the Sunday Punch, headlined this Sunday's reports, "Fear of Vanishing Organs in Lagos" and "Tension mounts over missing organs."

Many Lagos residents now go about the streets checking up from time to time their genitals immediately after a handshake or after a bodily contact with a stranger.

Reacting to the rumour, the Lagos state police issued an official statement last Thursday. It described the rumour as the work of mischievious elements who create a panicky situation to enable them to loot, steal or commit other atrocities against innocent citizens.

The police also expressed concern that the rumour would lead to lynchings.

LONDON (OCT. 29) - Strongly bullish sentiment in grain markets boosted rates on the Baltic International Freight Futures Exchange (BIFFEX) here in the past week.

The BIFFEX's Baltic Freight Index (BFI) ended off its best, but still ahead 46 points on the week at 1,320 points.

A 56 point surge Monday was largely the result of a 52,000 ton fixing on the U.S. Gulf to Japan route at three dollars per tonne above the previous week's going rate, traders said.

The transaction involved payment of 26.25 dollars per ton on the route, a fixing which lifted nominal rates to 25.583 dollars at the end of the week from 23.1 the previous Friday.

Early on falling bunker fuel prices took some pressure off shipowners' profit margins and allowed for some upturn in activity, although a fresh climb in crude oil prices ahead of the weekend put renewed pressure on fuel costs.

By the weekend the BFI index had lost 10 of its 56 point climb on a lack of further fixings on major grain route.

U.S. Gulf to Europe grain rates ended the week at 12.85 dollars per ton against 12.3 dollars at the end of the previous week.

In other sectors rates showed little change. East Coast USA to Japan coal movements were quoted at 14.025 dollars per ton against 14.250 the previous week, while ore movements on the West Africa to Europe route stood at 5.375 dollars per ton against 5.37.

The nominal quote for transatlantic round voyages on a timecharter basis was 8,533.333 dollars per day against 8,350 the previous week.

BONN (OCT. 29) - Pope Shenouda Iii of the Coptic Orthodox Church in Egypt is to receive an honorary doctorate from Bonn University on November 17, it was learned here Monday.

The university's faculty for Catholic theology said it decided to honor the pope because of his achievements in Christian teaching and his importance in promoting inner-Christian dialogue.

Pope Shenouda Iii, 67, is regarded as one of the world's most influential Christian leaders along with Catholic Pope John Ii and Constantinople's Orthodox patriarchs.

He has already received honorary doctorates from three United States universities.

The Coptic pope was banished due to his political opinions to a monastery by the late Egyptian president Anuar Sadat in September 1981. He was released from internal exile by President Hosny Mubarak and permitted to resume his duties in January 1985.

The seat of the Coptic Orthodox Church is in Cairo. This largest Middle Eastern church has about eight million followers mainly in Egypt, Sudan and Canada.

KABUL (OCT. 29) - Afghan guerrillas stepped up pressure on a strategic highway in a bid to cut off one of the most prosperous provinces in the country's south, diplomats and officials said here Monday.

A government spokesman said security forces in the southern province of Kandahar attacked a guerrilla unit involved in the rebel operations in Maywand district, killing 13 militants overnight Sunday.

A tank and a large quantity of arms and ammunitions were captured from the guerrillas, the spokesman said.

Maywand is about 60 kilometres (36 miles) northwest of Kandahar city and a vital supply route linking the country's capital and southern and western regions runs through it.

However, diplomats said it would be difficult for the guerrillas to completely cut off Kandahar by attacking both ends of the highway because of the government's air power.

The government spokesman said sporadic long-range fighting continued in Zabul province and troops killed 27 guerrillas in heavy artillery and aerial attacks Sunday.

Similar fighting continued in Paghman, about 20 kilometres (12 miles) northwest of Kabul, the spokesman said adding that troops killed at least 28 rebels during the fighting Sunday.

Fighting also raged in Hisarak district of Nangarhar province, which borders Kabul, and in an area just north of the capital itself, the spokesman said. He said 23 resistance guerrillas were killed in Hisarak district.

Geneva (OCT. 29) - The International Air Traffic Association (Iata) opened its annual conference here Monday with industry executives saying the world's airlines were suffering from fuel cost increases and increasingly expensive flight delays.

Iata president Moehamad Soeparno and general director Guenter Eser told the organisation comprising 200 airlines that the rising volume of air traffic was creating costly delays because airports and traffic controllers could not cope with the growth.

Eser said that with rising fuel costs and the dollar's decline, many airlines despite improved passenger numbers could lose money. The world airline industry as a whole could finish 1990 with a loss of up to two billion dollars, he warned.

He said that if air traffic continued to grow in Europe at current rates, then by the year 2000 the number of air passengers would double to at least 500 million. By the year 2010 the number would reach 740 million, nearly triple the current number.

Eser said that inadequacies in the air traffic control infrastructure were responsible for 70 percent of flight delays.

He called on governments to do more to carry out improvements in air traffic control systems. Iata estimated the costs of such improvements would be five to eight billion dollars.

If nothing is done, then Europe would stand to lose 10 billion dollars' annually in potential tourism and economic development revenues in the air traffic sector, Eser said.

Iata will be conducting a review of air tariffs from Wednesday to Saturday. Eser declined to comment on whether airlines might again decide to raise rates. The last increase took effect October 1, with passenger tickets increased by five to eight percent and air cargo rates hiked by seven percent.

BEIJING (OCT. 29) - China is looking to get state-of-the-art Sukhoi Su-27 jet fighters from the Soviet Union, the first time it has turned to Moscow for warplanes since the 1950's, a Soviet aviation expert said Monday.

In an interview, Anatoli Pankratov said negotiations on supplying the Chinese with the Su-27 -- one of the Soviet Union's most advanced supersonic fighters -- were now at a "preliminary stage."

"We expect (a deal) to happen, but just now we don't have any (further) information," he said.

He did not say how many Su-27's the Chinese want, or under what terms.

But if a deal goes through, military analysts say it would represent a quantum leap in the firepower of China's antiquated air force, as well as a shift in the balance of military power in Asia.

It would also mark the first time that China has looked to the Soviet Union for warplanes since the 1950's, prior to the bitter Sino-Soviet split over strategic and ideological issues.

Relations were formally normalized in May last year when Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev made a historic summit visit to Beijing which happened to coincide with the Tiananmen Square democracy movement.

Western defence experts say the Su-27 -- codenamed "Flanker" by NATO forces -- has a top speed of 2,500 kilometers (1,550 miles) an hour and a combat radius of 1,150 kms (715 miles).

Similar to the U.S.-made F-15 Eagle, it can be fitted with eight air-to-air missiles to shoot down low-flying aircraft and cruise missiles.

DHAKA (OCT. 29) - The Bangladesh government's invoking of a tough law to detain an opposition leader was being viewed here Monday by analysts and political leaders as a "nervous move" by authorities to check growing political unrest.

A senior political commentator said in an interview that the weekend arrest was "without proper basis" and criticized it as a "nervous move by President Hussain Mohammad Ershad's government to warn other opposition leaders."

Pankaj Bhattacharya, 42, general-secretary of the National Awami Party (NAP), was arrested Sunday and charged with violence and arson. A bail petition on his behalf was also rejected by a Dhaka court.

He was ordered to spend the next 120 days in jail under the 1974 Special Powers Act, which ironically the government said it would soon repeal.

Vice President Moudud Ahmed had announced last month that the president had decided to repeal the controversial law which permits detention without trial and the banning of newspapers.

The law has been dubbed a "black law" by opposition leaders and journalists.

"Pray my stay in jail is comfortable and that the arrest ends autocratic rule in the country," Mr. Bhattacharya told supporters as he was led to a waiting vehicle.

His party president, Muzzafar Ahmed, speaking from an undisclosed location, said by telephone that the arrest did not fall into the "rule of the game, as he was charged also for theft."

He lashed out at the government, saying "crazy people make stupid mistakes, especially when they are nervous."

TOKYO (OCT. 29) - Japan's Sumitomo business group, involved in a widening loan scandal, took another beating Monday when the head of its construction firm stepped down to take responsibility for a bribery case.

Shozo Kusumoto was replaced by Shinsaku Sanmoto as president of Sumitomo Construction Co. Monday, company officials said. The firm's chairman Takeyuki Saito also resigned from his post, they added.

Four officials of Sumitomo Construction, including executive director Ichiro Nasu, were arrested last month on charges of bribing local government officials in exchange for a road construction deal in Kawanishi near Kobe, western Japan.

"We have made a vow at a board meeting today that we will never again do anything that runs counter to social morality and law," Mr. Sanmoto told a press conference.

The business group has been rocked by the loan scandal, involving Sumitomo Bank, Mitsui Trust Bank and Sanwa Bank. Members of these banks allegedly arranged huge illegal loans to stock speculators.

Sumitomo Bank's three top executives, including chairman Ichiro Isoda, have resigned in the scandal.

SAINT ETIENNE, FRANCE (OCT. 29) - The president of the European Parliament said in a speech Monday that the European Economic Community's legislative assembly should be equivalent to national parliaments.

Enrique Baron Crespo said "a self-respecting parliament must be able to propose legislation."

The European Parliament can propose amendments to EEC legislation but it cannot initiate such legislation. Parliamentarians have been battling the EEC's two other main institutions, the executive Commission and the decision-taking Council for a greater share of EEC power.

Mr. Baron, who has been president of the parliament since July 1989 was speaking at the Jean Monnet University of Saint Etienne where he was awarded an honourary degree.

NEW DELHI (OCT. 29) - Indian Prime Minister Vishwanath Pratap Singh hinted Monday that he was prepared to step down from office, as Hindus were all set to begin construction of a temple in central India next to a mosque amidst increasing tension.

A spokesman for the Vishwa Hindu Parishad, which is spearheading the temple building plan at Ayodhya in Uttar Pradesh state, said that a 10,000 strong ''task force'' had already reached the area despite multi-layered security arrangements and will start the ''construction on Tuesday between 9.44 a.m. and 11.44 a.m.'' a time ordained auspicious by the Hindu priests.

Spokesman R.S. Agnihotri told newsmen here that more than 250,000 Hindu pilgrims have been arrested by the state authorities and lodged in hostels and warehouses as ''all the jails are full''. They were on their way to Ayodhya.

Although authorities had clamped an indefinite curfew on the area on Friday, ''people are braving them and coming out into the streets to build the temple'' said Murli Manohar Joshi of the Hindu right-wing Bharatiya Janata Party.

The United News of India news agency reported that four pilgrims were killed and four injured in police firing while Indian Army troops staged ''flag marches'' in 22 ''sensitive districts'' of the country's politically most crucial state.

Quoting an official spokesman at Lucknow, the state capital, Uni said the situation in most of the areas ''was tense but under control''.

With dissent activity mounting for his resignation, Singh told newsmen ''I am prepared to face the demand for a change in the leadership. The Mp's (Parliament deputies) have to decide if they want a change. They can elect a new leader''.

EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (OCT. 29) - Iraqi President Saddam Hussein is continuing to commit "atrocities" in Kuwait and shows no sign of withdrawing his troops from the emirate, Britain's chief of the defense staff said Monday.

"I haven't heard anything yet that would indicate that" Iraq intends to pull out of Kuwait, Sir David Craig said during a visit to British troops in eastern Saudi Arabia.

"(Saddam Hussein's) been a very vicious aggressor. He continues to commit atrocities in Kuwait.

"He doesn't show any sign of letting up in that way," he said.

Speaking to reporters during a visit to a combat engineer regiment of the 7th Armoured Brigade, Sir David said he remained optimistic a peaceful solution could be found to the crisis sparked by the August 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

"I always remain optimistic," he said. "I don't think one should ever look at any of these things in a pessimistic way."

"We hope there won't be a conflict," the Royal Air Force marshal said, "but as far as we're concerned we'll fight very firmly."

BRAZZAVLLLE (OCT. 29) - One of three youths wounded when security forces opened fire on student demonstrators in Congo last week has died in hospital of his wounds, informed sources said here Monday.

The incident occurred at Sibiti, 300 kilometres (180 miles) from the capital, when college students took to the streets demanding better classroom conditions and the opening of a boarding school.

Security forces fired in the air to disperse them as the students were joined by ''layabouts'' in a spree of looting in the market, state radio reported at the time.

Mabiala Nziengui, 17, was hit in the head when a soldier or a militiaman ''lost control of himself'' and fired into the crowd, the informed sources said.

All schools in the economic capital Pointe Noire were meanwhile closed on Monday because of a strike by teachers seeking more pay and the dismissal of some local education officials. Security forces were patrolling the streets to prevent any demonstrations.

Congolese television was broadcasting only news briefs as its news staff stayed away from work for a fourth day as negotiations continued with the information ministry for improved work conditions and guarantees on freedom of information.

Journalists at the government news agency resumed work, however, though coupled with a threat to strike again if the authorities failed to give specific undertakings on their grievances, an authoritative source said.

PRETORIA (OCT. 29) - President Frederik de Klerk on Monday held talks here with the leader of the 700,000-strong Federal Independent Democratic Alliance (FIDA) to discuss the moderate black organisation's participation in constitutional negotiations.

The FIDA delegation was led by its president, John Gogotya, and in a statement issued here Monday, the organisation said it favoured the formation of joint working groups with the government.

FIDA was launched in July 1987 and Mr. Gogotya claims a membership of 700,000.

The organisation does not believe in the principle of one-man, one vote as most of the political groupings in South Africa does, and supports the system of independent and self-governing tribal homelands.

Meanwhile, the leader of the white liberal opposition Democratic Party (DP), Zach de Beer, said on Monday that an interim government in South Africa would not be practical or feasible.

Speaking in the eastern Cape town of King William's Town, Mr. De Beer said an interim government -- as demanded by the black nationalist African National Congress (ANC) -- would have no constitutional basis.

Luxembourg (OCT. 29) - Plans by E.C. Energy Commissioner Antonio Cardoso e Cunha which would give the Commission greater powers to deal with an energy crisis met with widespread criticism here Monday among various E.C. members.

An E.C. spokesman, at a press briefing on the E.C. energy ministers' talks here, said that criticism of the plan came from Germany, Britain, the Netherlands and Denmark.

Much of the criticism was focused on the greater control over the E.C.'s emergency oil reserves which the Commission would be granted to deal with an energy crisis, he said.

Germany called it an ''extremely delicate matter'' if the Commission were to gain control over one-third of the 90 days' worth of emergency oil reserves which each E.C. nation must keep.

The Bonn officials said they had nothing against the Community developing a joint approach to deal with an oil supply crisis.

Britain also opposed Cardoso's plan, in particular the idea of establishing a central facility to store emergency reserves.

The emergency reserves plan was one major topic discussed by the E.C. ministers. In another move, they approved over the objections of Germany, the Netherlands and Denmark a guideline to permit a greater volume of non-E.C. natural gas via pipelines through the Community.

The guideline must still be approved by the European Parliament before taking effect.

AMMAN (OCT. 29) - Two European airlines, Italian Alitalia and Swiss Swissair, decided on Monday to suspend flights to Amman for commercial reasons, the two companies said.

A management source at Alitalia here told AFP that the company had suspended flights because of a sharp drop in the number of tourists visiting Jordan due to the Gulf crisis.

"No tourists want to come to Jordan because of events in the Gulf, which have caused an atmosphere of insecurity in the region.

"Some flights carried no more than 20 or 30 passengers...this was no longer profitable."

The company operated two flights per week to Amman, and it planed to resume the flights from April.

The Director of Tourism here said that Jordan had lost "100 per cent of its tourism in the space of a few days" after Iraq invaded Kuwait on August 2. Losses were already estimated officially to be 240 million dollars.

A Swissair manager said that his company had decided to suspend twice-weekly flights during the winter. The measure was "temporary and is part of a re-evaluation of overall activity in the Middle East", the source said.

HARARE (OCT. 29) - Several hundred heavily armed riot police Monday effectively shut down the University of Zimbabwe when they drove the student body off the campus with tear gas and warning shots fired from automatic weapons.

The latest development came amidst growing alarm at the government's intention to introduce new laws governing the university which, academics charge, will deprive it of its current autonomy and academic freedom and turn it into a government body.

Students confirmed that five members of the students' representative council, including its president, Christopher Giwa, had been arrested by police after scenes on the campus last Friday when a student mob ran amok and administrative offices were burnt, destroying valuable records and examination papers.

On Monday morning, police arrived early at the campus and fired shots into the air as students attempted to held a meeting. They were driven away by tear gas and throughout the morning, police pursued students across the extensive university grounds.

The incidents were almost a repeat of campus violence last year -at the time an independent commission of inquiry accused the police of using ''excessive violence'' - when the university was closed for three weeks. Minister of Higher Education David Karimanzira said last year's incidents had taught the government that it ''definitely needs someone there who is empowered to control and account for the events'' at the university.

The legislation passed by parliament last week - but still to be signed by President Robert Mugabe before it becomes law - puts the university council, its controlling body, firmly in government hands, and also gives the vice-chancellor, the state-appointed executive officer, sweeping powers.

SANUR BEACH, INDONESIA (OCT. 29) - Indonesia will retaliate against European Economic Community (EEC) countries that obey a European Parliament call for a boycott of Malaysian wood products, Forestry Minister Hasjrul Harahap said here Monday.

"An action entails a reaction," Mr. Harahap told reporters, adding that Indonesia could boycott European dairy products or even capital goods.

Mr. Harahap said he believed the Indonesian government's sentiment on the issue was shared by other members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), which groups Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand, Singapore, the Philippines and Brunei.

Asked if this could mean a trade war, he said: "If they ask for it, yes."

"If someone pushes us to the corner, we will push them to the sea," he said.

But he added that he preferred negotiations to a trade war and in any case, he did not believe EEC member governments would obey the call since the European Parliament had no power over them.

The European Parliament in Strasbourg on Thursday endorsed a resolution calling for a ban on imports of tropical hardwoods from the eastern Malaysian state of Sarawak, saying that deforestation by loggers in the area was catastrophic.

Mr. Harahap said Malaysia should be given at least 10 years to implement the concept of sustainable forest management.

Mr. Harahap Monday presented the results of a recent ASEAN forestry mission to EEC countries at the ASEAN economic ministers meeting under way on this holiday island of Bali.

The mission aimed to counter a campaign in Europe against the use of tropical wood products, an important export item for many ASEAN countries.

He said the campaign was unfair since the pollution produced by industrial countries caused greater damage to the global environment than logging.

"We increase our tropical forest area and you reduce your pollution," he said.

Mr. Harahap said the mission had tried to address the European Parliament but was turned down.

RIYADH (OCT. 29) - Saudi Arabia Monday lashed out at Yemeni President Ali Abdullah Saleh over the latter's remarks accusing Riyadh of seeking to undermine stability in Yemen and mistreating Yemeni nationals in the oil-rich kingdom.

The Saudi Press Agency (Spa) quoted a responsible source as refuting charges against Saudi Arabia made by the Yemeni president in an interview with the New York Times newspaper.

In the interview, published on October 26, Saleh criticized Saudi Arabia for calling in U.S. and other foreign troops to the kingdom. He also accused Riyadh of working to undermine stability in Yemen by taking measures that had forced more than half a million Yemenis to leave Saudi Arabia and return home.

The Saudi source said Saleh charged that the returning Yemenis had been mistreated by Saudi soldiers on the border and were not allowed to take their belongings with them. In the same interview, Saleh described Iraqi President Saddam Hussein as an ''excellent Arab leader and a good Arab nationalist''.

Yemen has supported Saddam in his conflict with the U.S.-led alliance against Iraq over its invasion and annexation of Kuwait.

AMMAN (OCT. 29) - A London-based charitable organization headed by Mother Teresa has proposed peace talks on neutral ground in a bid to promote a non-violent settlement of the Gulf crisis, a senior member of the organization said here Monday.

Daniel Lillis, Deputy Secretary General of Refugee Year, said Mother Teresa had recently sent a letter outlining the project to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

He said he and the organization's secretary general, Reverend Kevin Doheny, were in Baghdad October 15 for talks with Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Taha Yassin Ramadan and senior officials.

Both activists plan to meet in Washington with U.S. President George Bush and then travel to Rome to seek the cooperation of the Italian government, the current holder of the rotating European Economic Community presidency.

"Father Doheny remains in Baghdad. I will leave for London Tuesday but will return to Baghdad as soon as the Iraqi government has had a chance to fully consider its response," said Mr. Lillis.

He declined to reveal the names of the participants or where the proposed contacts would be held, but he said locations outside the region were being considered.

Mr. Lillis called British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's approach to the Gulf crisis "unhelpful" and said Refugee Year had not yet asked her government to take part in the contacts.

"We will contact the British government after our trip to Washington," he added.

Based on his talks with Iraqi officials, Mr. Lillis stressed that the release of "foreign nationals from Iraq and Kuwait was not dependent upon the removal of sanctions but rather upon the removal of threat of war."

Washington and London spearheaded international condemnation of Iraq in the aftermath of its August 2 invasion of Kuwait and both countries have deployed troops in Saudi Arabia to guard against a feared Iraqi attack.

Mr. Lillis said Mother Teresa had offered to send a "group of her sisters to help relieve the plight of vulnerable groups affected by United Nations sanctions" against Baghdad, as well as supplies of baby food and medicine.

Refugee Year, formed in November 1989, hopes to raise 30 million dollars in the next 12 months to implement a relief programme to help the world's homeless and displaced refugees, according to Mr. Lillis.

TOKYO, (OCT. 29) - Foreign financial aid to the Soviet Union should be used for privatisation of the economy, not to finance state firms or satisfy consumer demand, Moscow mayor Gavril Popov said here Monday.

"I think that loans are necessary, but for privatisation," Mr. Popov told a press luncheon. "If loans will be used for the purpose of buying foodstuffs or consumer goods as the president (Mikhail Gorbachev) wants to do, history will repeat itself."

Mr. Popov, an economist linked to the reform-minded Russian leader Boris Yeltsin, said it was necessary to build an economy which can pay back loans and provide goods "so that these loans make us reliable partners for foreigners."

While he acknowledged the right of the central Soviet government to accept foreign loans, the mayor questioned their distribution and final destination.

An opponent of financial aid to state enterprises, Mr. Popov expressed his desire to obtain foreign loans, mainly Japanese, to boost Moscow's economy.

"If we obtain these loans, we will orient them to the shops which will be privatised because private owners will be able to pay them back," Mr. Popov said, adding that he also wanted to privatise the capital's housing.

He said the current policy of passive resistance pursued by Soviet reformers led by Mr. Yeltsin against Mr. Gorbachev's economic program would only last a limited time.

"It is obvious that this program will not solve the problems of the country and even more, it will make them more serious," he said, adding that some reformers might resign rather than take responsibility for its failure.

Mr. Popov said a coalition government of the centre left was the only solution because "strikes can only be stopped by us and nobody else." He added, however, that Mr. Gorbachev "must stay on in his post of president."

The mayor said that Moscow and the Russian republic were holding talks with other cities and republics as well as with foreign countries.

JAMMU, INDIA (OCT. 29) - Seven people were killed and eight more injured when Moslem militants exchanged gunfire with paramilitary troopers in Kashmir Monday, a police spokesman said.

He said an unspecified number of militants launched a rocket attack before dawn on the regional headquarters of the Central Reserve Police Force (CRPF) in Srinagar, the summer capital of Jammu and Kashmir state.

The CRPF men fired back, opening a gunbattle that left three militants, two CRPF men and two civilian bystanders dead and eight more people injured, three critically, the spokesman said.

Ten suspects were detained after the army was called out to help the CRPF search for the militants.

In other incidents, a fire that erupted after an exchange of gunfire between militants and security forces gutted some 70 dwellings and shops in Kashmir valley's Mattan township, some 64 kilometres (40 miles) to the southeast of Srinagar late Sunday.

ROME (OCT. 29) - The Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) has started a worldwide campaign to encourage tea-drinking, especially among young people, the United Nations specialized agency announced here on Monday.

The FAO said in a statement: "Tea is not only a beverage representing no health risk, but it has also been determined medically that it helps prevent certain types of cancer, heart ailments and all diseases due to fluorine deficiencies".

Delegates of 27 countries that recently took part in a meeting on tea stressed "the positive effects of tea-drinking on health".

The FAO noted that world tea output rose by three per cent a year between 1980 and 1988, to 2,482,000 tonnes in the latter year. Production might hit 2,951,000 tonnes in 1995, according to current estimates.

GENEVA (OCT 29) - Airlines belonging to the International Air Transport Association (IATA) condemned Iraq on Monday for violating air space and Kuwait airport, and demanded the release of all their passengers and crew detained in Iraq.

A resolution on these points was adopted without any objections being raised, even by the delegation from Iraqi Airways, which made no observations, at the 46th annual general meeting of IATA.

IATA has 200 member airlines accounting for 95 percent of world air traffic.

The resolution also demanded that seized aircraft be released and called on Iraq to ensure safe conditions in which airlines could carry out their business.

ABU DHABI (OCT 29) - The governor of the United Arab Emirates (UAE) Central Bank said a prolonged Gulf crisis could wipe out the country's gains from higher oil prices and production.

Abdul Malik al-Hamar said in an address Sunday that contributions to a multinational force in the Gulf, increased defence needs and aid for crisis-hit countries would offset a sharp increase in oil revenues that followed Iraq's August 2 invasion of Kuwait.

"The longer the state of wait-and-see, the bigger these emergency expenditures are likely to be," Mr. Hamar said. "This means a bigger deficit for the UAE."

UAE oil revenues are expected to rise by 35 percent to 50 billion dirhams (13.6 billion dollars) this year form 37 billion dirhams (10 billion dollars) in 1989, he said.

Mr. al-Hamar said revenues of the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) would rise by 43 percent to 60 billion dollars in 1990 due to oil prices that have doubled since the invasion and increased output.

He said Kuwait's other partners in the GCC -- Saudi Arabia, Oman, Qatar and Bahrain -- would also suffer from high costs connected with the multinational forces and defence.

"GCC states need to chalk out a new oil policy that should be linked to overall development," Mr. al-Hamar added.

He said panic withdrawals in UAE commercial banks immediately after the invasion had caused a flight of seven billion dirhams (1.9 billion dollars) out of the country.

"If there is a war, I expect transfer of funds to be at that level for months."

Paris (OCT. 29) - Moscow pledged to repay its debts owed to France since the days of the czar, Soviet diplomats said Monday.

The pledge was contained in an article of the Franco-Soviet treaty on understanding and cooperation signed at the Paris summit of the presidents from both countries. The sum at stake and the modalities remained to be finalised, they added.

Moscow sold some 5,000 Russian government bonds worth an estimated 12 billion old gold francs (about 240 billion French francs today or 48 billion dollars) between 1822 and 1917 in France. Most of the old securites are held by the French state.

NEW DELHI (OCT. 29) - Hindu-Moslem clashes left eight people dead in India as troops armed with shoot orders braced themselves Monday for a showdown with Hindu militants in Ayodhya, the northern pilgrim town at the centre of a raging religious dispute.

Five people, including a paramilitary police officer, were killed in the southern city of Hyderabad, and a judge and two others died in the northern town of Rampur in communal rioting that began Sunday night, press reports said.

The army was alerted in Hyderabad and a curfew clamped in Rampur, the Press Trust of India (PTI) news agency said. It said Hindu-Moslem tensions were running high in several parts of India.

Troops were also enforcing an indefinite curfew on the eastern industrial town of Ranchi where mob violence, bomb blasts and police gunfire had left four dead Sunday, PTI said.

The deaths took the toll to more than 100 in a week of Hindu-Moslem unrest.

The latest violence was reported a day before the deadline set by Hindu fundamentalists to raze an ancient Moslem mosque and build a temple in Ayodhya, 700 kilometres (420 miles) east of New Delhi.

The Hindu-revivalist Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP, Indian People's Party) is at the forefront of the programme, which has raised widespread fears of a communal bloodbath and prompted an unprecedented government crackdown.

More than 100,000 Hindu activists have been arrested in the nationwide crackdown, a majority of them in the state of Uttar Pradesh where Ayodhya is located. Thousands were arrested Monday.

Hundreds have died in dozens of communal clashes since 1986, when a judge in Faizabad ruled that the mosque closed since 1949 be unlocked and Hindus be permitted to worship their idols.

Idols of Rama, his consort Sita and brother Lakshmana were smuggled in on December 22, 1949 by Hindus who claim they appeared magically.

"I sell to buy better and I need money to buy what pleases me," Mr. Delon said adding that he was reorienting his collection toward "other forms of painting such as Fauvism, German expressionism and 1950's'abtract art."

He was addressing a news conference to present an auction of 32 works on November 25 by high-definition satellite feed from Paris to the Japanese cities of Tokyo, Osaka, Nagoya, Hiroshima and Fukuoka.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 29) - Jordan's King Hussein said in a recent interview he thought there was "always a chance for peace" in the Gulf crisis, and that Iraq was showing signs of moving toward creation of a more peaceful region.

In an interview published in the latest edition of Time magazine, King Hussein also said he believes "Jordan is being punished for holding its head high and trying to contribute to a solution that makes sense."

After Iraq's August 2 invasion of Kuwait, King Hussein was criticized for his ambiguous stand toward Iraqi President Saddam Hussein at a time when the international community loudly denounced Iraqi aggression.

"I believe there is still a chance for peace, but it must be pursued by all of us," he said.

Asked whether he believed President George Bush, Saudi King Fahd and Iraq's President Hussein were committed to a peaceful outcome, King Hussein said, "There are signs coming out of Iraq at this time that suggest a readiness to move toward a peaceful and secure region."

HANOI (OCT 29) - A Vietnamese forestry vice minister has been sacked for abuse of power after newspapers uncovered deals in which he allegedly lost the state millions of dollars, the Nhan Dan reported Monday.

Since May, the press has accused Than Trung Hieu of abusing power and serious infractions, the official newspaper said.

The reports have said that the infractions and poor decisions by Mr. Hieu lost the state some 48 billion dong (7.68 million dollars), particularly in wood export deals.

The sacking of Mr. Hieu was announced in a letter to the Nhan Dan from Forestry Minister Phan Xuan Dot.

The minister also announced the firing of two union general directors in forestry companies under his ministry. He said legal action would be taken against the two, Nguyen Hay and Nguyen Man.

A national campaign against government corruption has been in full swing over the last two months, touching dozens of senior officials, including vice ministers.

Three director generals of the central bank were fired early this month.

BRUSSELS (OCT 29) - An urgent meeting of European Community trade ministers slated for Tuesday on solving the E.C. row over a common formula on farm subsidy cuts was postponed until next week, Italian diplomats said here Monday.

The E.C. has already missed by two weeks a deadline to present its joint proposal on farm subsidy cuts at the present Uruguay Round on liberalising world trade under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. The talks are due to end in early December.

E.C. leaders at their weekend Rome summit again deferred a decision on the E.C. executive Commission proposal to their ministers who have repeated failured to reach an agreement.

France and Germany oppose the Commission proposal to cut farm subsidies by 30 percent until 1996 on the grounds that it would hurt its national farmers.

The United States has demanded that farm subsidies be slashed by more than 75 percent by the end of the decade.

The diplomats said Foreign Trade Minister Renato Ruggiero of Italy, which currently holds the E.C. presidency, would travel to Bonn Tuesday as part of an E.C. tour aimed at settling the dispute. The trade ministers would probably meet in Brussels on November 5.

ACCRA (OCT 29) - The leader of the breakaway rebel group in Liberia, Prince Yormie Johnson, has accused remnants of the forces of slain president Samuel Doe of stealing food from civilians and said the West African peacekeeping force in the country has failed to control them, the British Broadcasting Corporation (Bbc) reported Monday.

The Bbc, monitored here, said Johnson complained that the peacekeeping force was allowing the late president's soldiers to roam the streets of the capital, Monrovia. They were also manning checkpoints. Johnson said they should be confined to the Berkely Training Centre.

Johnson said this was a crucial time in the history of the West African country and they could not assure the security of international relief operations when the soldiers were stealing food from civilians.

''There is trouble coming. You trouble civilians and you trouble me (Johnson) '' he declared.

Johnson said there was no trouble between him and the 9,000-strong peacekeeping force. However, the ceasefire accord signed between his group and remnants of Doe's supporters in Banjul last week would be invalid if reports of theft continued.

He said failure to control Doe's soldiers threatened the return of full-scale relief operations in Liberia where several thousand people face starvation after 10 months of civil war.

PARIS (OCT 29) - French President Francois Mitterrand said Monday the release of some 330 French hostages in Kuwait and Iraq had not been negotiated by the Paris government.

The 330 French nationals, along with the last six remaining Paris diplomats in Kuwait and 10 Greeks, were meanwhile on a flight to Paris from Baghdad aboard an Iraqi plane. The aircraft was due to arrive at Paris Roissy airport shortly before midnight local time, the French foreign ministry said.

The plane would be loaded with medicine before its return to Baghdad, the foreign ministry added.

Mitterrand told reporters France had sent no envoys to Baghdad to negotiate the release of its nationals. Paris would be content only if all foreign nationals held in Iraq had been freed.

The 10 Greeks were allowed to leave Iraq on health grounds. Their release was negotiated by two former Greek socialist ministers. Fourteen other Greeks remain in Iraq.

Prague said 18 Czechoslovak technicians were refused permission to leave Iraq despite valid travel documents in an apparant reaction to Prague's decision to send an anti-poison gas army unit to join the multinational force in Saudi Arabia.

Bonn said it remained opposed to a humanitarian mission to Iraq by former Social Democratic chancellor Willy Brandt but pledged it would not leave the about 400 Germans hostages to their fate.

European Community leaders Sunday vowed that Iraq's selective release of foreign hostages would not erode their unity on the Gulf crisis, and they pledged not to negotiate with Baghdad to bring their fellow nationals home.

BRUSSELS (OCT 29) - NATO sea exercises in the eastern Mediterranean will be prolonged at Washington's request, the NATO command said Monday.

Eight warships with 2,000 men aboard are involved in the exercises, code-named Navocformed, which are now continuing until December 11 in relation to the Gulf crisis. The exercises were originally to end Wednesday.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization said it prolonged the exercises in response to a request received on September 10 by U.S. Secretary of State James Baker.

The naval force is currently steaming towards Tarante, in southeast Italy. The eight-nation fleet will stopover in Palermo (Sicily) before returning to the eastern Mediterranean.

Ships from Greece, Germany, Italy, Spain, Portugal, Turkey, Britain and the United States are taking part in the exercises, which began on September 10 under the command of Captain Georg Beserianos of Greece.

They could notably monitor vessels which go through the Suez Canal on their way to the Gulf, informed sources said.

A statement from the NATO command said the manoeuvres would also compensate for the absence of naval units deployed in the Gulf region.

PARIS (OCT. 29) - Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy was received here for talks Monday evening by French Premier Michel Rocard.

No details on the discussions were revealed, but they were believed to have concentrated on developments in Israel following the bloodbath on the Temple Mount earlier this month, and on the Gulf crisis and its effects on the security situation in the Middle East.

On the eve of his visit to Paris, Levy had expressed fears that the West might agree to an arrangement with Iraq regarding Kuwait which would leave Baghdad's military strength untouched.

PARIS (OCT. 29) - The Soviet Union has requested a total of 10 billion francs (almost two billion dollars) in French financial aid, a French diplomatic source said Monday evening.

The source said that, in addition to the five billion francs in aid already granted to the Soviet Union under a bilateral financial protocol, the Soviet Union could receive an equal additional amount from France, but within a multilateral framework yet to be laid down.

That framework might involve aid from the European Economic Community, or the Group of Seven (leading industrial countries United States, Canada, Japan, Britain, France, Italy, Germany).

The source said that the financial agreement signed Sunday in connection with a visit here by Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev involves a loan guaranteed by the French government and made on "market terms". A banking consortium will be set up by November 20 to arrange the loan.

The initial aid installment is supposed to refinance Soviet arrears in payments tio French business (around 1.5 billion francs) and to finance Soviet purchases of French foodstuffs, steel and chemicals.

Separately, a Soviet source said on Monday that the compensation the Soviet Union is to offer French holders of Czarist bonds, the principle of which was announced during Mr. Gorbachev's brief visit here, is likely to be only partial, along the lines of what was done in Britain after the 1986 Anglo-Soviet agreement.

The "real value" of such bonds is enormous, and Franco-Soviet talks are in progress on just how much compensation should be paid and how, the source said.

In 1918, Frenchmen held Czarist bonds worth the equivalent of around 40 billion dollars in terms of today's dollars. Around 28 billion dollars' worth are thought to be still held.

The Soviet Union could not possibly pay such a sum, and the solution will proably be to use only the face value indicated on the bonds, 500 francs each, neglecting the point that 500 francs at that time would be equivalent to 10,000 francs (almost 2,000 dollars) now.

Actually, the payment will probably be reduced further by paying each bond holder only part of the face value.

DHAKA (OCT 29) - Bangladeshi teachers said Monday they would not resume classes until the government repealed a new ordinance which it used to shut all schools on October 13 in the face of mounting student protests.

"We will take classes in the open air if all schools are not opened simultaneously," Yazuddin Ahmed, president of the Dhaka University Teachers Association, told a meeting at the university campus.

He said the teachers would not resume classes until the new ordinance was repealed. All primary and secondary schools here and five of the country's seven universities were shut by the government.

The teachers called for the immediate resignation of President Hussain Mohammad Ershad, who is also the chancellor of Bangladesh's universities, because of his approval of the "illegal ordinance."

The ordinance empowers the government to shut educational institutions for one month or more and impose sanctions of six months' imprisonment and fines of 1,000 taka (28 dollars) for violators.

The teachers, belonging to different levels of educational institutions of the country, also called on their colleagues not to hold classes when only secondary level schools reopen Thursday.

BONN (OCT. 30) - With just five weeks to go until the first all-German general elections, the Social Democratic Party (Spd) is in a forlorn state.

The Spd has buried all hope of toppling the centre-right government of Helmut Kohl, and is bracing for what could be one of the most devastating election losses in its history.

Opinion surveys in recent days show that on election day December 2 only 32 to 36 per cent of the 59 million eligible German voters intend to vote Spd. That would represent the worst oucome since 1957 when only 31.8 voted for the Social Democrats.

When the German television magazine show ''Monitor'' aired a tongue-in-cheek report last week that the Spd was calling off its campaign efforts, a lot of viewers took the joke seriously.

Just three months ago Spd standard-bearer Oskar Lafontaine, 47, prophesied, ''Kohl's image will begin to tarnish in the autumn.''

But in fact, it was the challenger whose image lost its lustre. By October only 38 percent of those Germans surveyed said they would vote for Lafontaine if given the chance to do so in a direct election. For Kohl were 52 percent.

The 60-year-old Christian Democratic Union chancellor has taken the wind out of the sails of his opponents in recent months with his concept for German unity. Warnings by the Spd that the forced unity was leading East Germanny into unemployment and poverty found fewer and fewer listeners.

In the state elections in the five new eastern German federal states on October 14, the Spd garnered only one legislature. Kohl's Cdu was strongest party in four states.

WASHINGTON (OCT 29) - The State Department said Monday it had no reason to question the conclusion of international observers who said the outcome of Pakistan's general elections was not significantly affected by irregularities.

"Despite observing some iregularities, the delegation did not conclude these irregularities significantly altered the outcome of the elections," State Deparment spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said.

"Nothing in our own observations would lead us to question the observer team's findings," she said, adding it was too early to render judgement on the provincial elections held over the weekend.

A team of 40 observers from the Washington-based National Democratic Institute Friday did not confirm former prime minister Benazir Bhutto's accusations of massive election fraud.

But another team of observers from the International Federation of Human Rights charged Monday that the elections' outcome had been affected by "highly sophisticated fraud."

The Islamic Democratic Alliance routed Ms. Bhutto's People's Democratic Alliance in the October 24 elections, capturing 105 parliament seats compared to the PDA's 45 seats.

ATHENS (OCT 29) - The Iraqi embassy in Athens said nine Greeks were among Westerners flying Monday to Paris from Baghdad and the Greek government accused Iraq of intervening in its internal affairs.

A communique from the Iraqi embassy in Athens said Monday that Iraqi authorities had let nine Greeks leave Baghdad Monday after an ''initiative'' by the Greek socialist party Pasok.

''The desire of Iraq to intervene in the internal affairs of the country (Greece) is clear and the government absolutely condemns this policy,'' government spokesman Byron Polydoras said in reaction to the communique.

The communique said two Pasok members of parliament had ''contacts with Iraqi leaders in Baghdad.''

The Conservative government here is in uproar over claims by the opposition socialists that they gained the release of Greek hostages.

A plane coming from Baghdad to Paris Monday, with some 270 French hostages aboard, had not yet reached Paris. It was due to land at 2230 GMT.

It was not clear exactly how many Greeks were aboard.

Mr. Polydoras said a special Olympic Airways flight would wait for the hostages in Paris to take them home.

They were among 24 Greek hostages being held in Iraq and were released on health grounds, Mr. Polydoras said.

Pasok claimed responsibility for gaining their release after MP's Carolos Papoulias and Akis Tshohatzopoulos spent five days in Iraq negotiating with Iraqi authorities.

Mr. Papoulias, former foreign minister, said the release was a "personal gift from Iraq to Papandreou."

Andreas Papandreou, prime minister from 1981 to 1989, is leader of Pasok.

Conservative papers accused the two Socialist deputies of "belly dancing" in front of the "butcher of Baghdad."

Mr. Papoulias said he hoped the remaining Greeks in Iraq would soon be given exit visas, but told the Socialist newspaper Ta Nea that he did "not understand why all the (Greek) hostages had not been allowed home together."

JERUSALEM (OCT 29) EFE - Israel is considering new restrictions on Palestinians working in Jerusalem which could see a total of 15,000 refused entry to the city, an Israeli newspaper reported Monday.

The daily Ha'aretz said the Defence Ministry would study Monday plans drawn up by its own officials, police, the secret services and the military and civil governments of the Occupied Territories.

The government was likely to turn away about 8,000 Arabs from Jerusalem who have either police records or are known to be active in the Intifada, or uprising, against Israeli occupation, Ha'aretz added.

Some 7,000 workers with police records have already been prohibited from entering Jerusalem since borders between Israel and the Occupied Territories were reopened early Sunday after a a four day closure.

The borders had been sealed following several weeks of revenge attacks between Jews and Arabs sparked by the police killing of at least 19 Palestinian protesters October 8.

Only 60 per cent of the estimated 120,000 Palestinians with jobs in Jerusalem returned to work Sunday.

The pro-government daily Jerusalem Post attributed this to fears of attacks by Jews, to tight security set up at border posts and in the city and because several thousand have lost their jobs to Israelis or Soviet Jews who have emmigrated to Israel.

The killing by Israeli police of the Palestinian demonstrators on Jerusalem's Temple Mount unleashed a wave of violence between Arabs and Jews in which at least five people were killed.

International outrage over police action at the Tmeple Mount led to a United Nations resolution which condemned the shootings and announced the U.N.'s decision to send a team to Jerusalem to investigate the violence.

Ha'aretz reported Monday that the Israeli government, which until now has said it will not cooperate with the U.N. team, is considering reversing its decision.

The newspaper said government officials were discussing the issue with the United States, its closest Western ally, but did not give further details.

Ha'aretz said members of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's government feared that the U.N. Security Council could impose sanctions on Israel over its refusal to cooperate with the international organization.

In a related event, Israeli state radio reported that Shamir and Police Minister Roni Millo are to decide this week whether to punish police chiefs for failing to be adequately prepared to deal with protests by Palestinian demonstrators which led to the October 8 killings.

A government-appointed commission concluded Friday that Moslem leaders had incited Arab demonstrators to violence and that with only 45 police officers deployed in the Temple Mount area, the use of firearms to control the 3,000 Arab demonstrators was justified.

But it said police should have been better prepared to deal with the incident.

The Palestinian demonstration had been called to protest plans by a group of Jewish extremists to build a synagogue on Temple Mount, the site of two mosques and a holy place for both Moslems and Jews.

London (OCT. 29) EFE - Iran delayed the reopening of its London embassy for four days Monday to await the arrival of Iranian diplomats, officials said.

Britain and Iran agreed in September to reopen their embassies in Tehran and London, restoring diplomatic relations severed more than 18 months ago in a row over a British book considered by Moslems to be blasphemous.

Britain reopened its embassy in Tehran Sunday and Iran was due to follow suit Monday, but has postponed opening until Friday, diplomatic sources said.

Each mission will have five diplomats headed by a charge d'affaires. The governments have not yet set a date for the return to the embassies of the two ambassadors.

The cause of the rift was the death sentence passed on Britsh author Salman Rushdie by the late Iranian spiritual leader Ayatollah Khomeini for his book "Satanic Verses" which deeply offended many Moslems.

Ties were resumed after British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher publicly declared that Britain was not anti-Moslem.

CAIRO (OCT. 29) EFE - Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak said the country's economy has lost more than nine billion dollars since the start of the Gulf crisis, a Cairo newspaper reported Monday.

"We have sacrificed our economy to reach a definitive solution to the Gulf crisis," Mubarak told the daily Al-Ahram, referring to the effects of the United Nations trade embargo imposed on Iraq after its August 2 invasion of neighboring Kuwait.

Mubarak said the losses were sharply felt in Egypt which imports 80 percent of its food.

The Gulf crisis has badly affected the tourist industry, one of Egypt's chief sources of income.

Egypt usually receives more than two million visitors annually but has lost over 40 percent of its tourist revenue since the invasion.

The reduction in boats passing through the Suez Canal as a result of the international embargo on trade with Iraq has also affected the Egyptian economy.

However, four Gulf Cooperation Council countries -- Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar and Oman -- which Mubarak visited last week agreed to write off seven billion dollars in Egyptian debts.

Saudi Arabia also offered Mubarak one billion dollars in aid to add to the 500 million dollars it had already granted the Egyptian government to fund development projects.

Egypt has spearheaded Arab opposition to Baghdad's invasion of Kuwait, sending an estimated 19,000 troops to join the multi-national force massed in the Gulf.

BOGOTA (OCT 29) EFE - A former spokesman for the M-19 leftist rebel group-turned-political party took up office Monday as Colombian health minister.

The new minister, Camilo Gonzalez Posso, a 40-year-old chemical engineer, took over from fellow M-19 member Antonio Navarro Wolff.

The outgoing health minister resigned Thursday to stand for December 9 elections to the National Constituent Assembly which has been charged with drafting sweeping changes to the Colombian constitution.

During the handing-over ceremony, Wolff, who came third in presidential elections May 27, praised President Carlos Gaviria "for having taken the risk of breaking with Colombian history by naming an ex-guerrilla as minister."

Gonzalez Posso pledged to continue programs initiated by Wolff, including drinking-water systems for the poor.

CHICAGO (OCT. 29) UPI - Corn closed higher Monday on the Chicago Board of Trade but beans and oats were lower and wheat was mainly lower.

Rumors that the Soviet Union may have bought 500,000 tons of U.S. corn during the weekend fueled buying interest. U.S. exporters, however, said there was no indication of such a sale. Commercial buying was heavy in nearby December.

Beans dipped to new session lows on commercial hedging, professional selling and active weekend harvesting. They had gotten somewhat of a boost at midday from the renewed strength in corn and lack of farmer selling.

Wheat trade was choppy and quiet with professional selling weighing on prices. Reports of a record wheat harvest in China pressured wheat futures.

At the close, corn was unchanged to up 1 1/4, wheat was off 1 1/2 to up 1 1/2, beans were down 2 to 4 3/4 and oats were off 3/4 to 1.

THE PACKAGE, WHICH ALSO PROPOSES THAT TELEVISION BROADCASTERS REDUCE THEIR

OPERATING SCHEDULES, IS A WINTER VERSION OF PROPOSALS MITI ADOPTED IN AUGUST FOR THE SUMMER IN RESPONSE TO THE GULF CRISIS. THE SUMMER VERSION, HOWEVER, DID NOT INCLUDE A SHORTENING OF BUSINESS HOURS.

MITI OFFICIALS STRESSED THAT ITS PROPOSALS ARE NOT AT THE LEVEL OF ADMINISTRATIVE GUIDANCE BUT ARE MERELY PART OF THE GOVERNMENT'S EFFORTS TO RAISE THE PUBLIC'S AWARENESS REGARDING THE IMPORTANCE OF SAVING ENERGY.

"WE JUST HOPE TO STIMULATE THE PRIVATE SECTOR TO CONSIDER PREPARING FOR AN ENERGY EMERGENCY IF ANY CHANGE IN CIRCUMSTANCES SHOULD REQUIRE MORE DRASTIC MEASURES," AN OFFICIAL SAID.

THE NEW STEPS INCLUDE REQUESTS THAT BOTH THE PUBLIC AND PRIVATE SECTORS RESTRICT HEATING TO 20 C, SLASH LIGHTING BY ONE-THIRD, AND GENERALLY IMPROVE ENERGY MANAGEMENT FOR BUILDINGS AND INDUSTRIES.

THE GOVERNMENT ALSO DECIDED TO CALL FOR SHORTER TV BROADCASTING HOURS, AND CUTTING LIGHTING FOR ADVERTISEMENTS AND DECORATION. IT ALSO WILL URGE BUSINESSES OPERATING LATE AT NIGHT TO CLOSE EARLIER.

KUALA LUMPUR (OCT. 29) KYODO - PRIME MINISTER MAHATHIR MOHAMAD ACCUSED THE UNITED STATES OF "ECONOMIC ARM-TWISTING" IN RESPONSE TO A MOVE BY THE U.S. CONGRESS TO WITHDRAW ITS 1 MILLION DOLLAR MILITARY TRAINING GRANT TO MALAYSIA, LOCAL NEWSPAPERS SAID MONDAY.

THE U.S. CONGRESS ON THURSDAY PASSED AN AMENDMENT TO THE FOREIGN ASSISTANCE ACT WHICH SEEKS TO WITHDRAW THE GRANT FROM MALAYSIA FOR "REFUSING ASYLUM TO REFUGEES FLEEING VIETNAM."

"THIS GOES TO SHOW THAT THEY (UNITED STATES) NEVER HESITATE TO RESORT TO ECONOMIC ARM-TWISTING TACTICS WHEN DEALING WITH SMALLER NATIONS. FOR THEM, MIGHT IS RIGHT," MAHATHIR SAID.

MAHATHIR SAID THE U.S. ALSO REFUSED ASYLUM TO REFUGEES FROM HAITI AND MEXICO "BUT THIS DOES NOT SEEM UNJUSTIFIED TO THEM."

"BUT WHAT CAN WE DO. THEY ARE STRONG AND WE ARE WEAK," HE SAID. MALAYSIA HAS TURNED AWAY MANY VIETNAMESE BOAT-PEOPLE FROM ITS SHORES, SAYING THAT NO END APPEARS IN SIGHT TO THE 15-YEAR INFLUX.

THE GOVERNMENT ALSO CLAIMS THE VIETNAMESE ARE NOT GENUINE REFUGEES BUT ECONOMIC MIGRANTS AND THAT SETTLEMENT COUNTRIES ARE NOT DOING ENOUGH TO ACCEPT THE BOAT-PEOPLE FROM FIRST ASYLUM COUNTRIES.

THE TURNING AWAY OF REFUGEES ALSO PROMPTED SOME LEGISLATORS FROM CALIFORNIA EARLY THIS YEAR TO THREATEN A TRADE BOYCOTT OF MALAYSIAN GOODS.

U.S. PRESIDENT GEORGE BUSH IS EXPECTED TO SIGN THE LEGISLATION SOON, BOTH AMERICAN AND MALAYSIAN FOREIGN MINISTRY SOURCES SAID MONDAY.

AN OFFICIAL WITH THE FOREIGN MINISTRY SAID THAT THE AMENDMENT IS A SMALL PART OF THE OVERALL LEGISLATION AND THAT BUSH IS UNLIKELY TO VETO THE ENTIRE BILL.

THE ECONOMIC GROWTH RATE FOR THE FIRST HALF OF THE YEAR IS ABOUT 10.3 PERCENT, AND WITH THE RECENT RISE IN OIL PRICES, ECONOMISTS WIDELY EXPECT MORE THAN 10 PERCENT GROWTH FOR THE WHOLE OF THIS YEAR, ABOVE THE 8.5 PERCENT RECORDED LAST YEAR.

ACCORDING TO THE BULLETIN, THE MAIN ENGINES OF GROWTH IN THE SECOND QUARTER CONTINUED TO BE MANUFACTURING AND CONSTRUCTION, BUT STRONG DOMESTIC DEMAND SLIGHTLY RAISED CONSUMER INFLATION.

THE BANK AND ECONOMISTS HAD FORECAST A 1990 GROWTH RATE OF 8.5 PERCENT EARLIER THIS YEAR.

BUT IRAQ'S INVASION OF KUWAIT AND THE SUBSEQUENT RISE IN OIL PRICES HAVE INCREASED THIS OIL-PRODUCING NATION'S EARNINGS RECENTLY.

FROM THE BULLS:

"I think this is the time to get in for the long term," says JULIUS WESTHEIMER. "I tell people today there's a sale going on in Wall Street. There are some good values out there that are severely marked down. I'm not saying you have to go in and buy and spend all your money. But at least take a look." ("Wall Street Week", 10/26)

FROM THE BEARS:

"It looks like it's going to be more of the same bad news," says PETER VANDENBERG of SHEARSON LEHMAN BROTHERS. "The fact is, the 'R' word [recession] is on the tip of everyone's tongue. There'll be trading rallies, but many investors will sell on any spike upward." ("USA Today", 10/29)

FIONA BIGGS, manager of the $25 million DREYFUS STRATEGIC WORLD INVESTMENT fund, thinks the "U.S. market will continue to decline, reaching 2200 or lower" on the Dow. (NYT, 10/28)

MICHAEL KATZ, head of REYNARD ASSET MANAGEMENT, sees a Dow of 1200 to 1500 a year or so out. Recalling that investors continued to lose money from 1929 through 1932, he says: "It's a lesson to be learned. You can get killed chasing what looks cheap." ("USA Today", 10/29)

STOCK MARKET:

"I have to hang the blame [for the stock market decline last week] on the fact that the economy is not in very good shape," says BILL WOLMAN, chief economist for "BusinessWeek" and "CNBC." "Even though the earnings numbers that came out for the third quarter were not bad, the market is foreseeing a further slowdown and recession in the economy and doesn't yet see the other side of the valley." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 10/26)

"The way the market rolled over Thursday and Friday, it took the edge off the recent rally," says ROBERT WIBBELSMAN of KAYNE ANDERSON & CO. "It gives me the feeling it's going lower. I think what we're seeing is a buyers' strike. The previous rise was caused by aggressive short-covering by professional money managers. What I am seeing is a lot of investors who are getting spooked easily." ("Investor's Daily", 10/29)

"We are still not at stock prices that I would consider bargains," says ABBY JOSEPH COHEN at GOLDMAN SACHS. She says weak earnings would be fully factored into share prices about 10% to 12% below where they are now. That would have the Dow down to about 2200. (WSJ, 10/29)

"I am concerned about the long-term ... because of the banks ... but there are some bargains [in the stock market]," says RALPH ACAMPORA. "I see leadership. If you want to outperform the market, you should stay in stocks like foods, utilities, drugs. It's very, very selective here, but you can be in the market. ... People are talking bearish, but not acting bearish. I don't think this bear market is going to end until they capitulate in the big stocks." ("Wall Street Week", 10/26)

GENE SEAGLE of GRUNTAL & CO. thinks the market could be about ready to turn up. "We've had capitulation when you look at the bank stocks and the insurance stocks," he says. "We've had declines that have been going on for over a year, really, that have given us the equivalent of bear market completion." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 10/26)

"I think the stock market has priced itself for three- quarters of the worst thing that could happen [in the Middle East]," says JOHN MANLEY of SMITH BARNEY. "While we don't know when it will happen, at some point in time oil will probably be significantly lower than it is today. Our target is somewhere around the low 20s or high teens [per barrel]. ... I don't know when the market will bottom and I can't tell you at exactly what level it will bottom, but I remain positive that the market is going to do reasonably well over the next six to 18 months." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 10/26)

STOCK TIPS:

"LEE A. IACOCCA may be running out of tricks in his bid to keep CHRYSLER CORP. alive," begins a lengthy article on the woes of the automaker in the Sunday business section of "The Washington Post." The report says the Chrysler chief is caught between boasting of the company's $4.5 billion in cash reserves to investors and bemoaning the reserve's inadequacy to union leaders as contract talks opened this weekend. ("The Washington Post", 10/28)

"The New York Times" leads its Sunday business section with a look at FORD MOTOR CO., focusing on the company's European operations that long "have been the goose that lays the golden eggs." It goes on: "Now, a question being asked inside and outside Ford is whether the goose is ailing and whether potential problems at Ford could cripple it." (NYT, 10/28)

"The Wall Street Journal" reports this morning that "GENERAL MOTORS may be about to bite a billion-dollar bullet." The paper says GM will formally close four assembly plants already classified as "idled" and may close seven plants in all, taking a write-off of "up to several billion dollars." The company has summoned analysts to a meeting in New York Wednesday morning, the day it announces third-quarter earnings. (WSJ, 10/29)

"We [the Big Three U.S. automakers] shipped a lot of crap in the early '80s and it came home to roost," says CHRYSLER CHAIRMAN LEE IACOCCA. ("Investor's Daily", 10/29)

DAVID ROCKER of ROCKER PARTNERS has made a reputation as an expert in shorting stocks, but he also has favorites he expects to appreciate. His No. 1 "long" is NASHUA CORP., followed by DATASCOPE, BJ SERVICES and INTERNATIONAL MULTIFOODS. On the "short" side, he is betting that SCIMED LIFE SYSTEMS, FASTENAL, MEDICINE SHOPPES and RATNERS, a British stock, all will decline. ("Barron's", 10/29)

"The potential for superior returns for the telephone industry for the rest of the year is very good," says JIM KREKELER at EDWARD D. JONES & CO. in Maryland Heights, Mo. ANTHONY CLARK of WHEAT FIRST BUTCHER & SINGER CAPITAL MARKETS in Richmond, Va., compares the telephone utilities to a franchise in which "revenues are generated in perpetuity." THEODORE MOREAU of ROBERT W. BAIRD estimates telephone companies will offer total returns in the 15% to 20% range over the next 12 months and that, over the long term, they will achieve much higher growth rates than other kinds of utilities. DETROIT (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Officials from the State of Michigan, Grand Trunk Western Railroad and the City of Ferndale, Mich., today dedicated the nation's first multiple-user rail intermodal terminal, MoTerm, in Ferndale. The terminal opening caps a two-phase, $7.2 million expansion and modernization program begun one year ago, according to Grand Trunk Western President Gerald L. Maas.

Designed to handle domestic and import/export container and trailer traffic, the Grand Trunk-owned MoTerm terminal is Detroit's largest, most active intermodal rail hub. It also is the country's first intermodal terminal to be used jointly by competing railroads. The other railroads with intermodal operations at MoTerm include: Canadian National Railway, Santa Fe Railroad, CSL Intermodal and the Burlington Northern Railway.

The terminal was officially dedicated by Jim Pitz, director, Michigan Department of Transportation; the Honorable Albert G. Gertley, mayor of Ferndale; and Maas in a ribbon-cutting ceremony that began at 11:15 a.m. today.

The opening of MoTerm comes just two weeks after Grand Trunk announced its plans to construct the Battle Creek Intermodal Gateway -- a five-acre intermodal terminal in Battle Creek, Mich., scheduled to be operating by Dec. 1, 1990.

MoTerm handled nearly 60,000 container and trailer movements in 1989. Thanks to the additional capacity now in place, the terminal is expected to handle more then 100,000 loads by 1991.

Grand Trunk built the MoTerm facility in 1977. In October 1989, it began a $7.2 million program to expand and modernize MoTerm. The expansion was needed if Grand Trunk was to efficiently handle the traffic generated by its partner railroads. Included in the expansion were two new unloading tracks, new gate facilities, additional office space, computer support, new container storage space and additional parking.

Grand Trunk Western Railroad is a Class I railroad operating 959 miles of road in Michigan, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. GTW provides rail service to automotive, chemical, utility, steel, forest product, food product and other industries in its territory, and connects with other railroads to provide service to the entire North American continent. It is headquartered in Detroit.

KANSAS CITY, MO. (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Applebee's International, Inc., (NASDAQ: APPB) today reported that it expects earnings for its third quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990 to be approximately 8 to 10 cents per share. The announcement coincides with the opening of the company's franchising convention this week. Final third quarter results will be released in about two weeks.

Total system sales were approximately $60.7 million in the third quarter, an increase of 58 percent from $38.4 million in the comparable period in 1989. This significant increase was primarily attributable to the larger number of Applebee's restaurants open during this year's third quarter. However, comparable restaurant sales figures also increased during the quarter to approximately $31.1 million, up 2.6 percent from $30.3 million in last year's third quarter. (Comparable restaurant sales figures compare sales for units in operation during the full third quarter of 1990 to the same units open in 1989.)

As of the beginning of the convention, there are 151 Applebee's restaurants open in 25 states. Of these, 126 are owned and operated by franchisees and 25 by the company. Applebee's has received state regulatory approval for franchising in all 50 states and currently has 11 new restaurants under constuction and 20 sites approved. The company pointed out that, while site approvals do not always result in new restaurant openings, the number of sites approved is a good indicator of new restaurant potential.

PAMPA, TX (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Service Fracturing Co.'s (NASDAQ: SERF) well servicing revenue in the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990 was 61 percent higher than in the like 1989 quarter while oil and gas revenue was up 183 percent in this fiscal second period.

Jerry H. Guinn, president, said well servicing revenue totaled $3,991,552 in the 1990 period compared with $2,475,025 in the 1989 quarter. Oil and gas revenue amounted to $694,030 compared with $245,238 last year. For the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990 Serfco had a loss of only $21,639, less than one cent a share, compared with a loss of $468,658 in the 1989 quarter.

Well servicing cost of operations for the quarter was up 35 percent to $3,311,983 compared with $2,451,862 in the 1989 quarter, while oil and gas cost of operations nearly tripled the previous year and amounted to $1,115,412. Guinn said the sharp increase in oil and gas cost of operations resulted from the extensive remedial work done on wells acquired in April 1989 and March 1990.

Oil and gas cost of operations also included fracture treatments and production testing of a horizontal drainhole well and a vertical well it successfully connected in June 1990. The procedure is a new one being developed by Serfco called LPRACT - Low Pressure Reservoir Alternative Completion Technology.

At the end of September the well was considered very successful from an engineering standpoint. However, oil production is not what was anticipated. Because production has only recently begun and there are anticipated remedial steps to be taken the company is unable to determine at this time whether it will be able to recover all capital costs associated with the well.

For the six months ended Sept. 30, 1990 Serfco well servicing revenues were up 22 percent to $6,833,100 compared with $5,623,116 in the 1989 six months. Oil and gas revenues for the fiscal first half amounted to $1,303,292, more than triple the $349,518 in the 1989 six months. Serfco's net loss in the six months amounted to $254,861, or five cents a share, compared to a loss of $860,194, or 29 cents a share, for the six months ended Sept. 30, 1989.

At Sept. 30, 1990 the company's current ratio was 9.16 to one compared to 4.39 to one at March 31, 1990. Current assets at Sept. 30, 1990 of $15,660,107 included $11,666,341 in cash and cash equivalents.

The large amount of cash on hand stems from the company's sale in August 1990 of 1,454,545 shares of common stock to five purchasers in a private transaction. Net proceeds to Serfco amounted to $9,531,362, and the money is temporarily invested in U.S. government-backed securities pending use for a variety of company purposes.

WALTHAM, MASS. (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Cabot Corporation (NYSE: CBT) announced today plans to offer to its shareholders the opportunity to exchange shares of Cabot common stock for the shares of Cabot Oil & Gas Corporation (NYSE: COG) common stock beneficially owned by Cabot. Cabot currently is the beneficial owner of approximately 82 percent of the common stock of Cabot Oil & Gas.

Cabot Oil & Gas, headquartered in Houston, Texas, became a public company in February 1990 through an initial public offering. Today, Cabot Oil & Gas is filing a registration statement with the SEC relating to the exchange offer. The exchange rate and other terms and conditions of the exchange offer will be announced when the offer is commenced after the registration statement becomes effective, which is expected to be in early December.

Cabot Chairman Samuel W. We also believe that the complete separation of our specialty chemicals and materials businesses from the exploration and production business of Cabot Oil & Gas will allow the financial markets to more effectively evaluate each company's businesses. The separation will also permit Cabot to focus its managerial and financial resources on the growth of its remaining businesses."

Charles P. Siess, Jr., chairman of Cabot Oil & Gas, said, "Separating the companies will provide Cabot Oil & Gas greater flexibility and enhanced ability to finance its future operations and provide Cabot Oil & Gas shareholders with an expanded market for their investment in Cabot Oil & Gas. If the exchange is consummated, but not all of the Cabot Oil and Gas shares owned by Cabot have been exchanged, any remaining shares will be distributed pro rata to remaining Cabot shareholders. Upon completion of the exchange and any subsequent distribution, Cabot will not own any shares of Cabot Oil & Gas. The dealer managers for the exchange offer are Goldman, Sachs & Co.

DENVER (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Manville Corp. (NYSE: MVL) today announced third quarter net sales of $576.1 million, up slightly from 1989, while income from operations of $63.5 million decreased by $22 million or 26 percent. Net income was $24.5 million or 17 cents per common share compared to $40.4 million or 30 cents per common share for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1989.

For the nine months ended Sept. 30, net sales were $1.7 billion, relatively constant with 1989 as acquisition-related sales offset sales lost in divestitures. Income from operations for 1990 was $214.2 million versus $241 million for 1989, down 11 percent. This resulted in net income of $102.1 million or 75 cents per common share for the first nine months of 1990 versus net income from continuing businesses of $120.1 million or 91 cents per common share in 1989.

In the third quarter, Manville acquired Visypack, Pty. Ltd., a leading producer of lithographic folding cartons in Australia. This acquisition significantly furthers Manville's strategy of expanding its position as a worldwide paper and packaging producer. Earlier in 1990, Manville announced the purchase of DRG Cartons Ltd of the U.K., a folding cartons operation and Fiskeby Board AB of Sweden, a supplier of recycled and coated boxboard products.

On Sept. 7, the company entered into an Agreement in Principle with the Manville Personal Injury Settlement Trust to restructure the funding of the Trust. Related professional fees to date of $4.8 million are included as an expense in restructuring of operations for the third quarter. Additional expenses will be incurred as the transaction proceeds.

"Our margins have declined in 1990," said Tom Stephens, Manville chairman, president and chief executive officer. "While our domestic paper business has remained steady, we're feeling the effects of softening in the domestic construction markets and the challenges of the economic reforms in Brazil. In addition, the start-up of new operations has hurt earnings. Nonetheless, we continue to feel good about most of our operations and we feel we are well prepared to deal with the economic slowdown that has started."

Manville has redefined its industry segments and, beginning in the third quarter of 1990, is separately reporting the results of the Building Products segment, the Engineered Products segment, the Forest Products segment and the Mining and Minerals segment. Building Products includes Manville's building insulations and roofing businesses. Engineered Products includes industrial fiber glass insulations and the mats, fibers and reinforcements businesses. Manville's paper and wood products and energy businesses are included in Forest Products, while Mining and Minerals encompasses the company's diatomite perlite and platinum and palladium mining operations.

Manville is an international manufacturing and natural resources company headquartered in Denver. The company's primary businesses include building and engineered products, fiber glass and industrial insulation products, paper and wood products, packaging, roofing systems and filtration and minerals. Founded in 1858, Manville has more than 18,000 people at more than 50 plants and seven mining interests worldwide. Manville and its subsidiaries have more than $2.5 billion in assets as of Dec. 31, 1989.

MINNEAPOLIS (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - HEI Inc. (NASDAQ: HEII) today released unaudited financial results for the fourth quarter and its fiscal year which

The fourth quarter ended with a net profit of $6,369, compared to net losses of $(602,661) for the fourth quarter of fiscal year 1989, and net losses of $(316,296) and $(512,505) for the second and third quarters of fiscal 1990. Revenues for the fourth quarter were $2,377,920 compared to $2,019,169 for the same period last year, and $1,947,780 and $2,063,212 for the second and third quarters of 1990, respectively.

For the year ended Aug. 31, 1990, the company realized a net loss of $(850,464), or ($.58) per share on revenues of $8,545,440. For the previous year, HEI had recorded a net loss of $(978,144), or ($.63) per share on revenues of $8,293,683.

Eugene Courtney, HEI president since June 1990, stated that the company believes it can operate at a profit in fiscal 1991, having significantly reduced its expense levels and refocused operations on its base business in thick film hybrid microelectronics. "The cash flow from operations in our 1991 plan should be sufficient to cover our obligations on long term debt, some additional capital equipment, and other operating needs, including supporting vendor payables at current levels." "But," said Courtney, "we may need additional funds to reduce supplier obligations to a level that is more comfortable for both HEI and our vendors, who have worked so well with us over the past several months. The purpose of a shareholder's rights offering, should we proceed, is to do just that." Courtney added that the company is presently engaged in negotiating a renewal of its loan agreement, and expects to have that resolved by the end of December 1990.

HEI Inc. is a Minnesota-based company specializing in ultra- miniature microelectronic packaging and high technology peripheral products incorporating microelectronics. The company's stock trades on the NASDAQ/National Market System under the symbol HEII.

He attributed the earnings increase to the above items and also the trend in the contract security business toward the higher-margin service provided by its Custom Protection Division, overhead cost control efforts at the Corporate level, and reduced interest expenses.

The Wackenhut Corporation is one of the world's largest security and investigative organizations and has diversified its service offerings to the operation and management of jails and prisons, facility management, and related services to commercial and government clients.

HIGHLAND PARK, MICH (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Steve Klein, marketing executive for Jeep(R)/Eagle Division of Chrysler Corporation (NYSE: C), was named chairman of the board of the newly formed Tread Lightly, Inc., a non-profit educational organization.

Tread Lightly, Inc. unites public and private groups in a major education program to promote environmentally responsible use of public and private lands. The U.S. Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management joined publishers, manufacturers, retailers, environmental and user groups in a recent signing ceremony in Washington, D.C., formally establishing the new organization.

"There is a real need for government and business to get together to educate everyone on the need to put the environment as our top priority," Klein said. "If the environment is not first, we may be one of the last generations to enjoy it."

The use of public lands has increased substantially recently and so has the abuse. Consequently, more than 40 percent of the available forest lands in the United States have been closed to recreational users in the past several years.

"Education of responsible use of the land has become a growing concern and the Tread Lightly! program provides an alternative to restricting recreational use assuring continued access to our natural resources for future generations," Klein added.

The Tread Lightly! program was started by the U.S. Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management three years ago and the new, non- profit corporation is evolving from that program.

The Jeep/Eagle Division was the first automotive manufacturer to join the Tread Lightly! program in 1987. This decision was an extension of its involvement with conservation programs which began in 1953 when American Motors had the Conservation Awards.

NORFOLK, VA (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Philip Morris Companies, Inc., the world's largest producer of consumer packaged goods, joined the United Service Organizations (USO) today in announcing the initiation of "Operation Oasis," a project that will send 100,000 Oasis Packages to troops stationed in the Persian Gulf region.

These packages, which will be distributed to the "front line" troops of Operation Desert Shield, consist of duffel bags stuffed with a variety of products donated by Philip Morris and several other American companies. Philip Morris, on behalf of the USO, also coordinated the effort of collecting, packaging, and shipping the packages to the troops.

"Philip Morris has a long history of supporting our nation's Armed Forces and has, over the years, been a major contributor to a variety of USO projects, including the refurbishing of four USO centers worldwide." said John Kochevar, director, Issues Management, Philip Morris Companies Inc.

"That's why, shortly after the deployment of American troops to the Persian Gulf, Philip Morris approached the USO as to how our company as a whole or as individual operating units could help with their efforts in the Middle East."

In addition to managing many of the details of Operation Oasis, the Philip Morris family of companies was a major contributor of products to the Oasis Packages. The troops of Operation Desert Shield, for example, will enjoy several items contributed by Kraft General Foods, the multinational food business of Philip Morris.

Products donated to Operation Oasis include two-quart envelopes of pre-sweetened Kool-Aid powdered soft drink; 8-packs of the Suisse Mocha flavor General Foods International Coffees; boxes of cereal by Post Cereals; Tombstone BeefSticks; and 15-packs of coffee from the Maxwell House Coffee Company. "We know that being stationed in the desert is no one's idea of 'fun in the sun' and hopefully the products included in the USO Oasis Packages will help make our men and women in uniform more comfortable while they are so far away from home," Kochevar said. "Philip Morris commends the USO for its efforts on behalf of our nation's military and is proud to have had the opportunity to contribute to a project as important as Operation Oasis."

MIDDLETOWN, PA (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Homestead Holding Corp. (NASDAQ: HMSD) today announced that it expects to record a significant charge to operations in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990, ending Dec. 31, 1990, due to significant write-downs of the value of certain real estate ventures involving wholly owned subsidiaries of Homestead Savings Association, as well as increases in the association's reserves for possible loan losses.

The company is reviewing the association's loan portfolio and real estate investments in conjunction with an examination presently being conducted by regulatory authorities and because of the effect of overall economic conditions on real estate investments. This will not have any effect on deposits which remain fully insured to the full extent of the law by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. While the company said it feels that it would be premature to project the exact amount of the charge or its effect on the company's results of operations, the high level of assets tentatively identified by the regulators for classification would, if classified, have a material adverse effect on the association's operating results and financial condition. The significant increase in reserves will likely result in the association's non-compliance with one or more of its regulatory capital requirements.

At Sept. 30, 1990, the association had tangible and core capital, as defined, of $13.1 million or 5.11 percent of adjusted total assets, compared with respective requirements of 1.5 percent and 3 percent. Risk based capital was $15.5 million or 7.19 percent of risk weighted assets, compared to a 6.4 percent requirement. However, the company said it believes it is likely that it will not meet one or more of its capital requirements on or prior to Dec. 31, 1990. In the event that a savings association does not meet any one of its regulatory capital requirements, it would be required to file a capital plan with the Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS). If a capital plan is not approved by the OTS, a savings association may be required to enter into a consent agreement or other form of agreement with the OTS which, among other things, could severely impact future operations.

The company previously announced on Sept. 21, 1990, that in connection with the association's ongoing examination, it had received supervisory directives from the Pennsylvania Department of Banking and the Pittsburgh District of the OTS which limits the growth of the association during any fiscal quarter. In addition, the directives established restrictions on certain aspects of the association's operations including, among other things, limitations on commercial real estate, business and real estate development lending and prohibits the payment of dividends. The association's business is otherwise being conducted as usual.

Homestead Holding Corp. is the holding company for Homestead Savings Association. Founded in 1920, the association operates four full- service branches in central Pennsylvania.

LARGO, FL (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The Nokia Group, a worldwide telecommunications technology pioneer, has reported a 36.7 percent increase in profits for the first eight months of 1990 on net sales of $3.791 billion.

Earnings for the first eight months total $179.2 million compared with $131.1 million a year ago. Earnings per share totaled 82 cents during the 1990 period compared with 47 cents a year earlier.

Nokia Group's net sales were virtually constant in U.S. currency, increasing from $3.733 billion a year earlier (FIM 13.937 billion in January-August 1990 compared with FIM 13.726 billion in January-August 1989).

Nokia Mobile Phones, with U.S. operations headquartered in Largo, Fla., showed a 58.7 percent net sales increase from January through August 1990 compared with a year earlier, increasing to $408.2 million from $257 million in consolidated net sales worldwide.

Nokia said its economic outlook for the balance of the year will remain constant with last year.

In its mobile phone business, Nokia said production has been increased substantially with its new Nokia Cityman 100 pocket telephone showing significant success in Europe and the Far East. In May, Nokia was awarded a $16.3 million contract for pocket phones in Thailand. The Italian telecoms authority, SIP, also placed a substantial follow-up order for pocket phones.

A new handportable phone -- the PT612 -- was launched in the U.S. market last month. Nokia will sell more pagers in 1990 than in any previous year, with sales especially strong in the United States, Sweden and France. Central Europe pager sales have been accelerating, especially in Hungary, Nokia reported.

During the first nine months of this year, Nokia Telecommunications results were stable and the positive trend in Nokia Consumer Electronics begun in the last third of 1989 continued. Nokia Consumer Electronics results traditionally are concentrated in the final third of the year due to seasonality of that market segment. Nokia Data, showing weaker results, is undergoing a major revision to improve profitability, the company said. Nokia Cable and Machinery business group results were stable compared with a year ago, and Basic Industries reported slightly lower results when structural changes were accounted for. Sales in both Cable and Machinery, and Basic Industries have improved.

Liquidity remained good, totaling $843 million Nokia reported. Nokia, Finland's largest publicly traded industrial enterprise, employs 37,500 people worldwide. It has 160 subsidiaries in Finland and abroad, and has manufacturing facilities in 15 countries including the United States.

Nokia shares are listed in Helskini, Stockholm, London, Paris and and Frankfurt. In the U.S. shares can be purchased through the ADR program.

BUFFALO, NY (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Pratt & Lambert, Inc. (AMEX: PM) today reported third-quarter net sales of $62,564,000, down slightly from $63,046,000 in 1989. Net income for the period was $2,239,000, an increase of 13.3 percent from $1,976,000 reported last year. Earnings per share increased 18.2 percent to 39 cents from 33 cents in 1989, calculated on approximately 5 percent fewer average shares outstanding in the 1990 period, due to stock acquired under a repurchase program announced in September 1989.

For the nine month ended Sept. 30, net sales were $187,368,000, compared with $189,117,000 last year. Net income declined 9.8 percent to $5,276,000 from $5,852,000 in 1989. Earnings per share were down 4.2 percent to 91 cents from 95 cents a year ago. Average shares outstanding in the first nine months of 1990 and 1989 were 5,741,041 and 6,061,831, respectively.

R.D. Stevens Jr., chairman of the paint, coatings and adhesives manufacturer, said that the third-quarter earnings gain primarily reflected successful cost containment efforts and price adjustments. "Despite soft demand in several markets, improved profit margins were apparent in nearly all product categories comprising our lines of architectural finishes, industrial and specialty products, thereby further narrowing the year-to-date earnings shortfall from 1989," he added.

According to Pratt & Lambert's president, J.J. Castiglia, the favorable expense comparison in the third quarter was largely the result of more effective utilization of the company's resources. "Steps to redeploy and consolidate responsibility for various sales and manufacturing functions are beginning to bear fruit," he added.

Castiglia also noted that, although raw material costs in 1990 had stabilized, recent events in the Persian Gulf have created uncertainty in the market for oil-related materials. "As a means to recover cost increases associated with the petroleum situation, we are applying surcharges to the prices of products that contain vulnerable materials," he noted.

While the company's outlook continues to be positive, Stevens said that the industry faces a number of domestic economic variables that did not exist earlier this year; "We have, nevertheless, attempted to prepare ourselves for contingencies that may arise."

NEW YORK (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The Hallwood Group Incorporated (NYSE: HWG) today reported results for the fiscal fourth quarter and year ended July 31.

Revenue for the quarter was $22.4 million, compared to $15.8 million a year ago. The net loss for the quarter was $4.5 million, or 74 cents per share, against a loss of $1.8 million, or 33 cents per share, in the 1989 quarter.

For the year, revenue was $83.7 million, including a full year of textile products operations, vs. $30.6 million the year before. The net loss for 1990 was $4.9 million, or 82 cents per share. In 1989 the net loss was $11.4 million or $2.38 per share.

Following is a discussion of a full-year performance: Financial services operations earned $1.3 million on revenue of $4.3 million, including $3.7 million of fees primarily for consulting services and credit facilities to affiliated companies. Financial services revenues also included interest and discounts from mortgage loans and income or loss from investments in affiliates. In 1989, financial services lost $11.7 million on revenues of $5.4 million, primarily due to an $11.6 million write-off of its investment in Alliance Bancorporation.

Boosted by rentals from the completed office-retail property in the United Kingdom and the recently acquired Holiday Inn-Lido Beach Hotel in Sarasota, Fla., real estate revenues increased to $4.8 million from $2.1 million in 1989. Operating expenses, interest expenses and depreciation associated with these properties, however, reduced performance of real estate operations to a loss of $802,000, compared to a loss of $169,000 in 1989.

For the first full year of textile products operations, revenue was $70.5 million, and the business produced $722,000 in pre-tax earnings during 1990.

Hallwood Energy Corporation, in which Hallwood owned a 38 percent equity interest for the first nine months of fiscal 1990 then increased its stake to 51 percent, contributed $2.4 million to Hallwood's revenues. After administrative and other expenses incurred in acquiring and consolidating interests in a number of oil and gas limited partnerships, Hallwood Energy achieved a profit of $43,000.

Quality fashion for women's changing roles is a key element of 30 pages of Sears advertising, with products and services as well as apparel for diversified lifestyles.

Mailed to Time's paid circulation of four million at the same time as the regular weekly magazine, the issue is a single-focus editorial publication undertaken by Time.

"We recognize a woman's changing needs and we're changing to meet those needs " said Matthew A. Howard, senior vice president, marketing, Sears Merchandise Group. "Women are a major force in the marketplace and we want to show the female shopper that Sears is relevant to her and to her lifestyle."

Louis A. Weil III, U.S. publisher of Time magazine, emphasized the uniqueness of the special issue. "Cover to cover, the publication deals solely with women's issues in our regular sections - Nation and World, On the Job, Family and Behavior." It is estimated by Weil that the issue, available at newsstands will be read by more than 23 million Americans.

Fashion emphasis by Sears in the special issue is appropriate to its new power format strategy of developing superstores-within-stores and including numerous brands. The Women's Store is one of the focused businesses developing nationwide within Sears stores. It offers casual, formal and office attire as well as shoes, hosiery, and accessories.

In addition to world-class models, six women who help guide and implement fashion direction at Sears are featured in the Time issue. They include two national merchandise managers, a buyer, a divisional merchandise manager, a regional business manager and a store manager.

"Sears new fashion philosophy makes shopping easier for women," said Lee Hogan Cass, national fashion merchandise director for Sears. "There's more careful selection and more month-to-month, season-to-season focus on the newest, most-becoming colors - the best looks edited from the market or developed by Sears."

Involvement by women in diverse interests is part of the magazine's "new woman" message. Sears Merchandise Group businesses represented in the special issue include Brand Central for home appliances and electronics, Craftsman/Home and Yard Center for home improvements, Homelife for home fashions and fine furniture, and the Tire and Auto Center.

WORCESTER, MA (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Alpha-Beta Technology, Inc. has been awarded a patent by the U.S. Patent & Trademark Office for Fibercel(tm), its yeast-derived dietary fiber. Two different forms of Fibercel have demonstrated significant commercial potential: one as a drug to lower cholesterol, and another as a fat substitute in foods.

"The patent provides us with an extremely strong competitive position as we move forward to commercialize Fibercel," said Spiros Jamas, Sc.D., president of Alpha-Beta and a co-inventor on the patent.

"Our development work to date indicates that Fibercel combines a high level of cholesterol-lowering activity and the implied safety of natural fibers with important advantages in palatability and formulation." Fibercel is currently undergoing preclinical development for the pharmaceutical application and food formulation studies for use as a fat substitute.

Dr. Jamas added, "The patent is part of Alpha-Beta's growing portfolio of patents covering the company's products and technology based on carbohydrate engineering." Currently, Alpha-Beta owns or has exclusive rights to three issued and 14 pending U.S. patents.

The patent (U.S. Patent No. 4,962,094) covers the dietary and cholesterol-lowering applications of complex carbohydrates, called whole beta-glucans, derived from yeast. Fibercel consists of highly purified whole beta-glucans, which are the primary structural components of the yeast cell wall.

Related glucans are the cholesterol-lowering components of dietary fibers such as oat bran and psyllium. However, Fibercel contains approximately 90 percent beta-glucan compared with eight to ten percent in oat bran.

In addition to Dr. Jamas, the co-inventors are D. Davidson Easson Jr., executive vice president of Alpha-Beta, and Bruce R. Bistrian, M.D./Ph.D., associate professor of medicine and attending physician at the Cancer Research Institute, New England Deaconess Hospital, Harvard Medical School.

Alpha-Beta Technology, Inc. is developing patentable carbohydrate-based products for the health care industry through the application of carbohydrate engineering.

The company's major products in development include Fibercel, a cholesterol-lowering agent and fat substitute, Betafectin(tm) for the treatment of hospital infections, and Adjuvax(tm), a novel vaccine adjuvant and delivery vehicle. Net cash provided by continuing operations was $22.2 million, compared with $41.0 million in last year's third quarter.

For the nine months, net revenues were $991.8 million, compared with $1.0 billion in the first nine months of 1989. Operating income for the nine months was $17.0 million, compared with $50.6 million for the same period last year. The company incurred a net loss of $53.2 million for the nine months, compared with a loss of $27.6 million during last year's first nine months. This year's results included a gain of $6.9 million from open-market debt purchases, while last year's results for the nine months included a gain of $11.3 million from debt purchases. Net cash provided by continuing operations was $28.9 million, compared with $53.5 million last year.

Peter C. Browning, newly-elected president and chief executive officer, said that the declines in net revenues, operating income, and net cash provided by continuing operations, and the increase in net loss resulted primarily from a 7 percent decrease in average wallboard prices, compared with the same period last year. Browning also noted that billings by The Austin Company, though down slightly from last year's third quarter, remain near record levels.

Earlier today, National Gypsum and its parent, privately-held Aancor Holdings, Inc., announced that they had filed on Oct. 28, 1990, voluntary petitions for protection under Chapter 11 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Northern District of Texas, Dallas Division. The Austin Company, a wholly-owned subsidiary of National Gypsum, was not included in the filing.

COLUMBIA, MD. (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The Ryland Group, Inc. (NYSE: RYL) today reported a decline in earnings for the third quarter of 1990.

Net earnings for the quarter were $5.8 million, a 47 percent decrease compared to 1989's third quarter. Primary earnings per share or the third quarter were $.41 (fully diluted: $.38) compared to $.80 (fully diluted: $.73) in 1989.

Consolidated revenues for the third quarter were $334.1 million, a 9 percent decrease from the same period last year.

Ryland Building Company settled 2,113 homes during the third quarter of 1990, a 14 percent decrease from the same period last year.

New orders decreased 35 percent from 1989's third quarter. The dollar volume of outstanding contracts decreased 35 percent compared to Sept. 30, 1989.

Revenues for the financial services segment increased 32 percent, primarily due to increases in mortgage and bond servicing and favorable interest rate spreads.

"We recognize that we must operate our business successfully in what are currently very changeable times," said Ryland Chairman and CEO C.E. "Ted" Peck. "Although we do not look for a turnaround in the near future, we believe that our conservative operating and financial strategies, including our regional diversification and our limited investment in land, will serve us well in the long term."

Peck added that Roger W. Schipke, currently president of The Ryland Group, has taken on full responsibility for the company's operations. Schipke will be named Ryland's chief executive officer at year-end.

The Ryland Group, one of the nation's largest homebuilders, is headquartered in Columbia, Md.

DES MOINES, IOWA (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - John E. Evans, Allied Group, Inc. (NASDAQ: ALGR) board chairman and president, today announced third quarter fully diluted earnings per share of $0.48 compared with $0.44 for the three months ended Sept. 30, 1989. "Though year-to-date earnings per share were down to $1.12 from $1.43 because of unprecedented storm losses, we were pleased with our third quarter performance," stated Evans.

Allied Group, Inc., a regional holding company which generates 73 percent of its revenues through property-casualty subsidiaries, was indeed hard hit by storms. The associated losses net of reinsurance for the Allied pool totaled $21.4 million by Sept. 30, 1990, reducing earnings per share by $1.11. In the first nine months of 1989, storm claims cost only $0.30 per share.

The Allied pool's statutory combined ratio, the measure which weighs premiums against losses and expenses to quantify underwriting profitability, was 108.0 year-to-date. The company's share of the underwriting loss (on a generally accepted accounting principles basis) for the third quarter alone was $3.9 million.

Evans attributed improved quarterly earnings per share to the following: -- Completion of a restructuring earlier this quarter lowered the number of weighted average shares and allowed more favorable rates for financing the employees stock ownership plan.

-- The $761,000 reserve held to cover potential liability under California's Proposition 103 was eliminated. Though calculations at the beginning of the year indicated the company owed no rollbacks, the reserve was held until September as protection against a court challenge of the regulation on which the calculations were based.

-- The company's mortgage subsidiary and data processing segment generated significant operating income.

Revenues from continuing operations for the third quarter were $77.8 million, up 44 percent from the same quarter a year ago. The major contributors were property-casualty premiums and investment income. Both were enhanced by the January 1990 increase in the property-casualty subsidiaries' participation in the Allied pool to 53 percent up from last year's 41 percent.

Third quarter property-casualty earned premiums were up 38 percent to $50.2 million. Direct written premiums for the entire pool were up 8 percent.

Investment income was $6.0 million, up 70 percent from third quarter, 1989. The jump was due primarily to the increase in invested assets resulting from the pooling change. As of Sept. 30, invested assets totaled $292.1 million, up from $84.9 million from year-end 1989.

The company's net income from continuing operations for the quarter was $3.4 million; for the nine months it was $6.1 million. In 1989, third quarter net income was $2.2 million, and nine-month net income was $7.5 million.

"Fully diluted book value per share is a key measure of financial soundness of any public insurance company," said Evans. At Sept. 30, Allied Group, Inc.'s book value was $18.46, up $1.52 from midyear and $1.88 from year-end.

SANTA ANA, CA (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Ingram Micro D announced record third quarter sales for the period ending Sept. 30, 1990. For the third quarter, the company had sales of $367,000,000, a 54 percent increase over the third quarter of 1989, when Ingram Micro D achieved sales of $238,900,000.

For the first three quarters of the 1990 calendar year, Ingram Micro D's sales were $1,026,300,000, representing a 45 percent increase over the same period for 1989 when sales were $709,900,000.

Chip Lacy, chairman and chief executive officer, said, "Our company executed nearly flawlessly in the third quarter. We've never served our reseller customers better. As a result of this exceptional execution, resellers have rewarded us with a substantial increase in business."

"Sales were very strong in both hardware and software segments of our business " said David Dukes, president and chief operating officer. "Domestically our third quarter sales grew 46 percent over the last year to give Ingram Micro D approximately a 25 percent market share of all products sold through U.S. microcomputer distributors."

Finally, Lacy noted, "If there is an industry slowdown in progress, IMD has not experienced it. The company has captured marketshare around the world, and its growth has more than doubled industry growth rates both domestically and internationally."

The microcomputer distribution business has grown faster than the microcomputer market in general worldwide, as both vendors and resellers opt for the logistical comfort provided by distributors. The U.S. distribution market has grown at least 20 percent over the past quarter, and the international market has experienced a higher rate of growth.

Ingram Micro D's management continues to be optimistic about sales for the remainder of the calendar year and into 1991 because of the flow of new product into the marketplace and the underlying sales strength observed in the past quarter.

Though a private company, Ingram Micro D follows the practice of making its quarterly sales results public to assist vendors and the financial community in tracking the growth of the microcomputer marketplace.

Ingram Micro D Inc. is the world's largest distributor of microcomputer hardware, software, peripherals, and accessories, marketing and distributing more than 8,000 products from over 500 of the world's top developers.

DALLAS (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - The LTV Corporation today reported a $30.4 million net loss for the third quarter of 1990, compared with net income of $85.7 million in the third quarter of last year.

A significant decline in operating results, lower interest earnings and a reduction in other income contributed to the net loss. The year- earlier quarter included $42 million of nonrecurring other income from an investment in a stainless steel producing company, as well as higher interest income. LTV sold its investment in this company in the second quarter of 1990.

LTV's third quarter operating loss was $33.9 million, compared with operating income of $37.4 million in the same period of 1989. The operating loss reflected lower results at LTV Steel caused by higher labor, retiree health care benefits and other manufacturing costs, and lower average selling prices and volume. In addition, LTV's Sierra Research Division, an electronics and avionics unit of the missiles and electronics group, experienced increases in projected costs on a number of fixed-price contracts.

Consolidated third quarter sales declined to $1.45 billion from $1.51 billion a year earlier. Sales declines in the missiles and electronics and the steel groups were partially offset by increased sales at the aircraft products and energy products groups.

For the first nine months of 1990, LTV's net income was $90.4 million, compared with $192.6 million in the same period of 1989. Operating income declined to $47.4 million from $129.6 million, principally reflecting higher costs at LTV Steel and increases in projected costs on certain fixed-price contracts at Sierra Research. The prior year also included a special charge of $30 million for the write-down of costs associated with a facility designed to produce composite materials. Interest income in 1990 declined by $13.2 million, reflecting both lower invested cash balances and interest rates.

Consolidated sales for the first nine months of 1990 decreased to $4.53 billion from $4.78 billion in the 1989 period. Steel group sales declined by $156 million, and missiles and electronics group sales decreased by $179 million.

LTV's financial results during the first nine months of 1990 continued to benefit from the deferral of interest, pension and other costs while the company operates under the protection of Chapter 11. These benefits have been partially offset by the effect of LTV's early adoption in 1988 of a new accounting standard which recognizes the liability and related expenses for postemployment medical and life insurance obligations on an accrual basis. This standard is expected to be required of all companies commencing in 1993, however, at present LTV is the only major steel or aerospace company following this practice.

As of Sept. 30, LTV's cash and cash equivalents totaled $971 million, compared with $1.02 billion at the end of 1989. The company had available credit of approximately $472 million under revolving bank agreements.

LTV is a diversified manufacturing company involved in steel, aerospace/defense and energy products.

FREMONT, CA (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Grid Systems today announced the availability of a new light pen that lets users working on VGA-compatible desktop PCs to enter data with a light pen and share applications developed for field use with the GridPad(R) handheld computer. The GridPad, a clipboard-sized computer with no keyboard, is the only American-made computer that recognizes handwriting.

The FT-1210 and FT-1215 Light Pen packages, including interface board and GridPen interface software, are manufactured by FTG Data Systems of Stanton, Calif.

"Now, a company's internal personnel using the new light pen have the same flexible data entry capabilities as do their people using GridPad in the field " said Ken Dulaney, Grid's director of advanced systems marketing.

"In addition," noted Dulaney, "software developers designing GridPad applications now can work in exactly the same computing environment as their users. Knowing first hand how an end user will interact with an application can significantly improve the overall development effort."

The GridPad pen-and-display computer, introduced in 1989, provides fast and accurate data entry capabilities to those performing functions that require time-critical information gathering in an outdoor or mobile environment.

Applications typically appear as graphical "forms" on the screen, requiring quick selection on multiple-choice options and some level of handwritten data entry. The pen allows users to select options by touching the appropriate graphical element and to enter other data by writing it out on the screen.

Software developers, or Grid Marketing Partners, are currently using the Application Programming Interface (API) provided by Grid to develop applications for such areas as market research surveys, government and industry safety inspections, police accident reports and product inventory management.

"Broadening personal computer applications requires a variety of input and output devices as well as a variety of computing platforms," commented Donna Clark, vice president of marketing and sales of FTG Data Systems. "We designed the FT-1210 and FT-1215 packages to provide an application bridge, letting companies take advantage of GridPad's flexibility while maximizing their investment in 286 and 386-based computers.

KANSAS CITY, MO (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - UtiliCorp United (NYSE: UCU) announced today that third quarter net income and primary earnings per common share declined compared with the 1989 period.

UtiliCorp remains on target, however, to achieve record financial results for 1990.

For the third quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990, UtiliCorp reported net income of $10.1 million, compared to $11.3 million in the 1989 period and primary earnings per share of $.35, compared with $.45 in last year's quarter. Operating revenues were $147 million, versus $140 million in the prior third period.

Average common shares outstanding increased from 20.8 million in last year's third quarter to 23.6 million in this year's period. The increase is primarily due to a public offering of 2 million new shares in December 1989.

For the nine-month period this year, net income was $37.9 million and earnings per share were $1.37, compared to net income of $34.4 million and earnings per share of $1.48 in the same period last year. Operating revenues for the first nine months of this year were $574 million, versus $495 million in last year's nine-month period.

Utilicorp Chairman and President Richard C. Green Jr. attributed the decline in third quarter results to the need for electric rate relief at the company's Missouri Public Service division. However, a record year still is anticipated in part because of the favorable resolution of separate electric and gas rate increase requests at Missouri Public Service. Significantly higher earnings contributions from the company's PSI subsidiary and a full year of contributions from UtiliCorp's Michigan Gas Utilities division also should help achieve the record, Green said. Michigan Gas Utilities was acquired in May 1989.

"Once again we're seeing tangible benefits from our diversification strategy," Green said. "We anticipate a record fourth quarter and a third straight record year primarily because of our varied sources of earnings."

On Oct. 5, UtiliCorp received an order from the Missouri Public Service Commission authorizing an electric rate increase of $12.4 million annually, or 6.5 percent. The order was in response to a request to increase electric rates by $25.5 million annually.

On Oct. 23, the Missouri commission authorized a gas rate increase of $4 million annually, or 14.1 percent. The order was in response to a request to increase gas rates by $4.7 million annually.

UtiliCorp's PSI subsidiary is expected to contribute approximately 20 percent of UtiliCorp's total net income this year. In 1989, PSI contributed $5.3 million, or 11 percent of UtiliCorp's total net income.

Based in Kansas City, UtiliCorp provides electric and gas service to 820,000 customers located in eight states and in British Columbia.

CLEVELAND (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - BP America today responded to recent media stories regarding cuts in its Cleveland staff, and estimated that the number of employees expected to be terminated in coming months as a result of Project 1990, currently addressing service and support efficiencies, will be well below a hundred.

"Recent stories have relied heavily on rumors and on unidentified and apparently uninformed employees," said BP spokesperson George Jurkowich. "Wild and unsubstantiated guesswork about numbers to be cut, carried in the media, have not only missed the mark, but have been irresponsible," he said.

A project team has been examining the staffing levels and structure of the BP America corporate staff since early August. The team's recommendation to senior management is expected to include the decentralization of many business services to the businesses they support. As a result, a number of employees at corporate staff will be transferred to business units.

"The recommendations have not yet been presented," said Jurkowich. "So we cannot be certain of final outcomes, but the range of cuts implied by careless reporting have clearly been highly exaggerated."

Other reports that BP is relocating its headquarters are without foundation, said the BP spokesperson.

TEMPLE, TX (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Texas Instruments (NYSE: TXN) today announced the microLaser XL, a 16 page per minute (ppm) laser printer, which expands the microLaser(TM) family and makes affordable PostScript(R) printing available to high-volume users. With a non-PostScript model priced at only $3,449, and an entry-level PostScript model priced at $3,999, the microLaser XL significantly lowers the price threshhold for high-performance page printers. The microLaser XL provides many of the most popular features of TI's microLaser family -- a small footprint, compatibility with industry standards, and easy upgradeabiity -- in a printer that has been optimized for power users and departmental printing.

Three microLaser XL models are available. The standard microLaser XL comes with Hewlett-Packard (H-P) LaserJet(R) Series II emulation. The microLaser XL PS17 features the Adobe PostScript interpreter and 17 scalable PostScript fonts, while the microLaser XL PS35 comes with 35 PostScript fonts. The PostScript models use Adobe ATM(TM) font rendering technology for improved print quality and faster throughput.

"The microLaser XL sets a new standard in the quest for affordable PostScript power and compact size in a departmental page printer," said Aubrey Brickhouse manager of printer marketing for the peripheral products division of TI's information technology group. "With its desktop size, the microLaser XL is smaller than most personal laser printers, yet it easily handles high-volume printing in applications such as word processing, desktop publishing, data processing and forms generation.

"The microLaser XL complements TI's other microLaser printers, which are designed for personal desktop use, and opens up new market opportunities for TI's growing base of dealers and distributors," Brickhouse continued.

The newest addition to the microLaser family has the same modular design that allows users to easily upgrade from LaserJet Series II emulation to the PostScript page description language. Users can start with the standard microLaser XL and then add PostScript, giving them access to the growing library of Adobe PostScript downloadable fonts and Post Script-compatible software applications. Upgrade boards such as PostScript are piggybacked directly onto the microLaser XL controller board; no tools are required. The microLaser XL controller design uses proprietary TI semiconductor technology which allows users to switch back and forth between PostScript and the H-P printer command language (PCL), with no loss of data and without turning off the printer.

The microLaser XL models have a print speed of 16 ppm and are conservatively rated for an average of 25,000 pages per month. The standard microLaser XL comes with .5 megabytes of random access memory (RAM), while the PostScript models have 1.5 megabytes of RAM. Memory can be expanded in one megabyte increments to a total of 4.5 megabytes.

With a footprint of only 15.8" wide x 16.6" deep x 10.8" high, the microLaser XL takes up far less space than other high-speed page printers. Even the standard 250-sheet input drawer tucks inside the printer to conserve desk space. The microLaser's versatile paper handling capabilities provide maximum flexibility for workgroups with diverse printing needs, accommodating a variety of paper sizes and types: letter, legal, half-letter, A4, B5, executive, transparencies, invoices and labels. An optional 500-sheet input paper feeder can be added, giving the microLaser XL the capacity to print 750 pages without refilling. A 70-envelope feeder is also optional.

CHICAGO (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - FNW Bancorp (NASDAQ: FNWB) today announced that it has elected to add $1,200,000 to its provisions for potential loan losses during the current quarter. The added provision is expected to reduce 1990 net income by $.09 cents per share; down from the company's original 1990 projection of $1.12 per share to $1.03 per share.

Harold R. Pehlke, president and chief executive officer of the eight-bank holding company, stated, "The slowing national economy prompted us to take an even more conservative stance in evaluating potential problems in our loan portfolio. This is a precautionary measure to protect against loan agreements which could be affected by potential recession. After a careful loan-by-loan review of all potential problem loans, the Board of Directors recommended the provision increase.

"In staying abreast of general economic conditions in our suburban markets, we have found some retailers are under added pressure at the moment. Of the ten loans we elected to recategorize as potential problems, three are retail businesses -- representing 40 percent of the potential problem loan balances; three are commercial real estate developments -- or 33 percent of the outstanding problem loans; two are in the health service industry -- 15 percent; one is in manufacturing -- 6 percent; and one is an automobile dealer -- 6 percent," Pehlke elaborated.

The company's total provision for possible loan losses will increase to $3.8 million, up from $2.8 million for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989.

Despite the added precautionary expense, 1990 is anticipated to be a record earnings year for the holding company -- predicted to be 3 percent ahead of last year's record $13.8 million in net income, or $1 a share.

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - EDS' State Operations Division today announced a contract to design, develop, implement and manage an Automated Fingerprint Image Reporting and Match System (AFIRM) for the Los Angeles County Department of Public Social Services.

The five-year contract is the nation's first non-law enforcement use of an automated fingerprint matching system. AFIRM is expected to reduce costs by $1.6 million annually and offer improved service to welfare recipients.

AFIRM replaces traditional fingerprinting used to verify client eligibility for Los Angeles County's General Relief Program. Variations on AFIRM have already revolutionized criminal investigation by increasing the speed of matching fingerprints.

AFIRM will use an ink-free image scanning device to aid in the effective administration of general assistance benefits. Because of this process, prospective program beneficiaries no longer must be fingerprinted with ink.

"EDS continues to use creative applications of information technology to help Los Angeles County maintain an effective program while reducing costs," said Merv Forney, vice president of EDS' State Operations Division based in Los Angeles.

The following team industry leaders joined EDS in developing AFIRM: Hewlett-Packard Company (HP) will provide workstations, and Cogent Systems Inc., the ID software. EDS will provide the systems integration and management expertise to develop a custom-designed system that meets the county's needs.

"Los Angeles County is on the leading edge in providing automated verification " said Forney. "Soon we will see systems based on AFIRM being used in agencies and institutions worldwide."

EDS, based in North America and with operations in 27 countries, is the world leader in providing information technology services. Stock reflecting EDS' performance is traded on the New York Stock Exchange under the symbol GME. EDS reported revenues of $5.5 billion in 1989.

Net income was $140,486, or 8 cents per share, compared to $2,409, or 0 cents per share in the third quarter of 1989.

For the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990, sales totalled $9,273,039, up 12 percent or $992,753 from the same period one year ago. Net earnings were $275,955, or 15 cents per share, compared to the net loss of $110,884, or 6 cents per share loss from the comparable 1989 period.

Gross margins were 53.1 percent, contrasted to 56.4 percent for the same quarter in 1989. "As noted at the end of the second quarter, our gross margin should improve as we begin to realize the benefits of a third quarter price increase," Anderson continued. "We are confident that our improvements in net pricing, expanding market share and overall productivity improvements will further contribute to continued growth."

PORTLAND (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - NERCO Inc. (NYSE: NER) today reported improved financial results for the third quarter of 1990, compared to the same period in 1989 due to higher operating income from the natural resource company's oil and gas and coal segments. The company also reported improved results for the first nine months of 1990.

Net income increased 9 percent to $18.7 million for the three-month period, from $17.1 million in 1989. Quarterly earnings per share increased 4 percent to 48 cents per share, from 46 cents per share in 1989. Approximately 37,3 million shares were outstanding in the third quarter last year, compared to 39 million shares for the same 1990 period.

Consolidated revenues for the third quarter increased 15 percent to $201.1 million, from revenues of $174.5 million in the same 1989 period, primarily as a result of higher coal and oil and gas sales volumes.

For the quarter, operating income was up 15 percent to $40.4 million, from $35.2 million in the third quarter of 1989. The increase was primarily due to increased sales volumes for the coal and oil and gas segments. Average effective sales prices for the company's commodities during the period were mixed, with higher oil and natural gas liquids (NGL) prices, but lower average sales prices for coal, natural gas, and gold for the quarter.

Interest expense for the quarter was higher as a result of acquisitions made earlier in 1990.

According to NERCO President Lawrence E. Heiner, "While prices for natural gas and silver continued to remain soft during the quarter, our sales volumes for coal and oil and gas increased and oil and NGL prices were higher during the period. As a result, our third quarter performance was better than we anticipated last quarter.

"Additionally, if silver prices remain at today's levels, the company's 1990 financial performance will be adversely affected."

Approximately 82 percent of NERCO's common stock is owned by PacifiCorp (NYSE: PPW), a diversified electric utility. NERCO is a major North American natural resource company, producing low-sulfur coal, gas, oil, gold and silver.

ATLANTA (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Scientific-Atlanta Inc. (NYSE: SFA) today reported that sales for the first quarter ended in September were $128.4 million, off 11 percent from the same quarter a year ago, and new orders were $128.9 million, down 13 percent.

Order backlog at the end of the quarter was $197.5 million. Earnings per share were $.25, down 34 percent from the prior year. Net earnings were $5.5 million 37 percent behind the same quarter a year ago. Lower sales, unfavorable product mix, one-time consolidation and severance costs, and higher development costs were offset in part by gains on the sale of a product line, settlement of claims and other income.

The sudden slowdown in cable television industry spending, which was reported at year end, as well as declining capital spending by electronics industry instrumentation customers, accounted for the sales declines and unfavorable product mix. These declines were only partly offset by improvements in Network Systems and other areas of Instrumentation, as well as by actions taken to consolidate and streamline operations.

"Broadband Communications' sales were off sharply," said William E. Johnson, chief executive officer. "In addition to issues of how to effectively deploy new technology and continued regulatory uncertainty, tighter general credit conditions coupled with high cable industry debt leverage are having a significant negative effect on spending decisions. Accordingly, we believe the slowdown will continue during the second half into calendar 1991. This is likely to adversely affect full year results. However, we continue to be confident about the strong underlying fundamentals of the cable industry since a number of factors, including franchise renewals, potential competition, and consumer pressures, suggest the need for future spending."

Network Systems' sales of international satellite systems and very small aperture terminal (VSAT) data networks increased over the prior year. In the international arena, Turner Broadcasting selected the BMAC system to encrypt their news and movie television programming for secure satellite transmission to Latin America. ESPN will also use the BMAC system for transmission of sports programming to Latin America and parts of the Pacific and Asia. Growth in international satellite system sales also continued, including orders for a digital voice satellite system from the Mexican Army and for a 9-meter video earth station from the Cyprus Telecommunications Authority that will be used to access Europe's EUTELESAT satellite. Domestic VSAT successes continued during the quarter with the award of a contract for an automotive dealer network of over 800 sites to Scientific-Atlanta and V-Crest Systems, a computer services subsidiary of Volkswagen of America, Inc. ABC Radio also selected the company's new Spectrum Efficient Digital Audio Technology (SEDAT) system to triple its satellite transmission capacity and send compact disk (CD) quality transmissions to its network affiliates.

PRINCETON, NJ (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Church & Dwight Company, Inc., announced the launch of new Arm & Hammer Dental Care(R) Gel, "the only great-tasting gel dentifrice with dentist-recommended baking soda." The new gel is expected to appeal to consumers who currently use a gel, but want the cleaning and whitening benefits of baking soda.

The gel introduction follows impressive growth in recent months for the brand's other dentifrice products, Arm & Hammer Dental Care toothpaste and tooth powder. According to Information Resources, Inc., the brand's market share was at an all-time high in the last eight weeks, accounting for 6.3 percent of all dentifrice dollar sales in food stores, and surpassing Unilever's Close-Up(R) to become the Number 4 dentifrice brand in the United States.

The new, aqua-colored, translucent gel offers the cool, refreshing mint taste that consumers expect from a gel dentifrice. But only Arm & Hammer Dental Care gel also offers a significant level of baking soda (approximately 30 percent) to provide the "unique clean mouth feeling" described by people who currently brush with Arm & Hammer Dental Care.

"The people who currently use our toothpaste or tooth powder really like the clean feeling that Arm & Hammer Dental Care leaves in their mouth, and now they won't use anything else," said William Egan, president of the Arm & Hammer Division at Church & Dwight. "But gel users, who represent 35 percent of the dentifrice market, prefer a cooler, smoother, more refreshing mint taste when they brush. New Arm & Hammer Dental Care Gel is the baking soda dentifrice for them.

"In 1991, the marketing support behind Arm & Hammer Dental Care will be at its highest level ever," said Egan. The introduction of the new Gel will be supported by national television advertising, and more than 200 million trial-generating coupons will be distributed via newspaper inserts and on-shelf take-one pads. Introductory trade promotions will include allowances on all Arm & Hammer Dental Care items, and pre-packed floor displays for both full size and trial size products.

Dental professionals have long recognized the dentifrice benefits of baking soda. Prior to the introduction of fluoridated toothpastes in 1955, the American Dental Association's Seal of Approval appeared on every box of Arm & Hammer Baking Soda. And the ADA still rates sodium bicarbonate (baking soda) as the least abrasive dentifrice ingredient next to water. Today's state-of-the-art Arm & Hammer Dental Care formulations combine the cleaning and whitening benefits of baking soda with the anti-cavities benefit of sodium fluoride.

New Arm & Hammer Dental Care Gel will be available nationally in supermarkets and drug stores by December 1990. It comes in 2.7 oz., 4.5 oz., and 6.3 oz. full-size tubes, and a 0.9 oz. trial-size tube. Army & Hammer Dental Care Toothpaste is available in a 1 oz. trial size and 3 oz., 5 oz., and 7 oz. full-size tubes. Arm & Hammer Dental Care Tooth Powder is available in a 0.75 oz. trialsize and a 4 oz. full-size flip- top bottle.

STERLING, VA. (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Radiation Systems, Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: RADS), today reported net income of $1,797,000 (33 cents per share) for the three months ended Sept. 30, 1990, an increase of 113 percent over net income of $844,000 (16 cents per share) in the same period in the prior year. Sales were $24.8 million for the three months ended Sept. 30, 1990, an increase of 77 percent over sales of $14.1 million for the same period in the prior year.

Total backlog of unfilled orders on Sept. 30, 1990, was $103.6 million compared to a backlog of $108.0 million on June 30, 1990 and $135.9 million on Sept. 30, 1989.

Richard E. Thomas, chairman and chief executive officer of Radiation Systems, said that he was most pleased about the strong start for this fiscal year, especially after the completion of a record performance last fiscal year. Thomas stated that while usual first quarter performance has been lackluster, he believes that a new trend has been started now that the company has expanded its product lines and developed a number of new markets for its products. Thomas stated further that he was disappointed about the current backlog level. However, he noted that there continues to be delays on the part of customers releasing contracts, but these are not lost and are expected to be booked shortly. Thomas mentioned that Electromechanical Systems Division continues a very strong performance and already booked a contract exceeding $7 million after the close of the first quarter. The Channel One program, he said, continues to progress with nearly 3,800 systems installed as of Sept. 30 1990 and a total of 5,000 plus planned for the Dec. 31, 1990 timeframe. Because of Channel One and other similar project requirements and the strong demand for RSi's other products, Thomas said he remains extremely optimistic about the company's future.

Radiation Systems, Inc., designs, manufactures and installs a broad range of antenna systems for radar, air traffic control, tactical military, satellite earth stations, terrestrial microwave and other specialized uses throughout the world.

MADISON, N.J. (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Schering-Plough Corporation (NYSE: SGP) today released the following:

For the sake of asthmatic patients and their physicians, Schering- Plough Corporation is compelled to alert them to self-serving publicity campaigns by the organized plaintiffs' trial bar that could seriously mislead and harm asthma sufferers taking theophylline, a standard asthma therapy.

Theophylline is an important, well-established treatment in the control of chronic asthma, a serious and potentially life-threatening disease. Asthma affects 10 million Americans and is responsible annually for an estimated 1.2 million emergency room visits and approximately 5,000 deaths.

Asthma is a complex disease requiring individualized treatment. Physicians must have free and unrestricted access to a variety of different agents, with different therapeutic mechanisms -- including theophylline products -- in order to provide optimal treatment for their asthmatic patients. Theophylline has been used and studied as an asthma treatment for nearly 50 years. This wealth of experience is explicitly reflected in theophylline's government-approved labeling, which instructs physicians on its proper use in both adults and children. The instructions emphasize the need to monitor theophylline blood levels and to carefully individualize each patient's dosage to the minimum required to achieve asthmatic control.

Properly used, under physician supervision and in accordance with approved labeling, serious theophylline side effects have been very rare. Schering-Plough's own experience, as the U.S. leader in theophylline therapy, bears this out. Our products have been prescribed approximately 60 times since 1985 alone, and in that time the reported incidence of serious adverse drug events, as defined by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA), has been only 1.3 reports per 100,000 prescriptions. This is a very good and reassuring safety record.

The Association of Trial Lawyers of America (ATLA), under the guise of a consumer protection program, is launching a publicity campaign aimed at alarming asthma patients about theophylline. ATLA is an organization of trial lawyers who file lawsuits on behalf of claimants and plaintiffs while retaining a percentage of any monies gained. ATLA has submitted a letter on theophylline to the FDA and has scheduled a media event to promote its efforts tomorrow in Washington.

Schering-Plough is concerned that ATLA's campaign, combined with newspaper ads by plaintiffs' lawyers soliciting theophylline clients for possible litigation will serve to alarm patients and interfere with physician-patient relationships by overstating and overdramatizing the known risks of theophylline. This kind of campaign has the potential to endanger patients. Should a patient or parent be alarmed into discontinuing critical asthma medications in response to scare messages, severe and even fatal consequences may result. Patients should not be deceived by these lawyers' tactics, but should continue taking their medication as recommended by their physician.

Schering-Plough strongly believes that theophylline is an important prescription therapy for asthma patients. Alarmist and self-serving campaigns, like ATLA's, and newspaper advertisements placed by lawyers soliciting clients, are not in the best interests of the asthma patient.

LANCASTER, Pa. (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Third-quarter financial results announced by Armstrong World Industries, Inc. (NYSE: ACK), today showed that while the company set a new Armstrong record for sales during the period, earnings from continuing businesses and total net earnings slid below 1989 levels in the midst of the current slump in domestic building markets and in the U.S. economy as a whole.

Lower unit sales, competitive pricing pressures and higher costs associated with new production capacity put in place during the past years contributed to the earnings decline.

During the quarter, Armstrong also increased its provision for losses on discontinued businesses by $2.0 million after tax, primarily because of higher than expected claims from pre-existing medical conditions and workmen's compensation, and from costs of operating some of the businesses longer than expected.

For the first nine months of 1990, Armstrong finished ahead of last year's comparable record in the three performance criteria: sales, earnings from continuing businesses, and total net earnings.

In the following comparisons, the sales and earnings from continuing businesses for 1989 have been restated to exclude the results of those businesses sold in 1989 and those sold or planned for disposition this year. The "net earnings" results do include the results of these businesses. (See tables.)

Armstrong released these summaries of its third-quarter 1990 results and the appropriate 1989 comparisons:

-- 1990 net sales for the quarter reached $639.5 million, an increase of nearly 2 percent over the 1989 figure of $629.2 million.

-- 1990 earnings from continuing businesses were $28.3 million, a decrease of 35 percent from the 1989 level of $43.7 million.

-- Earnings per share of common stock from continuing businesses were 63 cents on a primary basis and 59 cents on a fully diluted basis, compared with 1989 levels of 85 cents on a primary basis and 77 cents on a fully diluted basis.

-- Total net earnings were $26.3 million compared with $47.0 million for the like period in 1989 -- a 44 percent decrease.

-- Net earnings per share of common stock were 58 cents on a primary basis and 54 cents on a fully diluted basis, compared with 1989 net earnings per share of 92 cents per share on a primary basis and 83 cents on a fully diluted basis.

The return on average common shareholders' equity was 9.7 percent for the third quarter of 1990 compared with 16.8 percent for the similar period last year.

PHILADELPHIA (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Consolidated Rail Corp. (NYSE: CRR) has announced it has selected the Central Railroad Company of Indianapolis as purchaser of the section of Conrail's Shelbyville Line between Shelbyville, Ind., and Cincinnati, Ohio.

Conrail worked with the Indiana and Ohio Departments of Transportation in making the selection.

Gov. Evan Bayh said, "A successful sale should mean that this important rail corridor will remain in place and operational. The line serves several interests in the area and, with construction of additional spurs, could provide transportation for people and goods in many cities between Shelbyville and Cincinnati. Support for this sale will supply the people of east and southeast Indiana with an important economic development tool. My office, and that of Lieutenant Governor Frank O'Bannon, have turned in many long hours trying to keep this line open."

The sale is subject to continuing negotiations between the two railroads, execution of a sales agreement, and approval by the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC). Conrail said it expects to close the sale during the first half of 1991.

Conrail announced on July 26 that it had put up for sale the 81-mile portion of the line between Shelbyville and Cincinnati in Decatur, Franklin, Ripley and Dearborn counties in Indiana, and Hamilton County in Ohio. Conrail stated at that time that it decided to sell the line as an alternative to the abandonment and dismantlement of the 58.5-mile segment between Shelbyville and Thatcher, Ind., which was authorized by the ICC in 1982.

MILWAUKEE (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Johnson Controls, Inc. (NYSE: JCI) today announced that it ended its 1990 fiscal year on a strong note, with higher sales and income from each of its four businesses in the fourth quarter.

For the fourth quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990, sales increased 12 percent to $1.2 billion from $1.0 billion in the prior year. Operating income increased 45 percent to $72.9 million from $50.2 million in 1989. Net income of $29.0 million in the 1990 quarter was 22 percent higher than the $23.8 million the prior year. Primary earnings per share were $.68 versus 1989's $.57 while fully diluted earnings per share rose to $.65 from $.53 in the 1989 fourth quarter.

The company's battery business is also moving in the right direction, he added saying that the business is starting to attain improved financial returns from the sizeable capital investments it is making in new manufacturing methods and heightened product differentiation.

Pricing in the plastic soft drink container industry remains a concern, Keyes said, however, the company's strategy to emphasize supplying containers for other beverage and food markets should aid both sales and operating margins.

Johnson Controls sales for the full 12 months of 1990 were $4.5 billion, up 22 percent from the $3.7 billion for 1989. Operating income totalled $228 million, 11 percent higher than 1989's $205 million. Net income for 1990 was $92.4 million or 5 percent lower than the prior year's $97.5 million due to higher interest expense, increased miscellaneous expenses substantially related to the costs associated with the insolvency of an insurance carrier, and a higher effective tax rate in 1990. Primary earnings per share were $2.13 versus $2.55 in 1989 while fully diluted earnings per share were $2.05 for 1990, down from $2.42 the prior year.

Controls sales for 1990 totalled $1.7 billion, up 36 percent from $1.3 billion due to the full-year recognition of Pan Am World Services revenue and higher systems and services sales. Operating income was $69.6 million for 1990, up 5 percent from $66.0 million for 1989 as lower international income largely offset domestic gains.

Automotive sales increased 18 percent to $1.4 billion from $1.2 billion for 1989 reflecting higher shipments of automotive seats both in North America and Europe. Improved profitability at new facilities led to operating income reaching $56.3 million, an 18 percent increase over the $47.7 million a year ago.

Battery sales were $728 million, 11 percent above 1989's $659 million. Operating income rose 35 percent to $45.7 million in 1990 from $33.8 million. The increases reflect higher unit shipments, including a including a Canadian acquisition in January 1990, higher lead improved operating efficiencies.

Plastics sales were $669 million for 1990, a 14 percent gain over 1989's $585 million. The increase primarily resulted from sales associated with new European container plants. The company said that domestic pricing pressures resulted in a 2 percent decline in operating income to $56.4 million from 1989's $57.8 million.

SEATTLE (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Sales of $20.580 billion and net earnings of $1.067 billion, or $3.09 per share, for the first nine months of 1990 were reported by Frank Shrontz, Boeing (NYSE: BA) chairman and chief executive officer. Nine months 1989 sales were $15.429 billion and net earnings, before restatement for the effect of adopting a change in accounting for income taxes were $598 million, or $1.73 per share. Including the restatement, nine months 1989 earnings were $896 million, or $2.59 per share.

Sales for the third quarter of 1990 were $7.176 billion with earnings of $378 million, or $1.10 per share, compared with 1989 sales of $6.356 billion, with earnings of $242 million, or 70 cents per share. The 1989 data has also been restated for the 1990 three-for-two stock split.

The increase in net earnings for the third quarter and the first nine months of 1990 compared to the same periods for 1989, excluding the 1989 restatement for the accounting change, is primarily due to increased sales volume and operating margins on commercial transport programs and to higher other income. The above items were partially offset by a higher effective federal income tax rate.

Shrontz stated that although the loss on Boeing's defense and space business in 1990 will be substantial, it is currently projected to be somewhat lower than in 1989. With progress having been made in resolving cost and schedule problems on U.S. Government development and production programs, reduced levels of cost share, and the increased efficiencies resulting from the recent consolidation of defense and space organizations, operating results for the defense and space business should be improved in 1991 and subsequent years.

Shrontz announced that at today's meeting, the board of directors ratified the launch of the 777 family of jet aircraft. The company has received orders from United Airlines for 34 777s with options for an additional 34 units. The company also has made proposals to a number of other airlines for the sale of 777s. The new jet transport will seat 360 to 390 passengers in two classes. It will feature a new wing, wide-body fuselage and the latest high-efficiency turbofan engines. The first 777 will be delivered to United in May 1995.

SEATTLE (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Frank Shrontz, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of The Boeing Co. (NYSE: BA), announced today that the Boeing board of directors has given formal approval to produce a new wide-body twin-engine airplane family to be called the 777. The first delivery will be in 1995.

Launch customer for the 360- to 390-passenger aircraft is United Airlines, which announced two weeks ago that it placed 34 firm orders and 34 options for the new airplane.

Shrontz said, "The Boeing 777 will set a new standard for aircraft around the world. With the introduction of the 777, we will be able to offer our airline customers a complete family of Boeing airplanes that meets any seating requirement from approximately 100 to 500 passengers. We believe the 777 will allow us to offer the right product for the changing market requirements of the 1990s and beyond."

In December 1989, the Boeing board of directors authorized the Boeing Commercial Airplane Group to issue firm offers for a new airplane. Boeing has been working closely with the airlines to develop the basic design of the new airplane. The 777 program will now transition into the detailed design phase.

Pending an environmental impact statement and permits from local governments, Boeing expects to build the new 777 at its production facility in Everett, Wash., where the Boeing 747 and 767 airplanes are built. Employment on the 777 program is currently 3,500 and will grow to more than 10,000 people by late 1992.

Boeing currently produces the 737, 747, 757 and 767 family of commercial jet transport aircraft. The 737 was first ordered in February of 1965 by Lufthansa and entered service in February 1968 with Lufthansa. The first order for the 747 came in April 1966 from Pan American and entered service with them in 1970. The first order for the 767 was placed by United Airlines in July 1978 and went into service with United in September 1982. The 757 was first ordered by Eastern Airlines and British Airways in August 1978 and began commercial service in December 1982 with Eastern.

Current backlog for Boeing commercial airplanes is 1,797, consisting of: 21 707s, 905 737s, 298 747s, 367 757s, 172 767s and 34 777s.

SEATTLE (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Major air carriers have participated in Boeing's 777 design process, helping assure that the new twinjet will have the broadest possible market appeal and will emerge as the most preferred airliner in its class, the company said today.

Working closely with United Airlines and other airlines in the United States, Europe and Pacific Rim, Boeing Commercial Airplane Group has configured the 777 to meet demand for a Boeing jetliner sized between the company's 767-300 and 747-400. The proposed 360- to 390-seat aircraft will be the world's largest, most spacious two-engine passenger airliner.

A team of more than 3,400 Boeing employees is refining the new airplane's design and is on schedule with a comprehensive development program. Deliveries will begin in May 1995, which will support airline requirements for replacing older wide-body trijets.

The 777 design is driven by airline requirements and preferences. Among developments emerging from discussions with the carriers are:

-- A wing optimized for range and takeoff performance. Using the most efficient subsonic airfoil ever developed for commercial aviation, its wide-span design offers faster cruise speed, quicker climb-out and the ability to carry full passenger loads out of high-elevation, high-temperature airfields.

-- Compatibility with existing gate and taxiway space in crowded terminals. Boeing is preparing to build the airplane with upward-folding wingtips as an optional feature. This reduces the overall wing span of nearly 197 feet (60 m) to about 156 feet (47.5 m), or about the same as DC-10s, L-1011s and 767s currently in service.

-- The flight deck will incorporate the most technologically advanced features in a layout similar to the horizontal format of the new 747-400. In place of cathode ray tubes, new flat panel screens will display flight, navigation and engine information. The new displays will save space, weight and power while improving reliability.

-- An initial airplane that offers a standard maximum takeoff weight of 506,000 pounds (229,520 kg) with a range capability of up to 4,800 statute miles (7,700 km). The structural capability of the airplane allows an optional maximum takeoff weight of 515,000 pounds (233,600 kg).

-- A new family of 777 aircraft. Boeing is already proposing a longer range, 590,000-pound (267,620 kg) version of the airplane with the same physical dimensions as the initial models. It will carry 300 to 320 passengers in a tri-class arrangement on routes of up to 7,600 statute miles (12,230 km). The aircraft could be developed for even greater capability, including additional range or a stretched fuselage.

DETROIT (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - In response to fire truck operators' requests for improved vehicle stopping capabilities under demanding operating conditions, the On-Highway Products organization of Rockwell International Corp.'s Automotive Operations has entered into a marketing agreement with Telma Retarder Inc., a subsidiary of Labinal Inc., based in Hayward, Calif.

Announced here at the 1990 SAE International Truck & Bus Meeting & Exposition, the agreement combines the strengths of Rockwell's market leadership and sales support network with Telma's product and technical expertise in the retarder market. Vehicle applications will expand to school buses, recreational vehicles and other commercial specialty vehicles in the future.

Effective immediately, fire truck operators will be able to specify new vehicles with a combination of a Rockwell single rear drive axle and a Telma Focal(R) Series electromagnetic retarder through virtually all North American fire truck original equipment manufacturers (OEMs). Retarders will be offered for selected members of Rockwell's premium RS-series single-reduction axle family, ranging from 13,000 to 30,000 pounds gross axle weight rating (GAWR).

"Rockwell is evolving its drivetrain offerings into one-stop shopping for vehicle operators, and this new agreement lets us provide another value-added component to our lineup of fully dressed axles," said Rockwell's Robert M. Adams, director -- sales and marketing for On- Highway Products' Axle business.

"Telma is looking forward to further expanding its market presence in retarders, particularly in North American fire trucks, through this new agreement," stated Gerard Habib, Telma's vice president of North American Operations, noting Telma's large market presence in Europe, where the company has been a leading supplier of retarders for coaches and other medium- and heavy-duty vehicles for over 40 years.

A retarder helps vehicle operators maintain and reduce speed without activating the foundation brakes. It helps lower operating temperatures at brakes, wheels and tires, which results in decreasing maintenance costs without sacrificing performance.

The Focal Series retarder is bolted directly on the rear axle and connected to a vehicle's driveline. It operates on the principle of electromagnetic eddy currents, which introduces a retarding torque through a driveline-mounted, retarder stator/rotor mechanism to slow the wheels on the axle.

When activated, the rotors slow the driveline while dissipating kinetic heat energy. Because the retarder applies virtually no friction on moving parts, vehicle operators can experience reliable and smooth braking under various operating conditions, as well as minimize maintenance requirements.

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - In early 1991, L.A. Gear will introduce a revolutionary new line of high technology shoes featuring outsoles, midsoles and inserts using a new an unique polyurethane technology. "L.A. Gear's new product innovation also represents an entirely new era in footwear technology " according to L.A. Gear President Robert Greenberg.

As a result, L.A. Gear Inc. has entered into an exclusive license with UTI Chemicals Inc. of Irvine, Calif. to use their patented manufacturing method and unique polyurethane compound, "Z-thane." The new technology will first be implemented on the company's new Catapult basketball shoe line featuring the "Power Feedback System" which will be produced next year. Initially, the outsole will be seen on the Catapult shoes, but L.A. Gear has future plans to use the technology on other shoes, as well.

Catapult will debut in an unprecedented, full-blown media campaign starring Utah Jazz power forward Karl "The Mailman" Malone during the Super Bowl game in January.

UTI's patented method and special polyurethane compound can produce outsoles in a vast array of vibrant hues; clearly a visual advantage that no other current technology offers. In addition, the polyurethane allows L.A. Gear to blend transparent outsoles and inserts with opaque colors, creating unique combinations that enable the consumer to see the Catapult technology in action.

L.A. Gear will manufacture the Catapult shoe's outsoles, midsoles and inserts in South Korea. L.A. Gear will be the only shoe company to use this superior technology.

Some advantages of this patented method and unique polyurethane material over current techniques are:

-- EQUIPMENT COSTS. Capital equipment investment is one-tenth that of rubber, so the payback is considerably faster.

-- WASTE MANAGEMENT. This technology controls waste to under 1 percent while rubber technology runs 5 percent to 15 percent.

-- REUSABLE MATERIAL. UTI's non-toxic products can be shredded and recycled for other applications while rubber is extremely difficult to dispose of without doing marked environmental harm.

-- STRENGTH AND DURABILITY. This innovative new urethane is literally four times stronger than the rubber used for automobile tires.

The patented process took over 10 years of dedicated research and development, according to UTI Chairman Richard Steinke. "UTI has several machines creating products in the market place today, including airless 'flatproof' tires and custom automotive parts. We are looking forward to working with L.A. Gear in their application of polyurethane first in the extraordinary Catapult line, and thereafter in other footwear lines."

Based in Los Angeles, L.A. Gear markets and designs fashion performance footwear, apparel and accessories. The company is currently the third largest footwear manufacturer in the nation.

HOUSTON (OCT. 29) PR NEWSWIRE - Pennzoil Co. (NYSE: PZL) reported 1990 third quarter net income totalling $26.4 million, or 66 cents per share, down from the $35.4 million, or 87 cents per share, earned in the same quarter a year ago.

For the nine-month period ended September 30, the company reported net income of $63.8 million, or $1.62 per share. This compares to net income of $206 million, or $5.36 per share, for the comparable 1989 period. Included in 1989 results was an after-tax gain of $86.8 million, or $2.39 per share, on the sale of Burlington Resources Inc. common stock.

Revenues for the 1990 third quarter were $615.4 million, up from $542.3 million for the same period a year ago. For the 1990 nine-month period, revenues were $1.7 billion vs. $1.8 billion in 1989.

Pennzoil President and Chief Executive Officer James L. Pate explained that higher crude oil costs, resulting from the Middle East crisis, reduced operating income for the refinery segment. "Pennzoil's motor oil sales in the third quarter were at an all-time high," he said, "but we were unable to adjust product prices to fully recover the surge in crude costs."

In the oil and gas segment, improved oil revenues were offset by reduced gas revenues reflecting lower prices and sales volumes. "In contrast to higher crude prices, natural gas prices and demand were down in the third quarter. Since Pennzoil is a major producer of natural gas, our earnings were negatively impacted by this situation," he said. "However, natural gas prices and volumes are improving with seasonal demand." Pate added that operating income was also reduced by additional well workover expenses.

"Operating income from the sulphur segment was up slightly with increased sales volumes more than offsetting lower prices," he noted. "Sulphur prices have been recovering, however, and are currently above levels of a year ago.

"Although our third quarter results were adversely affected by price conditions, programs initiated in mid-year are producing operating efficiencies that will better position Pennzoil for the future."

He said that streamlining the marketing distribution system, consolidating the work force, establishing a new management team and implementing a technology-based strategy to fully exploit the company's oil and gas reserves are examples of the programs that are focused on improving the company's core businesses and operating income.

"Our main objectives remain the improvement of the company's competitiveness and ability to better adapt to volatile prices. We are making progress towards the achievement of these goals, and the benefits of our initiatives, especially our aggressive oil and gas development program, should become more apparent in the months ahead."

Chevron Investment Pennzoil owns approximately nine percent of Chevron Corp. outstanding common stock. Pennzoil's reported earnings for the third quarter and nine-month periods in 1990 include the dividends received from this investment, but do not include any portion of its share of Chevron's unremitted or retained earnings. Chevron's reported net income for the third quarter of 1990 was $403 million and for the nine months, $1.5 billion. If Pennzoil's proportionate share ($35.9 million and $135.9 million, respectively) of Chevron's earnings had been distributed to Pennzoil, Pennzoil's earnings for the third quarter and nine-month periods in 1990 would have been increased, after adjustment for additional taxes, by $10.3 million to $36.7 million for the quarter, or by $60.5 million to $124.3 million for the nine-month period in 1990. These adjustments are equivalent to an increase in Pennzoil's earnings of 26 cents to 92 cents per share for the quarter and $1.54 to $3.16 per share for the nine-month period.

SAN FRANCISCO (OCT. 29) UPI - Shoving the budget fiasco behind him, President Bush turned full force to the campaign trail Monday with precious few days left until Election Day in which to minimize political fallout from the rancorous process.

The budget wars finally over, a pact to trim the deficit in hand and virtually no one happy about it, Bush opened a final campaign drive to Nov. 6, expressing optimism for GOP prospects even as administration officials acknowledged that some damage had been done to the party by Bush's retreat on his 1988 pledge not to raise taxes.

In Honolulu Saturday, Bush brushed aside concerns that the GOP would suffer. ''No, I sense strong enthusiasm for Republican candidates,'' he told reporters. ''But let's see now how we do. I'm going to be out there, working my heart out for Republican candidates who feel as I do.''

What he didn't want to talk about on Sunday was his plunge in the polls - the latest one showing his lowest-ever approval rating as president, 48 percent - and the warfare within his own party caused by the negotiations.

Republican Party honcho Ed Rollins, the author of a memo to congressional candidates under fire on the issue to feel free to run from the president, wouldn't be fired. At least it didn't sound like it.

And Republicans who abandoned the president in voting against any package that included a tax hike, the likes of House whip Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and others, wouldn't be punished. ''I understand Republicans defecting from a package that they don't like,'' he said. ''I think that's history now, but I have no rancor about it.''

The battle plan will be as follows, said the president:

-Hold the new line on taxes - no more new ones. ''This was a one-time compromise,'' he said of his concession to raise income tax rates to 31 percent.

-Stress that he had to do it for the good of the country. ''Sometimes the president has to make a tough call; this was one of them.''

-Tell the audiences again and again and again that if he had more Republicans in the Congress to control spending, this budget mess never would have happened.

''That's the approach I'm going to be taking. ... That's the way I'll handle it,'' Bush said.

But the months of political warfare that led to the compromise plan passed this past weekend may have taken a big toll on both the president and members of the House and Senate up for re-election.

In a Newsweek poll released Sunday, Bush earned the lowest approval rating of his presidency, with 48 percent of Americans approving of the way the president was handling his job. In the same poll, only 19 percent said they trust Bush most to set the course for the nation's economic policy, while 36 percent said they trusted congressional Democrats most and 21 percent trusted congressional Republicans most.

A whopping 64 percent of those polled thought the president was losing his political influence.

With Bush having retreated on his stand against taxes no less than three times and some GOP candidates taking Rollins' advice and distancing themselves from the president, top admininstration officials acknowledge the budget mess has been costly to Bush.

''He cast some of his political capital for the benefit of the country,'' said White House Chief of Staff John Sununu Sunday on the ABC News program ''This Week with David Brinkley.''

But Sununu, the loyal lieutenant, predicted Bush's poor showing in the polls was temporary.

''I think what you're going to see is ... recovery in a relatively short period of time,'' Sununu said. ''Do we hope it doesn't drop further? Yes, we hope it doesn't drop further. Will it go up again? Yes, it will go up again, almost as certain as anything you can think of.''

And with the fate of one-third of the Senate and all of the House in the hands of the voters in just eight days, there is continuing concern about an anti-incumbent backlash.

Vice President Dan Quayle, saying Bush's plunge in the polls ''goes with the territory,'' predicted that both parties are going to be penalized.

''The floor has not dropped out on just Republican candidates,'' he said. ''I would not like to be a Democratic incumbent running for re- election. I would not because I believe that the Democratic Congress has a lot of explaining to do.''

Bush for his part was more than ready to move on.

''I feel that it's been a long, arduous battle,'' he said as he prepared to head back to the campaign trail in full force. ''No, I can't say this is the best thing that's happened to us since sliced bread ... (but) I'm glad it's over.''

(OCT. 29) UPI - Lawmakers are looking at some last-minute campaigning after wrapping up the 101st Congress. Members of the Senate and House up for re-election rushed home Sunday, some fearing a voter revolt at the polls. Congress during the weekend wrapped up an historic deficit-reduction agreement that will be painful for all Americans. The will increase taxes on the very wealthy as well as on gasoline, tobacco, alcohol and other items.

Washington, D-C's, police chief says the city spent 800-thousand dollars keeping order as 30 Ku Klux Klan members marched along Constitution Avenue Sunday. The march triggered violence that left six anti-Klan demonstrators and eight police officers injured, one of them seriously.

The 12-nation European Community remains divided on major trade issues following a two-day summit of E-C leaders that ended Sunday in Rome. British Prime Minister Thatcher accused France and Germany of practicing protectionism for their farmers. Both Paris and Bonn have rejected a proposal to cut agriculture subsides by 30 percent in the decade ending in 1996.

Israel reopened the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip Sunday after a four-day shutdown, allowing tens of thousands of Palestinian workers to return to their jobs in Israel. However, Palestinian sources say hundreds of Arabs returned to their employers only to find they'd been dismissed.

Political sources say Syria and Lebanon have agreed to speed up the planned demilitarization of war-battered Beirut that would put an end to 15 years of militia rule. The sources say the process already under way to rid Beirut of its warring militias should be finalized by next weekend.

There were NO results immediately available in elections held Sunday in the Ivory Coast. But opposition leaders in the west African nation say the first multi-party presidential election was rigged. They say ballot boxes filled with voting slips for the ruling party were found at many polling stations before voters had cast any ballots.

(OCT. 29) UPI - Saddam Hussein demanded France send medicines on the plane slated to carry 300 French hostages home Monday, and the Iraqi president axed a gas rationing program created after U.N. economic sanctions were imposed against Baghdad.

Saddam also fired Oil Minister Issam Abdulrahmin Chalabi on Sunday, the second senior Iraqi minister to leave office since Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2, the official Iraqi news agency INA reported

The commander of U.S. forces in Saudi Arabia told a newspaper that a clash with Iraq in the desert would involve a number of American casualties, and said he would like to bring his troops home without a fight.

The U.N. Security Council was expected to vote Monday on a proposed resolution against Iraq that would make the nation pay for invasion damages and free all hostages. A vote set for Saturday was delayed, reportedly because the Soviet Union was seeking a weekend settlement to the crisis and because U.N. diplomats warned a wrong move by the international organization could touch off a war.

Top Soviet envoy Yevgeny Primakov spoke with Saddam in Baghdad Sunday, in their second meeting in a month, and, INA reported, conveyed to him a private message from Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, who arrived in Paris Sunday for talks with President Francois Mitterrand on the gulf crisis.

But the British Broadcasting Corp. reported that Saddam and Primakov made no progress toward a peaceful settlement. The Soviet envoy had raised hopes the tense standoff could be settled through negotiation after his initial meeting with Saddam Oct. 5.

Chalabi announced Oct. 19 that Iraq would begin rationing gasoline, a move that led many to speculate economic sanctions imposed against Baghdad by the United Nations were beginning to take their toll.

INA said Saddam ordered the rationing program canceled following a meeting of experts who determined the ''Oil Ministry has made miscalculations in the availability of the solutions used in the processing of fuel.''

Last month, INA reported Iraq's Minister of Communications Saadoun Shaker had resigned for ''health reasons.'' Diplomats, however, said he quit because he opposed the invasion.

Officials in Paris said Iraq demanded France send medicine on a plane scheduled to fly home about 300 French hostages from Baghdad. Iraq announced last week it would free all French nationals held in Iraq and occupied Kuwait.

The officials in Paris said they would consult the United Nations to determine whether such a shipment would violate the U.N. economic sanctions imposed to pressure Iraqi troops from Kuwait.

U.N. Security Council Resolution 661 states that medicines are not included in the embargo against Iraq. A second resolution extended the boycott to air traffic. To ensure compliance with the embargo, the Iraqi Airways plane must be inspected by French and United Nations authorities before being allowed to leave Paris Monday night on its return flight to Baghdad.

Before adjourning Sunday, 81 members of Congress sent a letter to Bush expressing concern about the increasing moves toward war, saying Congress must be consulted before any military action.

A poll released Sunday, meanwhile, indicated further erosion in President Bush's popularity.

Navy officials said U.S. and Australian warships intercepted an Iraqi merchant ship in the North Arabian Sea, firing shots across its bow when it failed to heed an order to stop, and then boarding the vessel to determine whether it violated U.N.-imposed economic sanctions.

The heads of state at a European Community meeting in Rome agreed they would not send representatives of their governments to Baghdad to negotiate the release of hostages held by Iraq as a human shield against attack.

Officials in Athens said Iraq had released 10 of 24 Greek hostages, allowing them to leave the country immediately.

Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, commander of the more than 200,000 U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia, said in an interview published Sunday he wants to avoid a military confrontation with Iraq.

The West Point graduate and Vietnam veteran, nicknamed ''Stormin' Norman,'' said he hopes the massive military deployment and economic sanctions will pressure Iraq to withdraw from the emirate.

The general told the Atlanta Journal and Constitution a desert confrontation with Iraqi troops would be a lethal fight involving a number of American casualties.

''We have developed more sophisticated ways to destroy things,'' he said. ''It will certainly be a much more lethal battlefield. But to the fundamental soldier on the ground, it is still going to be a question of life and death.''

A public opinion poll, published in Newsweek magazine, said only 48 percent of Americans approved of the way Bush was handling his job. It was the lowest approval rating for President Bush, one of the most popular U.S. chief executives in modern history.

White House Chief of Staff John Sununu predicted during an interview on an American news television program that Bush would recover from his drop in the polls, but added ''we hope it doesn't drop further.''

WASHINGTON (OCT. 29) UPI - Protesters came to Ku Klux Klan rally ready for violence, and city officials criticized a judge's ruling that allowed the robed marchers to cover a longer route through downtown of the predominately black city.

Police in riot gear guarded 30 Klan members Sunday on their 1 1/2-mile march to the Capital along Constitution Avenue, while 1,200 protesters battled police in their wake.

Police arrested 40 demonstrators and 14 people, including eight police officers, were injured.

''Obviously people came down here for planned violence,'' Police Chief Isaac Fulwood said. ''There were roving gangs with bricks in knapsacks.''

Fulwood said a female officer lost consciousness when a brick struck her in the side of the head and fractured her neck. He said she was revived, but lost consciousness again as she was taken to a hospital.

The injuries to the other officers and demonstrators were described as minor.

''We got out of it extremely lucky,'' Fulwood said. ''We were lucky that they did not explore even more than they did.''

Chief F.A. Kerrigan of the U.S. Capitol Police said, ''Everything went as well as we thought it could.''

Fulwood estimated the police mobilization cost the city $800,000.

Fulwood said U.S. District Judge Louis Oberdorfer, who cleared the way for the march, ''used poor legal judgment'' in granting the Klan a permit for the march along Constitution Avenue.

''We gave them a permit for a shorter route, but the judge thought they had an inherent right for a longer route. That's wrong,'' the chief said. ''We're the only experts in this goddamned town. If people weren't messing around with us there would be no problem. You can quote me on that.''

A spokeswoman for the All Peoples Congress, which staged the rally, termed the protest a success, saying a group of 20 anti-Klan protesters made it to the Capitol grounds to demonstrate in view of the Klan.

The protests began at noon when demonstrators gathered for the start of the march. They tried to break through a police line, but were repulsed. As the Klan moved down Constitution Avenue, the protesters streamed toward the Capitol.

The crowd reassembled at about the march's midpoint, chanting ''Smash the Klan smash the Klan and anyone in the way!'' Seconds later, a shower of rocks and bottles rained on police who began marching against the crowd.

Some police officers used their nightsticks to break up the crowd.

Police then pushed the crowd away, and squad cars were pelted with rocks and bricks. Fulwood said windows were smashed on at least 12 cars during the day.

The Klan held its rally on the southwest lawn of the Capitol, on the other side of the mall from the bulk of the protests and away from the public. When they finished, they climbed into vans and were escorted out of the city by the police.

One protester attributed the outbreak of violence to frustration.

''As an African-American, I personally think they have a right to march, but I also think we have a right to protest,'' said Michael Jones, a Howard University sophomore. ''The police are using extreme brutality.''

(OCT. 29) UPI - Officials in Paris say Iraqi President Saddam Hussein is demanding that France send medicine on a plane scheduled to fly about 300 French hostages from Baghdad today. Iraq announced last week it would free all French nationals.

President Bush continues his campaigning for G-O-P candidates Monday. Bush leaves San Francisco and heads for Oklahoma City for another fund-raiser. Bush is suffering from a reported decline in popularity in recent days.

In Minnesota, Independent-Republican gubernatorial candidate Jon Grunseth withdrew from the race Sunday, just nine days before the election. Grunseth dropped out after a newspaper report quoting a woman who said she had a nine-year affair with him.

An election official in Soviet Georgia says an estimated 70-75 percent of eligible voters took part in elections Sunday. It was the republic's first free elections fo form a parliament. Counting is expected to take five days.

Sources in Beirut say that Syria and Lebanon have agreed to speed up plans for a demilitarization of war-battered Beirut that would end 15 years of militia rule. The sources said the agreement was reached during a meeting in Damascus early Sunday.

Police in riot gear guarded 30 Ku Klux Klan members Sunday on their one-and-one-half-mile march to the Capital along Constitution Avenue. Police arrested 40 demonstrators. 14 people, including eight police officers, were injured.

European Community leaders meeting in Rome Sunday agreed to begin the next stage toward a single European currency in 1994 with a goal of completion by the end of the decade. Only Britain's prime minister dissented.

Members of the Senate and House wrapped up their work and adjourned the 101st Congress this weekend. Legislators up for re-election rushed home for last-minute campaigning for the November 6th elections.

#90302u0181 10/29/1990 ~United Press International

(OCT. 29) UPI - What began as a festive homecoming for Denis Savard ended on a sour note for the former Blackhawk.

With the high-scoring center in the penalty box for high-sticking, Adam Creighton banged in a power-play goal 2:05 into overtime Sunday night to lift the Chicago Blackhawks to a 2-1 victory over the Montreal Canadiens before a standing-room crowd of 18,472 on hand to witness the popular Savard's first return since his trade during the offseason.

''He's still friends with a lot of the guys on the team, and I consider him one of my friends,'' said Creighton. ''I wish him all the best, but we've got to look out for ourselves and win hockey games. We can't be worried about who our friends are, and that's all it comes down to.''

Steve Larmer set up the game-winner, providing a behind-the-net feed with Creighton fighting off a check in front of goaltender Patrick Roy. The replay actually showed Larmer's pass going off the skate of Canadien defenseman Eric Desjardins and through Roy's pads.

''It was Larmer's goal,'' said Creighton, who got credit for his fourth tally of the year. ''I told them to change it.''

If anything could be changed, Savard wished he could have erased referee Kerry Fraser's high-sticking call at 1:02 into the extra period that gave the Blackhawks the extra-man advantage.

''I wasn't aware I sticked 'em anywhere,'' Savard said of his high- stick on Chicago's Greg Gilbert. ''I didn't mean to high-stick him if I did. I don't even know where it happened.''

Chicago Coach Mike Keenan, who after a stormy two-year relationship with Savard dealt the flashy centerman to the Canadiens for defenseman Chris Chelios last June 29, labled Fraser's call ''unfortunate.''

''We can't feel sympathetic in that situation,'' Keenan said. ''We were, I felt, carrying most of the play, yet we were down in power plays, and I think that's why we got the call.''

The Blackhawks outshot the Canadiens 39-22 for the game, but both Roy and Blackhawks goalie Ed Belfour were superior in net.

Dirk Graham gave Chicago a 1-0 lead early in the third, but Stephan Lebeau tied it with a power-play goal with 12:49 left. Belfour stopped Petr Svoboda's initial slap shot, but Lebeau poked the puck free and pushed it by for his third tally of the year.

Montreal had a power play for the final 52 seconds of regulation, but Belfour stopped Mathieu Schneider on a rocket slap shot from the point, the Canadiens' only scoring chance.

The evening got underway when Savard came out onto the ice for the pre-game skatearound and received a lengthy and thunderous standing ovation. One of the banners read ''Savard is home - Keenan is trespassing,'' reflecting the still bitter feelings over the blockbuster trade.

''It's tough to come in here,'' said Savard. ''I was ready to play, but the crowd made me nervous.''

Another loud cheer went up when Savard went out to skate his first shift of the night. After playing 10 seasons in Chicago, even Savard got a bit swept away with the emotion. He started toward the wrong penalty box when whistled for hooking midway through the first period.

''I'm just glad it's over with now,'' he said. ''I can go and play hockey the way I can. It hasn't been easy the past couple days.''

After a sloppily played opening period, the teams picked up the pace in the second. The Blackhawks pressured Roy late in the period, but the two-time defending Vezina Trophy winner stopped Greg Gilbert and Jocelyn Lemieux from the slot.

Graham broke loose on a breakaway early in the third, but he made one move too many and failed to get a shot off. He then made most of his next opportunity, breaking the dual shutout at 3:44 of the third by banking a shot off Roy's pad for his fourth goal of the season after stickhandling out from behind the net and to Roy's right.

After Lebeau tied the score 1-1, the Blackhawks' Steve Thomas stole the puck in the Montreal zone and moved in on Roy with 5:30 left, but Roy again made the key save.

Elsewhere in the NHL Sunday night, Los Angeles downed Winnipeg 6-2, Washington edged Edmonton 1-0, Pittsburgh battered the New York Islanders 8-3 and Buffalo shut out Hartford 5-0.

-- AROUND THE NHL --

Kings 6, Jets 2

At Winnipeg, Manitoba, Tomas Sandstrom and John Tonelli scored second-period goals and Los Angeles went on to its sixth win in seven games. Wayne Gretzky, who scored his 2,000th career point Friday night in the Kings 6-2 loss to the Jets, added two assists.

Capitals 1, Oilers 0

At Edmonton, Alberta, Michal Pivonka scored the game's lone goal at 2:11 of the first period and Don Beaupre blocked 31 shots for his second shutout of the year. It was the first time the Oilers had been shut out since Andy Moog of the Boston Bruins turned the trick on Oct. 20, 1989. The defending Stanley Cup champion Oilers, have dropped four straight and six of seven.

Penguins 8, Islanders 3

At Pittsburgh, 18-year-old Jaromir Jagr scored two goals, John Cullen assisted on three others and the Penguins scored six times in the second period. The Islanders did not get a shot on goal until 14:13 of the first period.

Sabres 5, Whalers 0

At Buffalo, N.Y., Pierre Turgeon had a hat trick and Clint Malarchuk stopped 29 shots to lead the Sabres. Rick Vaive assisted on all three of Turgeon's goals as the Sabres notched their first home win of the season.

Lawmakers are looking at some last-minute campaigning after wrapping up the 101st Congress. Members of the Senate and House up for re- election rushed home Sunday, some fearing a voter revolt at the polls. Congress during the weekend wrapped up an historic deficit-reduction agreement that will be painful for all Americans. The budget will increase taxes on the very wealthy as well as on gasoline, tobacco, alcohol and other items.

Washington, D-C's, police chief says the city spent 800-thousand dollars keeping order as 30 Ku Klux Klan members marched along Constitution Avenue Sunday. The march triggered violence that left six anti-Klan demonstrators and eight police officers injured, one of them seriously.

The 12-nation European Community remains divided on major trade issues following a two-day summit of E-C leaders that ended Sunday in Rome. British Prime Minister Thatcher accused France and Germany of practicing protectionism for their farmers. Both Paris and Bonn have rejected a proposal to cut agriculture subsidies by 30 percent in the decade ending in 1996.

Israel reopened the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip Sunday after a four-day shutdown, allowing tens of thousands of Palestinian workers to return to their jobs in Israel. However, Palestinian sources say hundreds of Arabs returned to their employers only to find they'd been dismissed.

Political sources say Syria and Lebanon have agreed to speed up the planned demilitarization of war-battered Beirut that would put an end to 15 years of militia rule. The sources say the process already under way to rid Beirut of its warring militias should be finalized by next weekend.

There were NO results immediately available in elections held Sunday in the Ivory Coast. But opposition leaders in the west African nation say the first multi-party presidential election was rigged. They say ballot boxes filled with voting slips for the ruling party were found at many polling stations before voters had cast any ballots.

(OCT. 29) UPI - Around the world, around the clock, the latest news from U-P-I...

President Bush will campaign for Republican candidates in California and Oklahoma today, saying he'll stress that he supported a tax hike for the good of the nation. Bush will try to minimize the potential political damage to the G-O-P from the extended budget battle before Americans head to the polls next Tuesday. .

A magazine poll that hits the newsstands today does NOT bode well for President Bush and budget matters. Only 19 percent of those questioned said they trust Bush most to set U-S economic policy. 36 percent said they trust congressional Democrats most and 21 percent picked congressional Republicans.

Police guarded 30 Ku Klux Klan members as they marched yesterday in Washington D-C, a predominantly black city. 12-hundred anti-Klan protesters battled police. 14 people- including eight police officers- were injured. Police say they arrested 40 of the rock and bottle throwing demonstrators.

Iraq hopes to get something out of its planned release of about 400 French citizens. Officials in Paris say Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein expects France to send medicine on the plane slated to land in Baghdad today to carry the hostages home. France says it's checking to see if the move would violate the U-N embargo against Iraq.

The European Community is sticking with a course that economists say will save citizens of the 12-nation E-C as much as 26-BILLION dollars a year in exchange costs. E-C leaders ended a meeting yesterday in Rome with all but Britain's prime minister agreeing to take steps toward a single European currency.

Soviet Georgians voted in their republic's first free parliamentary elections yesterday. But officials say counting the results may take as long as five days due to complex polling procedures and a 19-hundred candidate field. Said one official- ''in Communist elections, it did NOT take any time at all.''

John Grunseth cited concerns for his family and the people of Minnesota in quitting the race for governor. The Independent-Republican party candidate did NOT mention Tamara Taylor or her claims that she had a nine-year affair with Grunseth that she says ended last year. The conservative politician earlier faced accusations that he skinny-dipped with teen-agers at a 1981 party.

The National Weather Service posted a wintry weather advisory for much of Vermont, where cold air is expected to turn to rain overnight. Forecasters said strong winds out of the northwest brought cold, blustery weather into the Great Lakes region and the upper Ohio Valley region.

JAKARTA, Indonesia (OCT. 29) UPI - President Suharto urged Southeast Asian economic ministers Monday to expand trade in the Asia-Pacific region as he opened a two-day meeting aimed at improving investment ties with the United States.

Delegates from the six-member Association of Southeast Asian Nations gathered in Jakarta for Suharto's opening remarks prior to convening their session on the resort island of Bali.

''In such a dynamic world, we must continue to encourage the efforts to establish free, fair and equitable trade whereby all nations can share the potentials and opportunities the world has to offer,'' Suharto said.

The representatives from Indonesia, Thailand, Singapore, Malaysia, Brunei and the Philippines are expected to reach agreement on the ASEAN- U.S. Initiative designed to encourage expanded trade and investment ties, stress their concern over the faltering Uruguay Round of multilateral trade talks and seek new ways of improving intra-ASEAN trade.

Suharto stressed the importance of reducing or abolishing barriers and noted cooperation with the group's dialogue partners has resulted in significant benefits. The dialogue partners are the United States, Japan, the European Community, Australia, Canada and New Zealand.

The Asia-Pacific region ''has rapidly intensified its economic activities, resulting in a continuing shift in economic strength towards this part of the world,'' Suharto said.

He noted however ASEAN must make greater efforts towards intra-ASEAN economic cooperation. ''To this end, we have to make new approaches, especially in trade and investment,'' he said.

Officials said the delegates hoped to reach agreement on the framework of the ASEAN-U.S. Initiative, which would be submitted to U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills.

In Vancouver last month, Hills and the ASEAN economic ministers examined a draft of a memorandum of understanding which laid down the goals of the consultative mechanism and identified areas for expansion of trade and investments between the parties.

Reports from the Bush administration indicate Washington would be willing to have a trade liberalizing agreement, but not a free trade agreement, with ASEAN.

TOKYO (OCT. 29) UPI - Black South African leader Nelson Mandela said Monday apartheid cannot be replaced by a parliament that includes blacks but reserves special rights for whites, Kyodo News Service reported.

Mandela, in Tokyo at the invitation of the Japanese government, told Kyodo in an interview that he rejects a proposal by the South African government to allow black-majority rule but reserve representation and veto power for whites in the upper house of parliament.

Neighboring Zimbabwe made a transition to black-majority rule in the 1980s through a similar arrangement.

Mandela, 72, vice president of the African National Congress who spent 27 years in jail for his opposition to the government, said, ''apartheid cannot be removed by other forms of apartheid.''

Mandela said he would study the proposal, which was made Wednesday, on his return to South Africa at the conclusion of his tour of the Asia- Pacific region.

But in principle, he said, all citizens should be eligible to vote and all races should be equal before the law.

However, he added, ''We must consider very carefully the fears of whites. Blacks will never dominate whites.''

(OCT. 29) UPI - President Bush will be dodging questions about his reported sagging popularity as he campaigns for G-O-P candidates in California and Oklahoma today. A new poll shows that 64 percent of those questioned think the president is losing his political influence.

Members of Congress up for re-election next week may be going from the frying pan into the fire today. After resolving the controversial budget process this weekend, many legislators become candidates today as they begin campaigning for re-election in their home states. One-third of the Senate and all of the House members face re-election.

The mayor of Moscow said today during a visit to Japan that Soviet President Gorbachev must liberalize his economic transition plan within months, or the popular politicians headed by Boris Yeltsin will resign as a group.

In an interview with the Japanese Kyodo News Service, South African leader Nelson Mandela says that apartheid in South Africa canNOT be replaced by a Parliament that includes blacks, but reserves special rights for whites. .

Mandela is in Tokyo at the invitation of the Japanese government. He is scheduled to meet with Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu later today, and to address the Japanese Parliament tomorrow.

The United Nations Security Council is expected to vote today on a proposed resolution demanding that Iraq pay for invasion damages and free all hostages. Iraq is now saying that France must send medicine on the plane set to carry 300 French hostages home today.

(OCT. 29) UPI - Cool weather, including record lows in the Midwest, covered much of the nation Monday with high winds on the northern parts of both coasts and thick fog in Southern California.

A gale warning was in effect for Narragansett Bay in Providence, R.I., where gusty northwest winds were moving at up to 40 mph.

On the opposite coast, southeast winds topping 35 mph were reported near Cape Lookout on the Oregon coast. The winds pushed seas to 18 feet and carried rain that was to continue through the day.

Records for cold and warm weather were set in the Midwest and West. The thermometer dipped to 22 degrees in Muskegon, Mich., breaking by 1 degree a record set in 1980.

In Salt Lake City, Utah, a record high minimum temperature was recorded Sunday when the day's low was a relatively warm 50 degrees. That tied a record set in 1977.

Thick fog covered large parts of the California coast early Monday from San Diego to Eureka. In San Diego, a dense fog advisory was in effect for a 12 mile strip along the coast with visibility down to an eighth of a mile in some areas.

Several hundred miles north, fog also blanketed Eureka and Humboldt Bay, near the state's northern border, with visibilities down to one sixteenth of a mile.

New York City was partly cloudy, breezy and cold with a low 35 to 40 and winds moving northwest at 10 to 15 mph with gusts. It was mostly cloudy and cold with a few snow flurries in Buffalo, where temperatures were in the low 30s and winds were moving northwest at 10 to 20 mph.

Clear skies and cold weather covered much of the Plains and Midwest, with Topeka, Kan. reporting 40 degrees and clear and Cleveland with 45 degrees and some clouds.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (OCT. 29) UPI - Black gunmen staged suspected revenge attacks for the weekend stabbing death of a Zulu man in Soweto, killing at least 16 people and wounding 33 in the worst outbreak of urban factional violence in more than a month, police said Monday.

Lt. Govindsamy Mariemuthoo, police spokesman in the sprawling black satellite city southwest of Johannesburg said the unknown group of men, armed with handguns and AK-47 assault rifles, staged three separate attacks around 8 p.m. Sunday.

It was the worst incident of factional violence reported from black townships surrounding Johannesburg since Sept. 13, when gunmen attacked a passenger train on the outskirts of the city, killing 26 people.

Mariemuthoo said the killings in the densely populated area of Soweto called Naledi could have been revenge attacks for the death of a Zulu man at the nearby Merafe railway station Saturday morning.

According to police, the unidentified man was a supporter of the Zulu movement Inkatha and had been trying to attend a Inkatha rally in downtown Johannesburg Saturday morning when he was hacked to death by ''plus minus 200 youths.''

Police intervened and arrested a 20-year-old alleged member of the African National Congress youth wing.

The worst urban violence ever seen in South Africa exploded in early August largely between supporters of the ANC and the Inkatha movement, and nearly 800 people were killed in six weeks of clashes. ANC leaders, including Nelson Mandela, blamed the violence on a ''third force,'' or elements of the minority white government's security establishment.

Tough police measures imposed were last month quelled the fighting and appeared to have succeeded.

The police earlier Monday put the death toll at eight and could provide no details on the jump to 16, with 33 wounded.

Maj. Gen. Johan Swaart, regional commissioner of police for Soweto, said the police have ''immediately planned action to trace the suspects and bring them to justice'' and appealed to the people not to take the law into their own hands.

''The South African Police will not tolerate these cowardly attacks and unnecessary bloodshed in Soweto,'' he said in a statement.

Sunday's bloodshed came a day after 10,000 ANC supporters relaunched the movement's youth wing - reoorganized following the ANC's legalization in February - while 5,000 Inkatha followers staged a march in Johannesburg.

The ANC has announced that Mandela and Inkatha leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi will meet soon for the first time since Mandela was released from 27 years imprisonment in February. The meeting, according to the ANC, will be between the governing councils of the two movements with Mandela and Buthelezi attending.

Buthelezi has long insisted on direct one-on-one talks with Mandela, declaring them essential to ending the violence between the two ideologically divided movements that began in 1987 in the strife-torn province of Natal where as many as 4,000 have died.

The ANC has so far resisted such a meeting, contending it would give Buthelezi unwarranted status as a major political force.

PARIS (OCT. 29) UPI - Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and President Francois Mitterrand began a second day of talks Monday after their two governments signed five cooperation agreements, including a $1 billion French financial aid package for Moscow.

Gorbachev and Mitterrand met at a former royal hunting palace in Rambouillet just outside Paris for talks that are expected to be dominated by the crisis in the Persian Gulf, officials said. The two presidents are scheduled to sign a wide-ranging friendship and cooperation treaty later Monday and will also hold a joint news conference.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said during the ceremony at which the cooperation agreements were signed Sunday night that ''for the moment there are not many reasons to be optimistic'' over the evolution of the Gulf crisis following a second visit to Baghdad by Eugueni Primakov, Gorbachev's special envoy.

But Shevardnadze added that there were still ''chances for a negotiated settlement'' to the crisis. He spoke just one day before some 300 French hostages were scheduled to return to Paris from Kuwait and Iraq.

But the Soviet foreign affairs minister and Roland Dumas, his French counterpart, refused to say whether Mitterrand and Gorbachev would announce a joint peace initiative at the end of their two-day summit.

Gorbachev arrived in Paris Sunday night in a pouring rain after a three-day visit to Spain, where he was enthusiastically received by King Juan Carlos and the Socialist government of Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez.

While Mitterrand and Gorbachev attended a private dinner in honor of the Soviet Nobel Peace Prize Laureate, French and Soviet officials signed five cooperation agreements, including a financial agreement under which France will give the Soviet Union $1 billion in aid in the form of loans, credits, and export subsidies, officials said.

The two governments also signed a five-year industrial, technical, and scientific agreement. A third accord signed by Paris and Moscow concerns cooperation in the areas of labor, employment, and professional education.

That agreement calls for French involvement in a new international center of labor and social problems to train Soviet businessmen that will be formed in Moscow. Under the accord 2,000 Soviets will come to France for training in the workings of a market economy.

The last two agreements concern cooperation between public companies of both countries as well as in scientific projects.

PRETORIA, SOUTH AFRICA (OCT. 29) UPI - More than 150 years after his Afrikaner ancestors trekked north to evade a British ban on slavery, Markus

Louw is taking his family on a migration south to escape the racial reforms of President Frederik de Klerk.

''I'll be sorry to leave, of course. But even sorrier to stay and watch us being decimated,'' Louw says of his lifelong home in the nation's capital of Pretoria, where legislation is forcing down decades of racial barriers.

''It is very simple for us ... we are white and we are Afrikaners and we want to stay that way,'' adds the 46-year-old house painter, who affects leather pioneer-style garb, refuses to speak any language other than his mother tongue and forbids his wife and four children from doing so.

Louw and tens of thousands of other right-wing Afrikaners are horrified at the nine-month-old reforms of de Klerk. Like their ancestors in the 19th Century British Cape Colony who embarked on the Great Trek, they believe their right to self-determination is endangered.

Before de Klerk came to power last September, few of them believed they would ever give up total control over South Africa. But with apartheid gradually crumbling, many have abandoned the idea of control and will now settle for a whites-only haven.

Inspired in part by the separatist philosophy of the official opposition Conservative party, which wants South Africa partitioned for the different races, hundreds of Afrikaners have decided to act unilaterally.

They are planning to abandon the original northern settler cities, including Pretoria, and make a new white homeland in the arid but white- dominated and sparsely populated southwestern regions of the country.

The government and most of South Africa's 5 million whites scoff at the fervor of the would-be pioneers. But enthralled by the fiery bibilical rhetoric of men like Pretoria theology professor Carel Boshoff, who identifies Afrikaners as Israel's lost tribe and God's chosen people, the separatists are convinced they are right.

Up to 1,000 have told Boshoff they are going to move.

Louw, pointing to oval-framed photographs of bearded ancestors, says, ''They opened up this land with their rifles and their faith in almighty God. Our leaders have now chosen to betray their struggle, so new land will now be claimed.''

For Louw and many others, the final affront was the government's scrapping earlier this month of a 27-year-old law segregating public facilities, the Separate Amenities Act.

More than 50 Afrikaner families have over the past several years already broken a path west for the others to follow, setting up home in various northern parts of the Cape Province historically unclaimed by blacks.

These 20th Century settlers, the core of the separatist movement, were prompted to uproot by the first tentative steps to reform by de Klerk's predecessor, Pieter W. Botha, even though his efforts were derided as cosmetic by anti-apartheid groups.

The settlers and the conservative Afrikaners already living in the small Cape Province towns have given their homeland a name - Orandee - and set up committees to oversee its transition to ''independence.''

The Orandee Development Corps, which will oversee economic growth, envisages at least five separate major migrations to the area in the coming year.

Boshoff, a leader of rightwing attempts to revive the Afrikaners' calvinist political and social traditions of past centuries, is a major force behind the settlement. He is convinced thousands of Afrikaners will eventually make Orandee their home.

''This will be ours, a home, a place to work, rest, and share with one another '' he says.

Whites plan to induce, but not force, the relatively few blacks present in Orandee to leave the region. Hennie van Vuuren, the town clerk of the region's town Olifantshoek, concedes, ''You can not wish the blacks and coloreds (mixed-race people) away.'' But he notes they will be offered unspecified ''incentives'' to leave.

De Klerk has warned the Conservative Party and its more extreme followers not to create racial conflict. He has told them change is inevitable and irreversible. ''A new South Africa is coming. ... They can not fight it. They must accept it,'' de Klerk said.

But people like Markus Louw are undeterred. ''Let him accept it if he wants. We're going to take care of ourselves.''

(OCT. 29) UPI - A candidate for governor of Minnesota withdrew yesterday following charges that he carried on a nine-year affair with a woman during two marriages. Joe Grunseth quit as the Independent-Republican candidate. Grunseth almost dropped out of the race earlier when two women charged that he had a skinny-dipping party with teen-age girls in 1981. The Democratic candidate is incumbent Governor Rudy Perpich.

President Bush will use the eight days until the election campaigning for Republican candidates and trying to minimize harm from the budget crisis. Bush campaigns today in San Francisco and Oklahoma City. Bush said his approach will be to say if there were more Republicans in Congress to control spending, the budget problem never would have happened.

Politicians spent yesterday debating the merits of the 101st Congress, which has adjourned. House Speaker Thomas Foley said the Congress ''has an extraordinary record.'' Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell praised its passage of the budget plan. But Vice President Dan Quayle said- ''This is truly a great day. Congress has finally left town and America is now safe.''

The Norwegian government resigned today because of differences over Norway's relationship with the European commuity. The government was a three-party coalition led by Conservative Premier Jan Syse. Syse may try to stay in power by forming a new minority government of one party. The cabinet held weekend meetings but the three parties- Conservative, Center and Christian Democrat- failed to resolve their differences.

Black South African leader Nelson Mandela says apartheid can NOT be replaced by another system that reserves special rights for whites. Mandela told a Japanese news service he rejects a South African government proposal to gives whites in the upper house of parliament veto power. Mandela said- ''Apartheid can NOT be removed by other forms of apartheid.''

Sources in Beirut say the guns could be quiet by this weekend. Syrian and Lebanese representatives met in Damascus yesterday and agreed to speed up plans to demilitarize the city. A demilitarized zone is to be established to separate militia factions that have been fighting for 15 years. Shiite Amal militia leader Nabih Berri returned from the meeting and ordered his followers to prepare for demilitarization.

NEW YORK (OCT. 29) UPI - Twenty-nine percent of blacks questioned in a recent poll said they believe or think it is possible that the U.S. government created the AIDS virus in a laboratory to infect black people, The New York Times said Monday.

Only five percent of the white people who answered the question feel it could be or is true and 83 percent of all respondents said it is almost certainly not true, the paper said.

The Times said the survey showed that many blacks feel that the availability of drugs in their neighborhoods, as well as prosecution of black politicians, also are signs of a racist campaign by the government.

The article cited an interview with Keith Brown, a black man whose brother died of AIDS believing that his death was caused by racists.

Brown said the theory is based on historical biases created during slavery and by looking at statistics of who is suffering with the disease the most.

''You can't be black and not feel that AIDS is some kind of experiment, some kind of plot to hit undesirable minority population,'' Brown told The Times. ''I don't want to believe that AIDS is some kind of government plot. But, I guess I do. I do believe it.''

More than three-quarters of the black respondents said they believe or think it's possible that the U.S. government singles out black politicians for investigation to discredit them, The Times said.

In addition, the poll showed that 60 percent of the blacks questioned feel that the government might possibly or does, in fact, make sure that drugs are easily available in blacks communities, The Times said.

Of the black people polled, 77 percent said they believe the govenment is involved in targeting and investigating black politicians, in a way it does not do with white officials, as a means of discrediting them, The Times said.

Nearly half, or 47 percent, of all those questioned feel that the U.S. government might be engaged in targeting blacks, with 34 percent of whites polled saying they think it's true, the Times said.

On the drug issue, 32 percent of the total number of people questioned feel that U.S. policies are or could possibly be involved in deliberately providing easy access to drugs to residents in poor black neighborhoods, while only 16 percent of whites believed that.

The New York Times/CBS News poll of 1,047 adults who live in the city was conducted by telephone from June 17 through June 20. It surveyed the views of 408 blacks and 484 whites. The margin of sampling error for blacks was plus or minus five percentage points and for whites was plus or minus four percentage points, the newspaper said.

Opposition leaders in the Ivory Coast charge supporters of the west African government with fraud in yesterday's presidential election. Former President Ronald Reagan says re-shaping the economy is the proudest achievement of his presidential years. Reagan's memoirs have been excerpted in Time magazine. White House Chief of Staff John Sununu believes President Bush's poor showing in the polls is temporary. A poll shows that only 48 percent of Americans questions like the job Bush is doing. Bush lost some popularity because of the budget crisis. Sununu said- ''He cast some of his political capital for the benefit of the country.''

Members of Congress had to cast a controversial vote over the weekend on the budget. Now they have to face the voters. Senate Republican leader Robert Dole predicts that Americans will put up with the higher taxes in the budget to resolve the deficit crisis.

A Minnesota gubernatorial candidate has dropped out of the race because of several sex charges. ABIDJAN, IVORY COAST (OCT. 29) UPI - The ruling party claimed victory Monday in the country's first multiparty election, hours before the first results had been received from balloting that opposition politicians charged was rigged.

Overnight Sunday, only five results had been confirmed for the 175- member National Assembly, giving the 85-year-old president, Felix Houphouet-Boigny, up to 96 per cent in some constituencies.

The country's only daily national newspaper, Faternite-Matin, owned by the ruling Democratic Party (PDCI), headlined Houphouet-Boigny's victory in its first edition. Some polling stations were still operating at 11.30 p.m. Sunday when victory was already being claimed by the PDCI.

At a late night press conference Sunday, the leader of the opposition Ivorian Popular Front (FPI), Laurent Gbagbo, accused the PDCI of mounting large-scale fraud throughout the country to guarantee Houphouet-Boigny's victory in the polls, the first in which rival parties could compete.

''We knew that the PDCI would cheat because the PDCI is in a minority in the country,'' he said. ''The government, and in particular the ministry of the interior, is incompetant, incapable and irresponsible when it comes to planning elections.''

FPI figures from different parts of the Ivory Coast early Monday, based on the votes of less than 10 percent of the estimated 4 million voters, claimed the opposition had won 51 percent of the vote.

But the figures were based on a large FPI vote in Abidjan, the capital, and did not include many of the conservative rural districts that were expected to vote heavily in favor of Houphouet-Boigny.

Gbagbo accused the PDCI of filling ballot boxes with votes cast in its favor at polling stations throughout the country before voting began. He also said the PDCI created secret polling stations in all parts of the Ivory Coast in order to ensure that no FPI officials were there to prevent irregularities.

Modest Digbou, an FPI official in the Abidjan suburb of Yopougon, said he discovered 317 polling stations in the district, while only 186 appeared on the official list.

Gbagbo described the election as a ''masquerade,'' saying, ''There's a climate of insurrection in many parts of the country.''

The PDCI newspaper used this statement to accuse Gbagbo of ''inciting a civil war'' in the country.

The government has not responded to the accusations of fraud.

Claude Regnier, a senior French interior ministry official visiting from Paris said, ''Clearly the opposition has given instructions to sabotage the elections.''

In minor election-linked violence, police said anti-government protesters Sunday night attacked property owned by government supporters in some parts of Abidjan Sunday night. They reported about 15 FPI supporters were arrested after the disturbances.

(OCT. 29) UPI - Nobel Peace Prize winner Mother Teresa is reportedly the latest to outline a peace plan for Iraq's Saddam Hussein. That's the word from Daniel Lillis, deputy secretary-general of the international charity Refugee Year. He says his one-year-old group is trying to organize a regional peace conference to ease tensions in the Persian Gulf. .

All of this comes as the special envoy of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev ends a second round of talks with Saddam and heads home. Envoy Yevgeny Primokov left for Saudi Arabia after apparently failing to persuade Saddam to remove Iraqi troops from Kuwait. Some Arab newspapers described Primakov's mission as the ''last chance for peace.''

In Paris, Soviet President Gorbachev says war in the Persian Gulf is unacceptable. Gorbachev, who is holding two days of talks with French President Francois Mitterrand, today called on Saudi Arabia to work for an ''inter-Arab'' solution to the occupation of Kuwait. The 1990 Nobel Peace Prize winner says Iraq would more readily accept an Arab solution to the Gulf crisis than a peace plan offered by the United Nations or the West.

Differences over relationships with the European Community has led to collapse of Norway's three-party, Conservative-led coalition government. The Scandinavian country voted down membership in the E-C back in 1972 in a referendum. The latest crisis came on a fight to repeal Norwegian laws that limit foreign investment in the country. They were passed in the last century to keep foreign companies or individuals from taking control of Norwegian firms.

President Bush is back on the campaign trail visiting San Francisco today, stumping for Republican candidates in the November 6th elections. Bush hopes his Western trip will help ease voter anger over the budget wars that forced him to retreat on his 1988 promise NOT to raise taxes. The president spent the weekend in Hawaii, where he held a summit with leaders of Pacific island nations and campaigned for Republicans in between golf and swimming outings.

The Communists are about to lose an election in Georgia- in the U-S- S-R, that is. The balloting is for the first free parliamentary elections in the Soviet republic and voters were faced with choices from among 19-hundred candidates representing more than 30 parties. The latest check indicates a pro-independence opposition block may sweep the elections.

South African police say black gunmen killed 16 people and wounded 33 others in three attacks apparently to avenge the weekend stabbing of a Zulu man in the Soweto township. It's the worst urban violence in the area near Johannesburg in more than a month. In September, gunmen attacked a passenger train on the outskirts of Soweto killing 26 people.

Gusty winds hitting 40 miles an hour prompted a gale warning in Narragansett Bay off Providence, Rhode Island, this morning. Elsewhere, cool fall temperatures sent the mercury to record lows in the Midwest and thick fog blanketed the California coast from San Diego to Eureka. Visibility along the coast near San Diego was down to an eight of a mile in some areas.

HOUSTON (OCT. 29) UPI - Domestic and offshore drilling jumped last week, energy industry surveys showed Monday.

Baker Hughes Inc. said a total of 1,107 rotary rigs were operating in the United States last week compared with 1,089 the week before and 1, 010 the same week a year ago.

Offshore Data Service reported a strong six-rig increase in the Gulf of Mexico last week. That bumped the rig utilization rate in that area to 67.6 percent, with 144 rigs working out of a fleet of 213.

Two rigs came off contracts in European waters, leaving 128 rigs working there out of a fleet of 138. But the utilization rate is still healthy at 92.8 percent.

The increase in the Gulf of Mexico helped boost the worldwide utilization rate to 82.4 percent with 552 rigs working out of a total 670.

Other relevant rig counts included Louisiana, 156 last week, 147 the week before and 148 the same week a year ago; New Mexico, 72, 72 and 54; Texas 375, 374 and 320; and Canada, 143, 159 and 158.

NAIROBI, KENYA (OCT. 29) UPI - Belgian troops will pull out of the tiny east African nation of Rwanda this week, testing the strength of a fragile cease-fire in the month-old civil war, diplomats in Nairobi said Monday.

But two Belgian Air Force C130 transport planes were to be stationed somewhere in the region - probably Nairobi - diplomats said, to cope with any emergency evacuation from Rwanda.

One Nairobi-based diplomat said domestic pressure forced the Belgian pullout. ''It was extremely difficult for them to deploy troops abroad. It was very unpopular at home,'' he said.

Political analysts said the troop withdrawal will have more of a psychological than a military impact, perhaps propelling the rebels into breaking the fragile cease-fire.

Belgium sent 550 troops to its former colony to protect its 1,600 nationals living there shortly after civil war broke out in the northern part of the country. They were joined by some 300 French Legionnaires.

About 300 Belgian citizens have been evacuated. One senior diplomat in Nairobi who asked not to be identified, said others would be evacuated when they wished to leave.

The Belgian forces were expected to leave Friday, 10 days after a Belgian-Rwandan coordinated cease-fire took effect. There have been incidents of sporadic gunfire since the cease-fire was imposed.

''The cease-fire seems to be working today. Now let's see if the good faith is there'' to translate the cease-fire into a lasting peace agreement, the senior diplomat said.

The rebel invasion from neighboring Uganda is widely seen as a continuation of historical tribal warfare between the currently ruling Hutu tribe and the invading Tutsi tribe.

Led by Maj. Gen. Fred Rwigyema, the rebels have vowed to overthrow Rwandan President Juvenal Habyarimana's government, accusing it of corruption and cliquish politics.

The leaders of Rwanda, Burundi, Zaire and Uganda met last Saturday and agreed to send into Rwanda a regional cease-fire monitoring force followed by a peacekeeping force.

It was not known if the rebel Rwandese Patriotic Front would accept the presidents' decision.

''It's anyone's guess if the regional solution will work. But there has to be a cease-fire or else everyone will get massacred,'' one European diplomat said. ''(However,) if people are going to kill each other, there's nothing you can do about it.''

The senior diplomat said the cease-fire would have a better chance of surviving with a monitoring force in place. ''It seems a ceasefire could work with observers there. This could then lead to dialogue,'' the diplomat said.

''All the neighboring countries have an interest, because (the trouble) could spread to their countries. There are a lot of Tutsis all around,'' he said.

According to the United Nations High Commission for Refugees, there are some 500,000 Rwandan refugees living in the countries surrounding Rwanda.

Diplomats said the number is far higher, as the UNHCR does not take into account those who have been drafted into other national armies or those who have adopted their host country's nationality.

''But these people still consider themselves Rwandans and would return to Rwanda,'' said one diplomat monitoring the situation.

Most of the refugees fled tribal killings and food shortages in Rwanda in the late 1950s and 1960s.

Habyarimana has said his country - the most densely populated in Africa - had no room for returning exiles and has requested the host nations to grant citizenship to Rwandans living there.

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY (OCT. 29) UPI - Taxi and truck drivers returned to work Monday and mass transit and food delivery resumed normal service following three days of nationwide protests over a huge increase in gasoline prices.

The demonstrations, which included blockades of border crossings and major transportation routes, ended late Sunday after the government agreed to reduce by half a nearly 70 percent price hike that went into effect Friday.

Despite the agreement, economic officials warned of possible fuel shortages in the weeks ahead amid heavy criticism of the government's handling of the crisis.

''It seems that there is no limit to the demagogy which is fueled by power and haughtiness,'' said the newspaper Magyar Nemzet in an editoral lambasting the government for imposing the increases without consulting with opposition and labor leaders.

A signed commentary in the daily Magyar Hirlap faulted the ruling coalition for allowing the crisis to drag on for three days, throwing the country into turmoil, before agreeing to a compromise.

''The government, which is still learning democracy, will have to bear the serious responsibility for the crisis,'' the article stated. ''This government does not like negotiations and does not like to cooperate.''

The nationwide protests plunged Hungary into its worst crisis since last spring's democratic elections that swept Communists from power. The blockades of major transportation routes brought mass transit and interstate traffic to a standstill and prevented delivery of bread, milk and other foods.

All the barricades had been dismantled by Monday morning. Grocery stores in Budapest were being restocked and buses and trolleys resumed normal service.

The state-run oil and natural gas company said Monday there is enough gasoline to meet immediate needs, barring a spate of panic buying, but a spokesman warned Hungary has only enough reserves to last four to five days.

The official said contracted oil deliveries from the Soviet Union are expected to fall short again in November and December, forcing the company to buy additional crude oil at world market prices.

The price hikes announced Thursday stemmed from the cutback in Soviet oil deliveries and higher crude oil costs resulting from the Persian Gulf crisis, triggered by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

The cost of a quart of high octane gasoline rose Friday from 60 cents to $1, with similar increases for lower-grade fuel. Under the compromise reached Sunday night, prices will drop by .19 cents beginning Tuesday.

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (OCT. 29) UPI - Chrysler Corp., aggravated by high marketing costs, a sluggish economy and a loss in minivan production, Monday reported a third-quarter loss of $214 million, its second quarterly loss since 1982.

Chrysler's 1989 third quarter net earnings were $331 million, or $1.42 a share including a one-time after-tax gain of $309 million on the sale of 75 million shares of Mitsubishi Motors Corp. stock.

Without the gain, year-ago earnings for the nation's No. 3 carmaker would have been $22 million, or 10 cents a share.

Chrysler's sales during the third quarter totaled $6.5 billion, down from $7.6 billion a year ago.

Chrysler, which faces a midnight expiration of its labor contract covering about 67,000 U.S. hourly workers, is the first of the nation's Big Three carmakers to report third quarter earnings this week.

Chrysler still remained profitable for the first nine months of 1990, reporting net earnings of $37 million, or 17 cents a share, sharply reduced from net earnings of $1.02 billion, or $4.38 a share for the first nine months of 1989. Sales were $23 billion, compared with $27.2 billion a year ago.

''We anticipated 1990 would be a tough year for Chrysler and for the industry, so we launched our major cost cutting program over a year ago, '' Chrysler

Chairman Lee Iacocca said.

''We didn't anticipate the Gulf Crisis, the federal budget fiasco or the continued escalation in the (buyer) incentive wars, so we've increased our cost reduction goals to $2.5 billion over two years.''

Chrysler had intended to cut costs $1.5 billion by June 1991. The latest cost reduction program, announced by Iacocca earlier this year, is designed to make the carmaker lean enough to withstand the current market downturn.

By the end of the year, Chrysler's salaried employment levels will be about the same as in 1984, in spite of the addition of the American Motors business in 1987, Iacocca said.

''We face tremendous costs to fund our product plan and programs in the years ahead,'' he said. ''Even so, we are maintaining our aggressive, five-year product program, including nearly $7 billion in the next two years to continue the momentum that began with our new 1991 minivans.''

Chrysler's North American vehicle sales, however, fell 20.3 percent during the quarter to 346,818 units, from 434,982 units in the year ago quarter, partly due to a 56,000 units of lost minivan production.

Sales for the first nine months of the year fell 19.1 percent to nearly 1.32 million units, from 1.63 million units during the comparable period of 1989. In Europe, Chrysler's retail sales for the first nine months were up 9 percent.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 29) UPI - The Supreme Court Monday let stand a decision allowing a police officer to be sued for leaving a woman stranded on a roadway at night. The woman was raped while trying to walk home.

The case involves a Washington State trooper who arrested a man for driving while intoxicated at about 2:30 a.m. on Sept. 24, 1984, and locked the man's girlfriend out of the car and drove away with the DWI suspect in custody.

The woman, alone and 5 miles from home, began walking. She eventually accepted a ride from a man she claims raped her.

A federal district court ruled that Officer Steven Ostrander was free from prosecution under legal protection known as qualified immunity.

The district court found Ostrander owed no ''affirmative constitutional duty of protection'' to the woman involved.

But the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, by a 2-1 vote, reversed the lower court and ruled that Ostrander was not protected from prosecution because there was a question of whether he ''deprived her of a liberty interest protected by the Constitution by affirmatively placing her in danger and then abandoning her.''

''If Ostrander acted as (the woman) claims he did, Ostrander is not entitled to the defense of qualified immunity,'' the court majority wrote.

The woman claims she was denied her rights to liberty and personal security in violation of the Due Process Clause of the 14th Amendment. She is seeking unspecified damages.

In 1982, the Supreme Court adopted an objective qualified immunity standard stating that government officials performing discretionary functions generally are shielded from liability for civil damages ''insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known.''

NAGS HEAD, NC (OCT. 29) UPI - The severed bridge that is the only link between Hatteras Island and the mainland could be repaired within 45 days, state officials say.

Previous estimates indicated repairs could take at least six months. A dredge battered the bridge during a Friday storm, causing a 370-foot section of the structure to collapse.

Residents of Hatteras and nearby Ocracoke Island are anxious to see the Herbert C. Bonner Bridge repaired. Hundreds of cars were waiting Monday morning for ferry service across Oregon Inlet to the mainland, officials said.

Sunday night, more than 500 cars waited to catch ferries from Ocracoke to the mainland. Red Cross volunteers distributed food, coffee and blankets to motorists who waited in line throughout the night to keep their spots.

Officials told residents on Sunday it would take at least 30 hours to move everyone waiting in line off Ocracoke. Tourists were told to remain on Hatteras until the traffic thinned.

State and local officials met with residents Sunday at Cape Hatteras School to brief them on bridge repair plans and emergency response efforts. Thirty-nine people on Sunday stayed at the school, which was set up as a shelter over the weekend.

State Sen. Marc Basnight said repairs to the span could be completed by Christmas.

''Hopefully, the bridge can be opened again in 45 days,'' Basnight said. ''That is the working schedule.''

Basnight noted bad weather could delay the project. Officials have estimated it will cost close to $2.6 million to repair the bridge.

Hatteras Island's 5,000 residents have had to cope with widespread power outages, a lack of phone service and sporadic water shortages. Supplies and generators are being ferried to the island.

Lines of motorists waiting for ferries on Sunday stretched up to three miles.

BANGKOK, Thailand (OCT. 29) UPI - Thailand and Vietnam agreed Monday to leave minor points in a proposed Cambodian peace settlement to the disputing Cambodian factions and turn their attention to economic development, officials said.

''Vietnam wants to expand economic cooperation with ASEAN (the Association of Southeast Asian Nations), particularly Thailand,'' Thai government spokesman Suvit Yodmanee said after about 90 minutes of talks between Thai leaders and Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach.

Thach and Thai Prime Minister Chatichai Choonhavan agreed that both sides have carried out their obligations to help set up a Supreme National Council to represent Cambodia's sovereignty until U.N.- supervised election can be held, Suvit said.

''Vietnam's duty has already ended on the Cambodian issue, they (Cambodians) must negotiate by themselves,'' Suvit quoted Thach as saying.

He said Thach proposed that Vietnam's Prime Minister Do Muoi meet with Chatichai in order to strengthen bilateral economic relations.

''Our premier doesn't object it and welcomes a meeting,'' Suvit said.

Thach said Do Muoi would visit Thailand ''soon'' at Chatichai's invitation.

Improvements in Thai-Vietnamese relations have been hampered by the Cambodian conflict which pits the Phnom Penh government installed by Vietnam's 1978 invasion against a three-party resistance coalition backed by Thailand.

Both sides have accepted in principle a U.N. peace framework, but progress has bogged down over the details of implementation, including the leadership of the SNC.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 29) UPI - The Supreme court Monday let stand a decision allowing a court to tack extra years onto a convict's sentence for using a firearm in commission of a felony, even if use of the gun was never proved at trial.

The court refused to review the Montana statute allowing up to 10 years additional prison time for a criminal found to have used a firearm in committing a crime.

The state defines the firearm usage as a ''sentencing factor'' rather than a separate crime, and thus contends evidence of gun use need not be separately submitted to a jury for factual determination.

The case involves Thomas Krantz, convicted in 1987 of one count of robbery of a Missoula pizza business and one count of accountability for robbery for driving a getaway car in a motel robbery.

Krantz was sentenced to 30 years on each count, to run concurrently, and a separate 10 years for weapon usage on each count. The weapon usage sentences are concurrent with each other but consecutive to the 30-year term, meaning Krantz's sentence is 40 years.

Krantz claims the state violated his Sixth Amendment right to be advised of the charges against him and added the 10 years to his prison term without ever proving he used a gun.

The state contends it alleged the use of a weapon in its affidavit and witnesses repeatedly testified that Krantz and his accomplice used a handgun during the robberies.

The Montana Supreme Court found the state was in error by failing to officially charge use of a weapon in its charging document. But by a 5-2 vote it upheld the sentence, finding that Krantz had ''actual notice that use of a weapon would be considered during sentencing.''

Krantz claimed the weapon statute must be viewed as defining a ''separate crime'' or an element of an aggravated version of the underlying crime, and so ''full due process protections'' are legally necessary and the statute is unconstitutional.

The state says its weapons provision may be seen as a ''sentencing factor'' requiring only minimal due process protections. It also noted that in this case, Krantz could have been sentenced to a total of 90 years.

''A state should not be allowed to write a criminal statute and, simply by directing that it be placed with the sentencing provisions, absolve itself of the burden of charging and proving the act it wishes to punish,'' Krantz's attorney wrote the court. ''To do so would undermine the Sixth Amendment requirement that the defendant be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation against him and the right to a trial by jury.''

BONN, GERMANY (OCT. 29) UPI - German communists expressed optimism Monday over their chances of returning deputies to Parliament in the Dec. 2 national elections, despite a widening scandal involving party finances.

In Berlin, a public prosecutor's office spokesman announced further investigations into allegations that communist politicians illegally transferred $71 million in bank accounts.

But Gregor Gysi, who heads the party - renamed the Party for Democratic Socialism - said he had no doubt the PDS will win some parliamentary seats at the elections, the first national voting since Oct. 3 unification.

''I am confident that we will make it,'' he said.

Gysi rejected calls from other parties that the PDS disband, claiming the party ''represents a relatively large group of people in eastern Germany, who do not have a spokesman in Parliament.''

''We will not disband the party,'' he said at a news conference held in Bonn to kick off the party's election campaign in western Germany.

The party's isolation in German politics deepened last week when two party officials, Wolfgang Langnitschke and treasurer Wolfgang Pohl, were arrested after they admitted illegally transferring $71 million from party funds to foreign bank accounts.

''Fearing that the party would be banned and its property confiscated, we were exclusively concerned with securing funds for future party work,'' Pohl said Friday.

Gysi estimated the party's resources at $1 billion and said the party already has given most of its holdings to the state.

Police have not uncovered evidence linking Gysi to the transfer of funds.

Gysi has headed the PDS since last December when the Stalinist leadership of the party - then called the Socialist Unity Party - was forced to resign after ruling the country for 40 years.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 29) UPI - The Supreme Court Monday refused to review a claim by a convicted sex offender that the Illinois rape shield law barring a woman's prior sexual history from being exposed at a sexual assault trial is unconstitutional.

The high court rejected arguments in a case brought by Santiago Sandoval, who claimed the rape shield statute denied him an opportunity to question the credibility of the woman who accused him of rape.

Rape shield laws, now used in virtually every state and by the federal government and the military, were established to protect a woman from having her past sexual activity from being exposed at a rape trial and to prevent a defendant from using it to harass and humiliate her.

Sandoval was accused of raping his girlfriend, whom he had lived with at one time, after she refused to have sex with him.

She testified that on New Year's Eve 1986, she and Sandoval were at a bar and then went back to his apartment. She said he raped her and then she left his home with only her undergarments and sought help from a neighbor who called police.

Sandoval was convicted by a Lake County, Ill., jury in 1987 of sexual assault and battery and was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

Sandoval claimed he was denied a fair trial because the judge did not permit another man to testify about his sexual relationship with the woman. Sandoval's attorney claims the man would have testified to having engaged in a sexual act with the woman that she told the jury she performed only with Sandoval - thus casting doubt on her overall truthfulness.

Sandoval, who had dated the woman for several months before the rape charge, claimed she made up the story as an act of vengeance when he said their relationship was ending.

His attorneys argued the rape shield law was being abused and should not apply because the woman voluntarily brought up her past sexual activity in testimony and thus ''opened the door'' to an inquiry at trial that could have cast doubt on her credibility.

On appeal, Sandoval's convictions were reversed and the case was sent back for a new trial. The Illinois appeals court ruled that the trial judge should have permitted the male witness to testify about his sexual relationship with the woman.

It also said a witness who might have compromised the woman's claim that she had not dated since the alleged rape also should have been allowed to testify.

''In this present case ... the victim, by her own action at trial, rendered her past sexual activities relevant and thus admissible,'' the appeals court wrote. ''Since credibility of the witness was the crucial issue in the case, (Sandoval) was severely prejudiced when he was precluded from impeaching (the woman's) testimony about her past activity.''

It also ruled that to interpret the law to never allow testimony about a woman's sexual past beyond her relationship with an alleged assailant ''would encourage witnesses in these circumstances to testify without regard for the truth, secure in the knowledge that they were insulated by the rape shield statute from confrontation with any untruths they may choose to express.''

The Illinois Supreme Court, however, reinstated Sandoval's convictions, ruling that the rape shield law clearly holds that past sexual history is inadmissible except concerning the sexual relationship with the accused.

Sandoval's lawyers asked the high court to rule whether the Illinois rape shield statute is unconstitutional, or whether it violated the Sixth Amendment and 14th Amendment in how it was applied in this case.

In asking the high court not to review the case, the state of Illinois wrote that rape shield laws ''plainly promote accurate fact- finding by excluding evidence of unchastity which virtually all jurisdictions have determined is irrelevant in light of contemporary sexual mores. A defendant's attempt to emphasize the issue of chastity risks unjust acquittals.''

WASHINGTON (OCT. 29) UPI - The Supreme Court Monday let stand a decision that law enforcement authorities can keep records of an arrest and indictment even if they stemmed from an illegal police search.

The case grew out of the Jan. 22, 1984, arrest of Hughes Bagley Jr., by police in Iowa on weapons charges. Police opened a locked briefcase belonging to Bagley without obtaining a search warrant, and the evidence was later thrown out of court.

The government dismissed its indictment against Bagley, but he asked a federal district court to go further and order the government to expunge all evidence of the arrest and indictment from its records.

The court, however, denied the motion, noting the indictment included ''valuable law enforcement records'' and that Bagley had failed to show the records would be misused by the government. It also stated expunging is normally considered only in ''extreme circumstances'' and a request to expunge records must pass a ''balancing test'' against the government's interest in keeping records, and this did not qualify.

The 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the lower court's decision.

Bagley contended that because the entire record of his arrest and indictment was based on a constitutional violation by police, he was entitled to have his record expunged. He also contended the decision not to expunge the records violated his Fourth Amendment right to unreasonable searches and seizures and stood in contrast to the rulings of other circuit courts.

The Justice Department, in asking the high court not to hear the case, argued that retaining such arrest records ''serves the important function of promoting effective law enforcement.''

WASHINGTON (OCT. 29) UPI - The Supreme Court Monday refused to become involved in a dispute over whether public school districts not in violation of court desegregation orders can be ordered to accept students from neighboring school districts that are in violation.

The court refused to hear arguments in the case out of Kansas City, Mo.

The 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals had reversed a district court's ruling against 134 black students from an inner-city school district and ordered a lower federal court to develop a voluntary interdistrict transfer program with schools in the suburbs.

The case rose out of the 1985 court-ordered desegregation of the Kansas City, Missouri School District. The order included a provision that the state actively seek cooperation of suburban school districts in the area to participate in a voluntary inter-district transfer program.

The order would require the state to pay for the transportation and tuition of black students who transfer from a city school in which their race is in the majority to a suburban school in which their race is in the minority.

The transfer would be based on available space in the suburban schools. The participating suburban school districts would agree to accept a student unless he or she had a history of serious discipline problems.

In 1986, the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the use of the so-called voluntary inter-district transfer program. Two years later, 134 black students filed suit after applying for and being denied admission into three suburban school districts.

In fact, not a single suburban school district has accepted a single black city resident under the 1985 proposal.

The district court upheld the rights of the suburban schools to reject the students, noting that a finalized inter-jurisdictional program had yet to be established, including the question of whether the state actually would pay transportation and tuition costs.

The appeals court then ruled this spring that even though the plan was supposed to be voluntary and operated by the state, it was time for the lower court to step in and implement its own plan. ''After five years, we believe that further delay cannot be countenanced,'' the appeals court wrote.

The three school districts appealed the case to the Supreme Court, arguing that they should not be forced to cooperate in a desegregation program meant to benefit another district when they are not in violation of court desegregation orders and did nothing to cause racial problems in the city schools.

In asking the high court to step in, the school districts - North Kansas City, Independence and Lee's Summit - noted the dissent of 8th Circuit Judge Pasco Bowman - who said the court's rationale had an ''Alice-in-Wonderland'' quality.

''On the one hand, the suburban districts, not having been found guilty of a constitutional violation ... cannot judicially be compelled to take part in an inter-district remedy,'' wrote Bowman. ''On the other hand, our court has made them an offer they can't refuse: unless they start 'voluntarily' admitting transfers from the Kansas City School District, they will be adjudged to be violating the Equal Protection Clause, and then will be subject to full remedial powers of the federal courts. I think no more than this need be said to demonstrate the unmistakably coercive nature of the panel opinion.''

An attorney for the black students contends the suburban school districts violated their own admission standards by refusing to allow inner-city blacks into their schools, but said the school districts jumped the gun in asking for high court review.

''No court has ordered any of the petitioners to participate in a voluntary inter-district transfer plan,'' wrote the attorney. ''Nor has any court made findings of fact adverse to petitioners. Rather, the court of appeals has simply directed the district court to inquire into the motivation that has led the (suburban school districts) to follow long held policies and admit white inter-district transfer students but to abandon those same policies and refuse to admit black transfer students.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 29) UPI - The Supreme Court Monday let stand an Arizona ruling that a private hospital can be required to give emergency medical care to a patient even if it cannot obtain payment from the patient or reimbursement from the state.

The court refused to hear an appeal by St. Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center in Phoenix of a decision by Maricopa County not to reimburse the hospital for some $50,000 in bills incurred in 1985 through care of a patient the hospital claims was legally indigent.

The county, however, said because the patient's wife owned property valued at more than the level at which the county would then reimburse a hospital, the patient did not qualify for Medicaid.

The hospital sued Maricopa County in an effort to recover the $50, 000, arguing that under Arizona's community property laws, the patient - Donald Neu - had no legal right to his wife's separate assets and the hospital had no right to collect its charges from Neu's wife.

The Arizona courts, however, decided against the hospital, ruling that the total separate assets of a husband and wife could be used to exclude them from qualifying for Medicaid - even if only the legally communal assets of a couple could be seized by a hospital as payment.

Neu's wife, who owned a home, a Cadillac, two other vehicles and a house trailer, as well as stock in a shopping center, refused to pay, leaving the hospital with no legal recourse to pay its bills, it claimed.

''In some cases, spouses will no doubt decline to pay,'' the Arizona Court of Appeals wrote in its decision. ''It is not, however, irrational that the legislature expect that those possessing sufficient separate assets will voluntarily pay for a spouse's necessary medical care.''

The hospital, asking the high court to review the case, said: ''Under the reasoning of the Arizona courts the government may compel a private hospital to provide free medical care while simultaneously denying the hospital any ability, even theoretical, to obtain reimbursement.

''The court should grant the writ in order to consider whether the public's admitted need for emergency health care inherently confers a carte blanche right on the government to force hospitals to render those services for free.''

But in asking the court not to hear the case, the county wrote that Neu's household ''had clear title to several vehicles and recreational items like a trailer, as well as an expensive house and a shopping center. These are not the kind of people (the 'poorest of the poor') that the Legislature had in mind to pay for.''

Arizona has since amended its law to exempt the first $75,000 of a spouse's separate assets from the indigency calculation for community property.

Justice Byron White voted to hear the case, but four votes are needed for the court to consider an issue.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 29) UPI - The Supreme Court Monday let stand a decision that a jury member's personal investigation of part of a crime scene during a trial did not constitute grounds for overturning a murder conviction.

A Maryland man, Timothy Scott Sherman, claims he was wrongfully convicted of killing his parents because a juror at this trial independently visited the cite where he allegedly hid the murder weapon.

During Sherman's 1988 trial in Harford County, Md., a juror and his wife visited the property of Sherman's grandparents, who also were his neighbors, to look at a pine tree where prosecutors said Sherman hid the shotgun he used to slay his parents.

Sherman was 19 and living at home when his parents were shot to death while in bed on Oct. 12, 1987. He was convicted of two counts of first- degree murder and sentenced to two life terms in prison.

Normally at criminal trials jurors are ordered not to discuss the case and to carefully avoid outside access to information about the case even through media accounts.

Sherman, who maintains his innocence, claims the unauthorized visit to the scene violated his Sixth Amendment right to a fair trial and is grounds for granting a new trial.

The juror disclosed his visit to the site after Sherman was convicted but shortly before he was sentenced.

The trial court ruled the juror's visit did not influence the outcome of the case and the guilty verdict should stand.

The Maryland Court of Special Appeals upheld the verdict despite Sherman's contention the juror's action not only violated the Sixth Amendment but also violated the due process clause of the 14th Amendment.

In asking the high court to review the case, Sherman's lawyer argued the evidence at trial was unconstitutionally ''supplemented by the un-cross-examined, unsupervised, unauthorized procurement of information by (the juror) through his own investigation.''

Justices Byron White and Thurgood Marshall voted to hear the case, but by Supreme Court rules it takes four votes for a case to be accepted.

NAIROBI, KENYA (OCT. 29) UPI - After being held for three days without charge a British journalist working for the British Broadcasting Corp. radio was charged Monday with working in the country illegally.

Sulaiman salim Sulaiman, who arrived in Kenya less than a month ago and had applied for a work permit but not yet received it, denied the charge.

He was granted bail of $1,000 with a Kenyan surety of the same amount. His case was set for Dec. 3.

Suleiman was arrested last Friday at Nairobi's downtown Press Center and held in jail until his court appearance.

Government prosecutor George Wanjala told the court Suleiman was found in the Press Center ''in employment as a correspondent of the BBC without authorization to do so.''

A senior official of the Kenya African National Union Party accused BBC reporters of being dissidents and called on the government to take drastic steps against the British government-supported firm.

''For a long time the BBC was working against Kenyan interests and taking up the position of a propaganda weapon against Kenya,'' Jospeh Kamotho, KANU's secretary-general, told the official government Kenya Times newspaper.

''There is no way we will allow aliens to interfere with the internal affairs of our country. Our national sovereignty, integrity and freedom cannot be compromised,'' the Kenya Times quoted Kamotho as saying.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 29) UPI - The Supreme Court Monday agreed to resolve a dispute over what criteria must be met by a coal miner or the miner's family before they can qualify for benefits for a disability caused by black lung disease.

The court agreed to decide whether some appeals courts are erring in their interpretation of the Black Lung Benefits Act, which established a federal program to provide benefits to coal miners and their families in the event of disability or death due to pneumoconiosis, or black lung disease, caused by mining.

The Justice Department says the court's interpretation could have an immediate impact on 2,000 to 3,500 claims each valued at between $118, 000 and $185,000 that remain in litigation.

At issue is what standards a miner or the miner's family must meet before being eligible for benefits, most of which are paid by the coal companies or their insurers.

Coal companies claim the act has been wrongfully interpreted by the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and the 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to allow awarding of benefits in cases where total disability from the disease is not present or disability is unrelated to black lung disease.

The 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals has ruled differently.

Black lung disease is a disabling and sometimes fatal respiratory ailment caused by prolonged inhalation of coal dust.

Under the Black Lung Benefits Act, disability claims filed by June 30, 1973, were considered by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Claims filed after that date would be considered by the Department of Labor.

However, the two departments had varying regulations on determining whether someone was entitled to benefits under the act, and interpretation of those regulations has caused havoc in the nation's court system.

The Supreme Court, which agreed to hear three cases in a consolidated manner, was expected to announce a decision on the issue sometime next year.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 29) UPI - The Supreme Court Monday let stand a ruling that a prison system cannot force new inmates to cut their hair if it would violate their religious practices.

The case was brought by the New York State Department of Correctional Services after the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals outlawed the prison system's haircut requirement as a violation of the religious rights of Rastafarian inmates.

Rastafarianism is a religion based in Jamaica. Among its tenets is that men should neither cut nor comb their hair.

The New York prison system had required all new inmates to undergo close-cropped haircuts for photograph identification purposes. Inmates could then grow their hair to any length.

A group of Rastafarian inmates brought legal action in 1979 in an effort to have the policy changed, claiming it violated their rights under the First and 14th amendments. The case was dormant until 1985 as a settlement was discussed but never reached.

In 1986 a federal district court granted a preliminary injunction barring the prison system from enforcing its haircut requirement for incoming Rastafarian inmates.

During court proceedings in August and September 1987, state corrections officials testified that a short-hair photograph is needed to keep an escaped inmate from avoiding recapture simply by cutting his hair.

The officials argued that taking an inmate's picture with his hair pulled back did not adequately reveal the features that would be exposed in a short haircut.

But the district court decided for the inmates, ruling that pictures of inmates with their hair pulled back was ''adequate for security purposes.'' The appeals court upheld that ruling.

In asking the Supreme Court to review, New York's corrections department said the decision of the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals conflicted with decisions in four other circuits imposing even more stringent prison haircut requirements.

PARIS (OCT. 29) UPI - France, responding to an Iraqi request, said Monday it will send a certain amount of medicine to Baghdad aboard the Iraqi Airways plane scheduled to fly some 300 French and 10 Greek hostages to Paris.

A spokesman for the French Foreign Ministry also confirmed the remaining half-dozen diplomats at the French Embassy in Kuwait City will fly back with the hostages, but said Paris was officially leaving open its diplomatic mission in the embattled emirate.

''Departure formalities are proceeding normally in Kuwait for the moment, Foreign Ministry spokesman Daniel Bernard said. ''French ''

But Bernard added the expected time of arrival in Paris had been delayed again. A number of sources and the French media said the Iraqi Airways plane was expected to land at Charles de Gaulle Airport outside Paris late Monday.

The national airline Air France decided to reserve one of its major terminals for the Iraqi plane, forcing more than 50 European flights to leave from other facilities at the airport. Some 3,000 people, including journalists and family members, were expected to greet the hostages, whose arrival was being covered live on television.

In addition to the estimated 300 French hostages and the six French diplomats, 10 Greek citizens were given permission to fly to freedom aboard the chartered Iraqi Airways plane, a Greek government official said in Athens.

At a joint news conference with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev in Rambouillet on the southern outskirts of Paris, President Francois Mitterrand said he rejoiced over the expected hostage return.

''But we will not rejoice completely until the other hostages have refound their countries,'' Mitterrand added.

For his part Gorbachev pledged to continue to work for the release of some 3,000 Soviet citizens from Iraq. ''It is amoral to use people as hostages for political ends,'' Gorbachev said.

The French Foreign Ministry spokesman said France had informed the U.N. Sanctions Committee of its intention to ship the medicines as Iraq had requested.

French officials said Sunday that Iraq had demanded the French government send medicines to Baghdad aboard the plane scheduled to fly the hostages to freedom.

''The pertinent sections of the U.N. resolutions foresee a possible exception for medicines,'' the Foreign Ministry spokesman said. ''We have therefore informed the Sanctions Committee that there will be medicines aboard the plane.''

The Iraqi ambassador to France, Abdel Razzak al Hachimi, said the medicines had been ''bought and paid by the Iraqi government'' and the decision to allow their shipment ''has no relation to the permission granted by Iraq for French nationals to return to their country.''

There was no reaction from the sanctions committee itself. The group, created under U.N. Security Council resolution 661, is charged with overseeing application of the sanctions. Resolution 661 states medicines are not included in the embargo against Iraq.

The spokesman refused to reveal the amount of medicines to be shipped to Iraq, but said under terms of the U.N. resolutions, the Iraqi plane will be inspected by French and U.N. officials before it is allowed to take off for its return flight to Baghdad.

NASHVILLE, TN (OCT. 29) UPI - The state of Tennessee went on trial Monday on charges of failing to provide decent public schools for all its children.

The accusers are parents and teachers who say the state's school funding formula denies equal educational opportunity to tens of thousands of students only because they live in poorer, rural parts of Tennessee.

Their civil lawsuit was joined by 75 rural school jurisdictions across the state since it was filed in July 1988. It asks Judge C. Allen High of Davidson County Chancery Court to declare Tennessee's education system unconstitutional and to order the Legislature to create a better one.

''We're going to show these students are suffering, and there's no justification for able-bodied students to be discriminated against,'' said Lewis Donelson, lawyer for the rural schools who delivered opening arguments in the suit Monday.

The suit challenges the state's education system on two grounds. First, it charges the education funding system violates the state Constitution's guarantees of equal protection under the law by providing more money for richer school jurisdictions.

In 1964, when small towns still bustled with business, the Legislature began letting cities and counties levy sales taxes for education. Since then, interstate highways have led to regional shopping malls, robbing small towns of much of their sales tax revenue. This tax along with the property tax now provides much of the money for schools in Tennessee.

''Unfortunately, the ability of locales to raise funds through those two means varies greatly across the state,'' said Buck Cole, another lawyer for the rural schools. ''Many of the jurisdictions have no industry. They are basically agrarian economies with low property values.

''And some jurisdictions just basically have no retailers. At one point this was described as the Wal-Mart case. You knew you were really down and out and needed to join this suit if you didn't have a Wal-Mart in your jurisdiction.''

The suit's second contention is that the state is failing to meet the requirement in the state Constitution to maintain and support a public school system.

In relatively affluent Oak Ridge, $3,889 a year is spent on each pupil in the public schools. But rural Hancock County can spend only $2, 133 and Hickman County only $2,152. In some years, schools in rural Tennessee could not open on time or run buses or pay teachers.

''It's worse than segregation,'' said Mike Antrican, the school superintendent in Hancock County. ''These kids do not have an equal opportunity. We don't have art classes in our schools. We don't have music classes in our schools. We don't have band. We don't even have libraries in some of our schools.''

Gov. Ned McWherter has agreed the education system is unfair and he has promised to propose radical changes next year at a cost of up to $700 million.

''The issue is whether it ought to be left to the Legislature and the executive branch to decide these matters or whether the court steps in,'' Assistant State Attorney General Rachel Steele said. ''The education part of our state budget is huge, and if the court takes over, it means the Legislature loses control over that. This is a democracy and our elected officials ought to decide policy.''

Similar suits have been decided in the Supreme Courts of 25 states, and 15 have ruled in favor of the states by upholding the constitutionality of their school systems. In the 10 cases the states have lost, the courts have maintained some control over the education systems, and some have gone so far as to outline curriculum, Steele said.

The state will argue that its funding system is not discriminatory, but ''a system of shared responsibility for education,'' Steele said. And the state will maintain it is meeting the mandates of the state Constitution because the only requirement is to ''provide a system of free public schools,'' she said. The constitutions of states that have lost such suits require ''efficient'' or ''adequate'' school systems.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 29) UPI - The Supreme Court Monday let stand a ruling that police in a jurisdiction where handguns can legally be owned cannot stop a motor vehicle based solely on information that its driver may be carrying a pistol.

The court refused to review a case involving police in Lowell, Mass., who arrested a man for carrying a handgun without a license after stopping his pickup truck and conducting a search.

The stop, however, was based entirely on a telephone call from a convenience store clerk that the man had a derringer protruding from his back pocket when he was walking through the store.

A local court threw out the evidence on the grounds that it was the product of an illegal police search in violation of the Fourth Amendment. The Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts agreed, noting that the suspect, Paul Couture, had threatened no one with the gun and that police had no evidence he was carrying the pistol without a license.

After stopping Couture's truck, police found a loaded .38-caliber pistol under the front seat. Couture admitted he did not have a license to carry the gun.

''The police in this case had no reason to believe, before conducting the search of the vehicle, that the defendant had no license to carry a firearm,'' wrote the state's highest court. ''A police officer's knowledge that an individual is carrying a handgun, in and of itself, does not furnish probable cause to believe that the individual is illegally carrying a gun.''

The Massachusetts attorney general, in asking the high court to review the case, argued that the state's stringent gun-control law - a one-year mandatory minimum jail sentence for anyone carrying a handgun without a license in a vehicle - gave police the right to conduct such a search. They also noted the ''epic proportions'' to which handgun violence has risen and a state law granting broad police power to ask for evidence of a handgun license.

''There is a diminished, if not total lack of legitimate expectation of privacy here because of: the inherent dangerousness of firearms; the pervasive regulation of firearms; the statute entitling a police officer to demand a license; and the manner in which the firearm was displayed in a public store '' the state argued.

Justice Harry Blackmun voted to hear the case, but it takes four votes for the high court to accept an issue.

NEW DELHI, INDIA (OCT. 29) UPI - Authorities enforced a curfew in several areas of northern India Monday, curtailing road and rail traffic and setting up roadblocks in a bid to ease a religious dispute involving Hindus and Moslems that threatens to bring down the government.

The state of Uttar Pradesh was virtually isolated on the eve of the scheduled beginning of construction of a Hindu temple to replace a Moslem mosque, officials said.

Communal clashes have caused scores of deaths in fighting with police and the arrests of more than 80,000 people, authorities said.

A controversial campaign by the right-wing Hindu Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) to relocate a 16th century mosque and build in its place a temple in the Hindu holy town of Ayodhya, 345 miles southeast of New Delhi, has sparked the worst political crisis of Prime Minister V.P. Singh's 11-month-old government.

BJP president L.K. Advani was arrested last week after he failed to heed a government warning to call off the plan. The arrest led to clashes between Hindus and Moslems in the Rajasthan state capital of Jaipur, and police shootings left 68 people dead.

The arrest also prompted the BJP to withdraw its support from Singh's National Front five-party coalition government.

The BJP has 86 members in the Lok Sabha, or the lower house of Parliament, and its support is necessary for the survival of Singh's coalition. The BJP is not a member of the coalition, but extended crucial support to the government.

President Ramaswamy Venkataraman subsequently asked Singh to prove his majority in Parliament on Nov. 7. Many analysts believe the prime minister will fail to do so.

Despite Advani's arrest, BJP leaders plan to begin construction of the temple in Ayodhya on Tuesday. But security forces erected road blocks at all entry points along the state's border and prevented vehicles from entering. Train services to Ayodhya and nearby towns were canceled, a government official said.

''Authorities do not want volunteers to gather in large numbers because of fear of violence,'' said a government spokesman. ''The aim is to prevent vehicles from moving from one place to another.''

Despite tight security, violence erupted Monday in the Uttar Pradesh towns of Lalitpur, Lucknow, Muzaffarnagar, Jhansi and Rampur, the Press Trust of India news agency said.

Three people died and more than 100 were injured in clashes, apparently between Hindus and Moslems, over the temple issue, the news agency said.

The worst incident occurred in Etawah district where violence left at least 65 people injured, the government spokesman said.

In an attempt to restore peace, authorities arrested more than 10,000 people who volunteered to help begin construction of the temple and who poured into Uttar Pradesh en route to Ayodhya, the Press Trust said.

The government spokesman said the arrests brought to more than 80,000 the number number of people taken into custody over the last few days.

Hindu radicals claim that the 460-year-old mosque that occupies the Ayodhya site was built by the Moghul emperor Babbar after he destroyed a temple marking the birthplace of Lord Rama, one of the most important gods in the vast Hindu pantheon.

Moslem leaders refute the claim and contend that no temple ever existed at the disputed site.

The Ayodhya dispute has been smouldering since February 1986, when a court agreed to allow Hindus to worship in the mosque. The move led to widespread communal riots in northern India.

PHILADELPHIA (OCT. 29) UPI - More than $650,000 in emergency funding from Congress will repair Independence Hall's leaky roof, but will not allow the reopening of eight buildings shut down for the winter, officials said Monday.

The funding approved over the weekend by Congress was announced by Rep. Thomas Foglietta, D-Philadelphia, and Independence National Historical Park Superintendent Hobart Cawood.

''This is considerable help,'' Cawood said at a news conference in front of Independence Hall, where the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution were signed.

Although the funding will not be used to reopen the closed buildings, Cawood said it will help bolster morale at the park, which was completely shut down for three days this month during Capitol Hill battles over the budget.

''It helps a great deal to have this kind of announcement,'' Cawood said. ''We've sort of been demoralized by being off-again, on-again as to whether we're closed or open.''

The money will go to repair the hall's leaky wooden roof and make sidewalk and street light repairs to a portion of Independence Mall where visitors are now warned to tread at their own risk.

But it will not enable visitors to see all the facilities at the park, one of the nation's top tourist destinations.

Eight of 18 public buildings at the park were shut down Oct. 1 because of a federal budget shortfall.

''We want to get the buildings back open, and have them open year round,'' Cawood said. He said it will take an additional $1.5 million a year to staff all the buildings year round.

Foglietta said Congress in addition to the repair funding, also approved an extra $200,000 in operating funds for the park.

About 5.5 million visitors come to the park each year, and up to 950,000 tour Independence Hall.

WARSAW, Poland (OCT. 29) UPI - A Polish financial official Monday welcomed legislation approved by Congress that would allow a reduction in Poland's debt to the United States, saying it would give the economy ''breathing space.''

Just $4 billion of Poland's $42.6 billion foreign debt is owed to the United States.

But Dariusz Kosidlo, chief of the finance ministry's debt department, said he was happy that a foreign aid package adopted by Congress late Saturday allows for opening negotiations on the reduction of Poland's debt.

''A partial reduction of Poland's debt would give the economy some breathing space. The money could be spent on investments in the economy, on ... its development,'' Kosidlo said.

Poland is seeking an 80 percent reduction of its total debt, most of which is owed to Germany, $7.2 billion.

The interest on the debt is $3.6 billion a year, a burden beyond the means of the ailing post-communist economy now being overhauled under a reform program approved by the International Monetary Fund.

Poland owes $31 billion to the Paris Club, a group of governments guaranteeing the loans, and $9.8 billion to commercial banks that form the London Club. The rest of the debt is owed to former East Bloc countries.

Earlier this year the Paris Club postponed interest payments on Poland's debt until Aug. 1, 1991. The group represents governments of 14 industrialized creditor nations - Austria, Belgium, Britain, Canada, France, West Germany, Italy, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and United States.

Kosidlo said talks are under way between Poland and Western creditors to obtain further rescheduling of the interest payment but the priority is to negotiate a reduction of the debt.

Gazeta said Congress made it clear that a reduction in Poland's debt hinges on the continuation of the present government economic policy and the maintenance of democracy in Poland.

#90302u1158 10/29/1990 ~United Press International
ISLAMABAD, PAKISTAN (OCT. 29) UPI - Pakistan hinted Monday it may stop interest payments on its foreign debt unless Washington restored military and economic aid it suspended this month amid fear Islamabad is developing nuclear weapons.

''We have no choice - either we starve our people or stop paying the interest '' caretaker Interior Minister Mian Zahid Safraz told a news conference.

''I want to stress here that we should not be pushed into a corner from where we are compelled to revise our relationship with the United States.''

He said almost 90 percent of the U.S. aid to Pakistan is consumed by interest payments on its $15 billion foreign debt.

Islamabad was expecting $548 million next year as part of a six-year, $4billion aid package from Washington. But on Oct. 1, the U.S. aid was suspended because President Bush was unable to certify to Congress that Pakistan was not developing nuclear weapons.

Pakistan has long been suspected of attempting to acquire nuclear weapons to maintain a balance of power with India, its neighbor and foe in three wars. India exploded a nuclear device in 1974.

In Washington, a spokesman for Rep. Stephen Solarz, chairman of the House Asian and Pacific Affairs Subcomittee, said Monday that Solarz would hold hearings Friday on the issue of U.S. aid.

Solarz, in a weekend news release, said, ''Pakistanis should be under no illusions on this score: the United States cares deeply about stemming the spread of nuclear weapons, and neither the administration nor the Congress is prepared to turn a blind eye toward mounting evidence that Pakistan persists in its pursuit of nuclear weaponry.''

''It is my hope that the new government in Islamabad will take whatever steps are necessary to qualify for a presidential certification'' of its nuclear power program, said Solarz, D-N.Y. ''In the absense of such steps, American law is quite clear: no further U.S. assistance can flow to Pakistan.''

A U.S. State Department spokeswoman said Monday the U.S. government has not been officially notified of Safraz's statement and would not comment on it.

Pakistan held general elections on Wednesday in which the army-backed Islamic Democratic Alliance achieved a decisive win over the Pakistan People's Party of ousted Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto.

Solarz's spokesman, Bob Hathaway, said Friday's hearing also will focus on what Solarz described as ''numerous reports of fraud and other irregularities associated with the election'' Bhutto's party lost last week.

Interior Minister Safraz charged Bhutto's mother, Nusrat Bhutto, convinced Washington to suspend the aid to try and pressure the caretaker government to hold fair elections and that she had misled U.S. legislators about Pakistan's nuclear intentions.

''I would reiterate that the word of Nusrat Bhutto is not enough and that the U.S. government should ascertain the exact information about the (nuclear) issue,'' he said.

''We would like to be treated as a friendly and sovereign country and believe the United States should reconsider its decision and immediately and restore military and economic aid to Pakistan.

''Pakistan is an independent country and we cannot be treated as a U.S. colony and we will never allow them to treat us in that manner. We have been going out of our way to support the United States on certain issues, sometimes against the wishes of the international community, and we do not expect such an attitude from them.''

Pakistan is the third largest recipient of U.S. aid, after Israel and Egypt, but its strategic value to the United States has diminished sharply following last year's Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan.

DALLAS (OCT. 29) UPI - The .38-caliber pistol that nightclub owner Jack Ruby used to kill presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald is the focus of a legal battle beginning Monday in Dallas County Probate Court.

Jury selection was scheduled Monday to decide the fate of the Colt Cobra that Ruby used to gun down Oswald in the basement of the Dallas police station in 1963.

Lawyers for Oswald's brother, Earl Ruby, of Boca Raton, Fla., are asking the court to decide who should be able to sell the gun. They are also asking that Dallas lawyer Jules Mayer be removed as executor of the estate.

The snub-nosed revolver, which has been locked up for 20 years in a North Dallas bank vault, is valued at from $50,000 to $125,000, according to Mayer's lawyer, Marvin L. Levin of Dallas.

''As one gun dealer said, 'The value is that this is the gun,''' he said. ''There is only one in the world.''

Two days after the Kennedy assassination, Ruby bought the revolver at a Dallas gun shop for $62.50. One could be purchased now for between $100 and $200, Levin said.

Levin said Mayer has repeatedly attempted to sell the gun to pay taxes and other debts on the Ruby estate but he has been blocked by Earl Ruby. ''The complaints have chilled any buyer from buying the assets,'' he said.

Earl Ruby also wants to sell the gun to pay off his brother's debts but he says Mayer should get no money from the sale. His lawyer has contended that Mayer has not done enough to deserve the fee he is asking.

Mayer said he wants to sell the gun and other items seized by Dallas police after Ruby's arrest to pay $100,000 owed the Internal Revenue Service and $60,000 for his and other legal services.

In 1968, Mayer offered the weapon and Ruby's clothes to Madame Tussaud's Wax Museum in London, Christie's Auction House and the Smithsonian Institution. No bids were received.

Levin said the Ruby estate also includes a brown suit and hat, a watch, a ring and shoes worn by Ruby at the time of his arrest.

''Jack Ruby would normally have died a penniless man had it not been for the historic aspect of this case,'' he said.

Ruby was convicted of murder in 1964 and sentenced to death in the electric chair. An appeals court later overturned his conviction, saying the trial should have been moved from Dallas. He died of cancer in 1967 at the age of 55 before another trial could be held.

The probate trial is expected to take about three days.

HOUSTON (OCT. 29) UPI - Continental Airlines' representatives have reassured travel agents of the carrier's long-term viability in response to published reports that Continental's board considered filing for bankruptcy, a published report said Monday.

''I've had our sales managers out calling on more accounts than normal,'' Bob Lepisto, Continental's vice president of sales, told the Houston Chronicle.

Public confidence was shaken after reports that Continental's board of directors had contemplated filing for Chapter 11 bankruptcy. Last week, Continental executives denied that bankruptcy was an option in the airline's cost-cutting strategies.

''There's tons of customers calling,'' said Barney Kogen, chairman and chief executive officer of Houston's Lifeco Travel Services. ''Some of the customers are calling every day.

''We're very comfortable. We don't see any reason for alarm,'' Kogen said. Lifeco is watching the situation because the travel agency guarantees the tickets it sells.

If a bankrupt Continental could not honor the tickets sold by Lifeco, then the travel agency would, he said. Lifeco is Continental's largest customer, bringing in more than $100 million worth of travel business annually.

Continental's daily bookings have not changed since the news broke, said Al Lenz, vice president for distribution, planning and administration for Continental's computer reservation system, System One.

''Our daily numbers are very consistent,'' Lenza said, adding ticket sales are falling short of projections because many people bought tickets in August before the airlines hiked fares.

''I just can't find myself getting upset with Continental,'' Kogen said. ''Too many other carriers are squeaking and looking at doomsday scenarios and rightfully so.''

Mary Sexton, manager of Esther Grossberg Travel, agreed.

''I think everybody is kind of wondering, but everything is business as usual. I'm not avoiding Continental. There's no reason to put them out of business.''

Continental spokesmen said there has been no indication that travel agents have avoided using Continental.

(OCT. 29) UPI - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev is headed back to Moscow following weekend meetings in France where much of the conversation was centered on the Iraqi crisis. Gorbachev suggests that Saudi Arabia work for what he calls an ''inter-Arab'' solution to the crisis, and he says the idea of a Gulf war is UNacceptable. The Nobel Peace Prize winner also says that reports from the representative he sent to Iraq indicate there may be some softening of Saddam Hussein's position in the crisis.

A disgruntled teen-ager armed with a handgun has released all but one teacher and six of the 20 students taken hostage at the Charlestown, Indiana, High School some 60 miles north of Louisville, Kentucky. Everyone else in the school has been evacuated. A police SWAT team is in place while negotiations continue with the student, identified as 18- year-old Eli Dean.

The Supreme Court has refused to get involved in a case where Lowell, Massachusetts, police arrested a man carrying a handgun without a license. The officers acted after receiving a telephone tip. The court decision NOT to intervene leaves standing a lower court ruling that police canNOT stop motor vehicles simply because of information that the driver may be carrying a firearm.

The high court today also refused to be tangled up in a case involving religion and prison haircuts. The case involves the religious rights of Rastafarian inmates in the New York State Department of Corrections who wear their hair in dreadlocks. The prison system requires all new inmates to get close-cropped haircuts for I-D pictures. Rastafarians believe men should NOT cut or comb their hair.

A curfew is being clamped on several areas in northern India to prevent more violence between Hindus and Moslems. Roadblocks have isolated a town 345 miles southeast of New Delhi, where Hindus plan to begin construction of a temple to replace a 16th century Moslem mosque. Government officials say religious fighting killed 68 people during the past week. The crisis threatens to bring down the 11-month-old government of Prime Minister V-P Singh.

Diplomats in Nairobi, Kenya, say Belgian troops will withdraw from the tiny east African nation of Rwanda this week. Their pullout will test the fragile cease-fire in the month-old civil war and could encourage rebels to break the shaky truce. Belgium sent 500 troops to its former colony to protect 16-hundred Belgian citizens still living in Rwanda after civil war erupted in the northern part of the country. About 300 Belgians were evacuated.

ISLAMABAD, PAKISTAN (OCT. 29) UPI - A French team which observed last week's parliamentary elections said Monday the decisive victory by the opponents of ousted prime minister Benazir Bhutto was achieved by ''sophisticated fraud.''

The team from the Paris-based League of Human Rights said ballot boxes in certain constituencies were stuffed with bogus votes while being transferred from polling stations to election officials.

The statement differed from the reports of other international observer groups including the U.S.-government sponsored National Democratic Institute. A 40-member NDI team said last Friday it saw ''no evidence'' to support allegations of mass rigging.

In Washington, a U.S. State Department spokeswoman noted the NDI saw some instances of fraud and was careful not to call the elections ''free and fair '' but rather called them ''generally open, orderly and well- administered.''

The spokeswoman, who declined to be identified, said that while ''obviously there are still questions to be answered ... nothing in our own observations would lead us to question those findings'' of the NDI.

Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Asian and Pacific Affairs Subcommittee, said in a news release he also was prepared to accept the NDI's conclusions ''in the absence of compelling evidence to the contrary.''

But, said Solarz, who plans to hold a congressional hearing Friday on matters related to Pakistan, ''I remain extremely troubled by the numerous reports of fraud and other irregularities associated with the election.''

The Islamic Democratic Alliance, a loose army-backed coalition of parties opposed to Bhutto, scored a convincing victory over her Pakistan People's Party in last Wednesday's National Assembly elections.

Many neutral observers were astonished by the PPP's crushing defeat. They also disputed the government's turnout figure of 44.5 percent as too high.

Bhutto has charged the IDA win was achieved as a result of ''gross rigging.'' She alleged ballot boxes had been stuffed after leaving the polling stations.

She demanded at a news conference Monday that repolling be held in 100 constituencies, ''where final vote count certificates were not issued by the presiding officers as required by law.''

The statement by the League of Human Rights, which represents 54 countries, supported Bhutto's charges.

''Sophisticated fraud contributed to the IDA's victory,'' the statement said.

''At certain polling stations the results were not taken directly to the election officers and bogus votes were stuffed,'' it said. ''In various places certified copies of the vote count were not given to the candidates and their polling agents.''

Ishaq Khan sacked Bhutto's 20-month-old government on Aug. 6, accusing it of corruption and nepotism and of failing to control law and order. He dissolved the National Assembly and appointed opposition leader Ghulam Mustafa Jatoi to head an interim government until the elections.

The president also set up Special Disqualification Courts to try Bhutto and members of her administration on corruption charges. If found guilty they could be barred from politics for seven years.

NEW YORK (OCT. 29) UPI - The Federal Reserve Bank of New York added funds to the U.S. banking system Monday in a move financial economists saw as a long-awaited, if somewhat restrained, lowering of short-term interest rates.

A Fed spokesman, without commenting on the central bank's intentions, said it made overnight government securities repurchase agreements for a customer and thereby injected $1 billion into the reserve system.

Though that was a relatively small amount, economists noted it was added to the system when the federal funds rate - set on overnight loans from one bank to another - was already at a low 7 3/4 percent.

The new rate was expected to be 7 3/4 percent, 25 basis points below 8 percent the Fed perceived target rate since its last easing July 13.

The apparent easing was consistent with Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan's promise that U.S. short-term interest rates could come lower if the White House and Congress enacted legislation to cut the U.S. budget deficit. A budget law was passed Saturday after weeks of wrangling.

''Greenspan has delivered on his previously made promise to the Congress,'' said William V. Sullivan Jr., a money market analyst and senior vice president with Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. in New York.

''I think they did it,'' said chief economist Samuel Kahan of Chicago-based Fuji Securities Inc. ''They finally dropped the other shoe.''

Both analysts saw the Fed's move as clear even though the New York Fed, the operational arm for the central bank in such matters, did not employ the type of open-market transactions it normally uses to signal easing.

Kahan said the Fed ordinarily uses system repurchase agreements, or ''repos,'' in which it acts on its own behalf to indicate it is loosening credit, while at times a senior Fed official publicly drops a broad hint.

Monday it carried out overnight customer ''repos'' for only $1 billion - but at a time when the Fed funds rate was already below its previous target rate. The conclusion was that it was trying to signal a modest easing.

While the White House and U.S. business has been calling for easier money for some time now to revive a faltering national economy, the Fed was thought to be reluctant to ease too much for fear of feeding inflation.

A strong easing move could have displeased bond investors, who by selling off government securities could drive up long-term rates. Home mortgage rates are linked to the 30-year bond yield, or market interest rate.

''There was no need to add reserves to the banking system,'' Sullivan said. ''It was an indication the Fed prefers the funds rate to be that low and it was an attempt to cap the funds rate off at that new level.''

Added Kahan: ''They wanted to convey that precise message - it's a response to the budget legislation and they're doing just 25 basis points.''

''There is no smoking gun, no cannon, no fireworks with this announcement,'' he said. ''It is more of a whimper, like everything else now.''

LONDON (OCT. 29) UPI - Stock prices closed mixed in thin trading Monday on the London International Stock Exchange, as professional investors preferred to step to the sidelines to await British and U.S. economic indicators due out later in the week.

Stocks eased slightly in Frankfurt and Zurich and managed small gains in Paris.

London's blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which fell 25.6 points Friday, eased 1.0 point to 2,062.1. The narrower top 30 industrial average however added 1.6 points to 1,600.0.

Volume amounted to around 300 million shares compared with 368 million shares changing hands on Friday.

Stocks opened sharply lower with the FTSE 100-index down around 10 points but climbed steadily higher in thin trading as Wall Street gained.

Market watchers said professional investors stepped to the sidelines ahead of Tuesday's report from the U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis on third quarter gross national product and the Department of Commerce's report on U.S. single family home sales for September.

Analysts said investors were also awaiting the Confederation of British Industry industrial trends survey scheduled for release later in the week to provide market direction.

Analysts said fears over the Middle East and the world economic slowdown also kept investors away from the market.

Meanwhile on the economic front, the Bank of England reported Britain's narrow money supply M-0 rose a seasonally adjusted 4.6 percent in the year to September.

The rise was unchanged from the bank's preliminary estimate issued on Oct. 18 and is within the government's target range of 1 to 5 percent for growth in the fiscal year ended March 31.

On a monthly baisis, M-0, which consists of notes and coins in circulation plus banks' operational balances with the Bank of England, fell 0.4 percent, also unchanged from the preliminary estimate.

Among some of the day's highlights, leisure group Brent Walker gained 20 cents to $1.05 on a succesful $200 million capital bonds issue and expected refinancing deal with its creditors.

Imperial Chemical Industries, the bellweather chemical stock, rebounded 20 cents to $15.67 after third quarter pre-tax profit results last week sent values plummeting.

Eurotunnel, the conglomerate building the Channel tunnel between England and France with French company Transmanche Link, gained 34 cents to 9.46 on news of drilling progress and fresh financing from creditors.

In the oil patch, rising oil prices failed to move oil stocks. British Petroleum slipped 5 cents to $6.40.

Elsewhere in Europe, stocks closed modestly lower in light trading on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange.

The Weighted German Index of 30 selective blue chip issues, which plummented 40.46 points Friday, slipped 2.45 points to 1,454.60.

Analysts said stocks eased as local investors were discouraged by the inability of a Soviet diplomatic mission over the weekend in Baghad to find the opening for a solution to the Persian Gulf crisis.

On the local economic front, the Federal Statistics Office reported West Germany's cost of living rose 0.6 percent in the month to mid- October and 3.3 percent from the like period a year earlier.

The report surveyed rising consumer prices in four of the 16 German states, which includes the five new eastern states, that acceded to the Federal Republic Oct. 3.

Meanwhile, West Germany wholesale sales rose overall 5 percent in nominal and real terms in September from a year earlier, the government agency reported.

In Paris, stocks closed slightly higher in the Paris Bourse. The French CAC-40 Index, which plunged 27.41 points Friday, rebounded 9.32 points to 1,627.90.

In Zurich, local investors sent stock prices lower on the Zurich Stock Exchange for the second consecutive trading session. The Swiss Market Index, which lost 33.1 points Friday, fell another 5.3 points to 1,436.7 in sluggish trading.

CHICAGO (OCT. 29) UPI - It's time to talk turkey again.

The Butterball Turkey Talk-Line is back in business for its 10th year of answering sometimes wacky questions with serious advice.

In 10 years, the experts who answer 1-800-323-4848 have heard just about every question and disaster that can befall the preparation of that Thanksgiving turkey.

Some questions are simple. ''How do I turn my oven on?'' asked a caller from Lawrence, Kan.

Some are odd. ''Do you baste under the turkey's armpit?'' a fledgling cook from Mankato, Minn., wanted to know.

Judging by some questions, some cooks might have been better off if they had not figured out how to turn that oven on.

A Baltimore woman said no one told her to remove the plastic wrap before cooking the bird. A newlywed from Quincy, Mass., apparently trying to be thorough, prepared the bird for the oven by washing it - with soap. A Philadelphia woman called to ask about the red rubber glove she left inside the turkey.

''I called my mother and asked her how to fix a turkey,'' said an Indiana cook ''and she told me to call the Butterball Turkey Talk- Line.''

A Florida woman called to ask for tips about cooking her bird outside becaus a hurricane had blown the roof off her house and new parents from Chicago asked how to turn their leftover Thanksgiving dinner into baby food they could freeze.

Talk-Line staffers still chuckle about the Egg Harbor City, N.J., secretary who apparently didn't think much of her boss's culinary ability and left a message for him to return a call to 1-800-323-4848. He was a bit startled when the Talk-Line answered but picked up some pointers anyway.

Last year, the most-asked question was how to roast the bird. The answer is open-pan roasting. Other inquiries included how best to thaw a frozen turkey, how to stuff it and what to do with leftovers.

The Talk-Line, which handled 260,574 calls last year, will be open for business from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. EST, from Monday through Friday, Nov. 21. It also will be staffed the weekend prior to Thanksgiving, 7 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Cooks who opt for a return bout with the bird for Christmas can call weekdays from Nov. 23 through Dec. 21 from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m.

As a 10th anniversary bonus, callers will receive a 14-month Cookbook Calendar featuring turkey recipes season by season. Cooks are expected to gobble it up.

NEWPORT, RI (OCT. 29) UPI - Bartender Keith Thomlinson got the biggest tip of his life last week - a lottery ticket worth $25,000.

Lottery officials said Monday that Thomlinson, 42, a bartender at the Green House Inn and Restaurant, scratched off a Rhode Island lottery Baseball game ticket while cleaning the bar Friday and discovered he had won $25,000.

The ticket was a gift Thursday night from Newport resident Russell Clark, who frequents bars and often leaves lottery tickets as tips, according to Ray Grimes, deputy director of the Rhode Island lottery.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (OCT. 29) UPI - In the first case of its kind since the lifting of a 30-year ban on the African National Congress in February, a senior official of the ANC and seven other members were charged Monday with plotting the violent overthrow of white rule.

In a courtroom in the Indian Ocean port city of Natal, the eight were formally charged with terrorism and a variety of lesser offenses, including illegal possession of arms, ammunition and explosives.

Led by Mac Maharaj, a member of the ANC's National Executive Committee and a member of the politburo of the South African Communist Party, they were not asked to plead during their first court appearance and remained in custody pending bail hearings.

All eight ANC activists alleged in affidavits they had been tortured or assaulted while in detention but they appeared calm in court Monday and in good health, according to witnesses.

Maharaj, 55, was one of 41 ANC exiles given temporary indemnity to allow them to return to South Africa for groundbreaking talks with the government in May on obstacles standing in the way of formal power- sharing negotiations.

Following his arrest for crimes allegedly violating his indemnity from prosecution, President Frederik de Klerk revoked the protection and refused demands by the ANC for his release from custody.

A ninth suspect in the case, trade unionist Billy Nair, did not appear in court Monday. Authorities said police were unable to locate Nair, who had been arrested earlier, then hospitalized briefly and released.

The case against Maharaj and the others irritated relations between the ANC and the government after details of the alleged communist- inspired insurrection plot were released to the local media in July.

The ANC and the South African Communist Party, both unbanned in February, denied involvement and accused the government of trying to drive a wedge between the two historical allies by stirring anti- communist hysteria.

They also affirmed their commitment to peaceful negotiations with de Klerk's government on a post-apartheid South Africa and the following month agreed to an indefinite suspension of a 29-year guerrilla war.

But the government rejected demands to release Maharaj and Monday unveiled its case against the veteran anti-apartheid activist, who served on the political military council of the ANC after fleeing South Africa in 1977 at the end of a 12-year jail term.

The state charged the eight had worked with SACP General Secretary Joe Slovo and Ronnie Kasrils, the intelligence chief of the ANC's military military wing and others to create a national underground network intended to recruit, train, arm and lead a revolutionary army to seize power from the government.

Maharaj had ''overall command of the project,'' according to the formal charges. They also said in June 1990 he traveled to the Soviet Union under a false name at the same time as Kasrils did ''in furtherance of'' what has been dubbed Operation Vula (Open).

Maharaj also is accused of being in ''unlawful possession of a firearm'' found in a suburban Johannesburg residence. The .45 caliber Ithaca pistol, state prosecutors alleged without explanation, carried the stamp of U.S. property and the U.S. Army.

CHICAGO (OCT. 29) UPI - At the 1989 All-Star break, Jeff Torborg's Chicago White Sox had already lost 56 games and were 20 1/2 games out of the American League West race.

That's when the makeover began for the team that challenged the Oakland Athletics for the AL West title this season. That turnaround earned Torborg United Press International's American League Manager of the Year announced Monday.

''You can't really call it a dream season when you don't win,'' Torborg said, ''but it was a special year.''

Torborg ran away with the award, claiming 18 of the 22 votes cast by UPI baseball correspondents. Tony La Russa of Oakland collected three votes and Joe Morgan of Boston one.

The White Sox were in Kansas City on July 6, 1989, about to begin a three-game series before the break, and Torborg, then in his first season as the Chicago manager, held a one-hour, back-to-fundamentals workout. He even brought pizzas for the players. It was 100 degrees in Kansas City that day, a day Torborg said showed him the character of his ballclub.

Despite the team's record and the unbearable heat, the players continued to practice on their own nearly three hours after the scheduled workout ended.

''That said something about the character of this team,'' Torborg said. ''They never give up.''

It also said something about Torborg.

''I told the coaches, 'Let's go one game at a time. What we can do is start the second half as a new season,''' he said. ''The standings didn't mean anything to us. We got off to a great start - and I kept harping on them that that's the way we should play.''

And from the second half of the '89 season through this past campaign, the White Sox played well. Very well. They threatened the defending World Series champion Oakland Athletics in the American League West, finishing 94-68, the White Sox' best record since 1983 when they won 99 games and the division.

Torborg's philosophy was simple. The White Sox, the youngest team in the majors, won 94 games by doing the little things. Bunting, hit-and- run, speed, solid defense and a bullpen anchored by 57-game savior Bobby Thigpen.

Torborg, 48, repeated cliches and they worked: stay focused, take it one game at a time. Eighty-three of the White Sox' games were decided by less than two runs. Torborg said his stomach is just now starting to settle down.

''I kept telling Sammy (Ellis, pitching coach) that we're going to play each night like it's the last game of the World Series,'' Torborg said. ''He'd (Ellis) say 'What about the bullpen?' and I'd say I don't care about tomorrow. Let's win today.''

Torborg's positive feeling going into the '90 season was reinforced with the White Sox' Opening Day 2-1 victory over Milwaukee on April 9.

''We won the game using the whole bullpen, the kid (Scott Radinsky) got in, Melido (Perez) did a good job - we started on the right track,'' Torborg said. ''I thought 'Here's a club that was deep in last place last year, then to be surrounded by all the hoopla (regarding Comiskey Park's final season) and still win, that's really something.'

''(Coach) Joe Nossek kept saying 'I feel magic in Chicago.'''

The White Sox manager savored the mystical season, the last at 80- year-old Comiskey Park. He kept the lineup cards from each win, writing down who homered, who was the winning pitcher, who got the save, or how the game was won. Torborg said he still shuffles through them, reminiscing.

MOSCOW (OCT. 29) UPI - An American Jewish organization opened the first independent human rights monitoring office in the Soviet Union Monday and vowed to defend all Soviet citizens in need of help.

David Waksberg, vice president of the Union of Councils for Soviet Jews, acknowledged that a major goal of the new bureau is to help Jews who want to emigrate from the Soviet Union, but he said it also has a wider purpose.

''The rights of Jews are intimately involved with the rights of all Soviet citizens (and) will be viewed in the context of general human rights in this country,'' Waksberg told reporters.

To underscore the point, the office will share space with the Moscow Helsinki Monitoring Group, which is dedicated to ensuring that the Soviet government fulfills the commitments to human rights it made at a 1975 conference in the Finnish capital.

The opening of the office was another marker on the country's dramatic evolution from the 1960s and 1970s, when ''dissidents'' were imprisoned for expressing their opinions and ''refuseniks,'' nearly all of them Jewish, were sent to jail merely for seeking to leave the Soviet Union.

The office, in a former vegetable store wedged between a food mart and a shoe shop on a busy Moscow thoroughfare, is being renovated.

Moscow police fearful of anti-Semitic attacks warned that they could not guarantee the safety of employees unless steel walls and floors were installed along with an electric alarm system, according to Robyn Lieberman, an American Jew who since early September has worked on setting up the office.

Lieberman said that some of the office's five Soviet staff members oppose putting up a sign outside on the street because they fear it will draw attention and possibly lead to confrontation.

''The whole point of the office is to institutionalize the human rights movement,'' Lieberman said. ''It's been run out of apartments for 20 years.''

The bureau is officially registered, though not with the central Soviet government but rather with the Moscow City Council, now in the hands of non-Communists.

The office is formally a joint venture between the Union of Councils for Soviet Jews and a group of Soviet human rights activists in Moscow. Waksberg admitted, however, that the American Jewish organization will provide its annual funding of at least $100,000.

Waksberg described the office as ''an information center (that) will serve as a clearinghouse for grass-roots human rights and emigration advocacy and provide direct assistance to prisoners of conscience, refuseniks and Soviet Jews fleeing anti-Semitism.''

Though Soviet human rights activists say the number of political prisoners has been significantly reduced under President Mikhail Gorbachev's perestroika reforms, they dispute government claims that all dissidents have been freed.

Leonid Stonov, a leader of the Soviet group, said that Gorbachev's leadership has brought major improvements in human rights, but he said there is plenty of room for further progress.

''Of course, there have been changes,'' Stonov said. ''We can see them. There is less fear. But we are still a long way from the ideal of real human rights.''

Alexander Burakovsky, co-chairman of the Kiev Jewish Cultural Union, said that many of the country's 1.5 million Jews and members of various ethnic groups are nervous because of its political instability.

''Today in the Soviet Union we are witnessing the breakup of an empire,'' he said. ''We are very afraid of civil war. That is why organizations that defend human rights are so important.''

TORONTO (OCT. 29) UPI - The Toronto Maple Leafs, holding the worst record in the NHL and off to their worst start in their long history, Monday named assistant Tom Watt coach.

General Manager Floyd Smith, who fired Coach Doug Carpenter Friday, announced Watt's appointment.

Watt, who was behind the bench Saturday when the Maple Leafs lost 3-1 to Buffalo, takes over a team that has just three points in 12 games.

Watt previously served as head coach of the Winnipeg Jets and as an assistant coach with the Calgary Flames. He was hired in the off-season by the the Maple Leafs.

Toronto, which last season had one of the league's best offenses, has been outscored 57-29 this season.

Sunday, Watt led the team through a brisk workout on what was supposed to be a day off.

''That's how it was scheduled but, in speaking with the players, they didn't think they should take it,'' Watt said. ''There's a time when a team's going poorly, that it's better to foget about hockey for a day. I don't think this is that time.''

The Leafs play 10 of their next 12 games at home. They face the Minnesota North Stars in Maple Leaf Gardens Tuesday night.

(OCT. 29) UPI - At the U-N today, 13-members of the Security Council voted to hold Iraq responsible for damage caused to Kuwaiti property and for human rights violations since the Iraqi occupation three months ago. The Council ordered the new measures against Iraq after a visit to Baghdad by a Soviet Mideast envoy failed to resolve the Persian Gulf standoff. Cuba and Yemen abstained.

Mikhail Gorbachev is headed home to Moscow following meetings with top French leaders in Paris. And he is pushing the idea of an all-Arab solution to the Gulf crisis, saying a peace proposal from Arabs would be more acceptable to Iraq's leadership. He calls war ''UNacceptable.''

Indiana state police say a man identified as 18-year-old student Eli Dean is holding one teacher and six other students hostage inside Charleston High School, 60 miles north of Louisville, Kentucky. Police negotiators were in contact with the suspect, believed armed with a handgun. NO shots... or injuries... are reported.

A North Carolina politician says the bridge linking Hatteras Island and the mainland could be repaired by Christmas. State Senator Marc Basnight says repairs might be finished within 45 days. Original estimates figured the work could take up to six months. A dredge ripped the span apart during a storm last week.

The U-S Supreme Court refused to consider two cases involving handguns today. The justices let stand a decision allowing a Montana court to tack up to 10 additional years onto a convict's sentence if a firearm is used in the commission of a felony.

The high court refused to review a case involving Lowell, Massachusetts, police who arrested a man for carrying a handgun without a license. His pickup truck was stopped and searched after a telephone call from a convenience store clerk who said he had been menaced by a gunman. A local court ruled the search was illegal and the state supreme court agreed.

PHOENIX, AZ (OCT. 29) UPI - ''After three agonizing trials for the man I had witnessed kill my husband, my eyes were wide open to the changes that needed to be made,'' Barbara DeMint tells Arizona voters in one of many appeals for a victims' bill of rights on the November ballot.

The proposed amendment to the state constitution would guarantee victims of crimes or their surviving family members the right to be treated with ''fairness, respect, and dignity.''

It also assures them possible restitution, access to arraignments, hearings, trials, appeals, virtually any proceeding in the criminal- justice system that affects them.

Opponents of the bill argue that it endangers the rights of defendants by removing certain decisions from the jurisdiction of the courts and placing them in the hands of politicians.

They also point out that in their opinion the amendment is superfluous. ''Arizona has the most comprehensive victims' rights legislation of any state in the country,'' Robert Hirsh says. He is the president of Arizona Attorneys for Criminal Justice and believes the proposition is ''another dangerous measure of the '90s to take our liberties away.''

But some victims disagree. ''My husband and I are the parents of Christy Ann Fornoff who was abducted, raped, and murdered six years ago in Tempe,'' Carol Fornoff says in a campaign appeal. ''We have learned ... that a criminal has basic constitutional rights that we, as victims, do not have.''

Then she recounts some of the experiences she and her husband suffered during the trial of the man ultimately convicted of murdering their little girl. The Fornoffs ''received calls from the accused while he was in jail. ...'' Later, court officials excluded the Fornoffs from the proceedings, not even allowing them to ''sit in the courtroom until the end arguments were given.''

Supporters of the amendment concede that current laws and rulings protect victims, but at the discretion of the courts.

Steve Twist, a well-known state prosecuting attorney and a member of the Victims' Bill of Rights Task Force, a group of citizens, lawyers, and victims that drafted the measure, says it provides victims a better legal status while not interferes with defendants' rights.

''The federal and state constitutions protect the accused,'' he says. ''Our amendment gives victims the same type of assurance.'' The measure defines basic rights that can only be diminished by constitutional law. Less than 10 states now provide victims of crimes this type of guarantee.

Opponents predict a morass of confusion and violations of defendants' rights.

The measure permits victims of crime to refuse pretrial interviews with defense lawyers without stating a reason. ''That's not part of victims' rights legislation anywhere else,'' Hirsch says. Current law permits both sides in a criminal case to interview all known witnesses, including the victim, as a safeguard against ''surprise'' testimony.

Twist dismisses Hirsch's complaint. The Arizona Supreme Court has ruled that under a narrow set of circumstances victims need not give pretrial interviews to the defense, which has access to the statements made by victims to the police and to prosecutors.

The measure also grants victims unhindered access to relevant court proceedings. Present law permits excluding the victim until after he or she has testified, to guard against having the victim's testimony tainted from hearing other witnesses.

Twist says nothing in the victims' rights bill is designed to prejudice the system against defendants or to usurp the power of the courts. It simply instructs all branches of state government to accord crime victims specific rights.

Hirsch sees the ballot issue differently - as little more than a blatant attempt to upset the checks and balances that define governmental power and to inject politics into the legal system.

But Twist and other members of the Victims Bill of Rights Task Force say that Arizona, with the third-highest crime rate in the nation, cannot afford to ignore the 250,000 people per year who become crime victims.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 29) UPI - The Food and Drug Administration Monday moved to ban more than 100 ingredients in over-the-counter diet pills, saying there is no proof that they work and one may even cause choking.

However, the proposed ban on weight control ingredients did not include two widely used appetite suppressants that have been sharply criticized by consumer groups - phenylpropanolamine, or PPA, and benzocaine. The agency said it is still reviewing the safety and effectiveness of those ingredients based on information submitted by manufacturers.

The FDA said it decided to ban 111 other ingredients in non- prescription diet drugs because manufacturers failed to submit data to show the ingredients worked. The move comes as part of the FDA's lengthy, ongoing review of the safety and effectiveness of about 300,000 over-the-counter drugs.

Steve Jenning, staff director for Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., who recently held a series of congressional hearings on health hazards posed by diet products, said he was pleased the government was finally taking action to pull useless and hazardous ingredients off the market.

''But this only speaks to part of the problem. We continue to have strong concerns regarding PPA and benzocaine,'' Jenning said. ''PPA is the most ubiquitous, active ingredient in any over-the-counter diet preparation ... and should be closely watched because of its capability to cause nasty side effects like seizure, heart muscle and kidney damage, psychotic responses, hypertension and stroke.''

In 1989, Americans bought more than $370 million in diet drugs and such products are the fastest growing segment of the diet industry, with sales jumping about 13 percent annually, Jenning said. Dexatrim, made by Thompson Medical Co. in New York, currently accounts for nearly one-half the sales, he said.

About 2 million of the estimated 48 million Americans who are trying to lose weight are using diet pills, reported the Calorie Control Council, an trade group representing the diet food and drink industry.

Ingredients the FDA wants to ban from diet products include: alcohol, corn syrup, dextrose, guar gum, kelp, pineapple enzymes, rice polishings, saccharin salt, sodium bicarbonate, vitamin C and wheat germ. Many products once containing such ingredients have been reformulated or are no longer marketed.

Guar gum, a substance that expands when exposed to water, supposedly creates a full feeling in the stomach. This summer, the FDA asked makers of diet products containing guar gum to pull them from the market after receiving 17 reports of throat blockage among people using such products.

Although guar gum and similar water-soluable substances would be banned in diet drugs, the FDA would continue to allow such ingredients in bulk laxatives like Fiberall, Metamucil and Serutan, as well as a few antidiarrheal products like Equalactin and Mitrolan.

However, the FDA wants to require all non-prescription drugs containing guar gum, karaya gum, psyllilum or other water-soluable substances to bear a label warning about the possible choking hazard.

The warning would read: Take (or mix) this product with at least 8 ounces (a full glass) of water or other fluid. Taking this product without adequate fluid may cause it to swell and block your throat and esophagus and may cause choking. Do not take this product if you have ever had difficulty in swallowing or have throat problems. If you experience chest pain, vomiting or difficulty in swallowing or breathing after taking this product, seek immediate medical attention.

The FDA's proposed rule changes will be published Tuesday in the Federal Register and followed by a 60-day comment period. The warning notice would take effect when the final rule is published, while the ban on diet product ingredients would not take effect unitl six months after the regulation is made final.

The FDA has asked manufacturers to comply voluntarily as soon as possible.

BUENOS AIRES, ARGENTINA (OCT. 29) UPI - Negotiators have resolved a dispute over phone rates that was the chief stumbling block in a plan to sell Argentina's phone system to European operators to help cut the nation's foreign debt.

"We have made an agreement on the point of the tariff," Adolfo Rinaldi, a representative of STET of Italy, one of the European phone companies set to acquire the Argentine system, told United Press International. "Other points remain to be discussed," Rinaldi said. "We hope to solve them and sign the contract on Nov. 8."

Two European consortiums, one led by STET and France Cables and Radio, the other by Telefonica of Spain, were awarded control of the Argentine state-run system, known as Entel, for $5 billion in Argentine debt paper and $600 million in cash.

The sale of Argentina's telephone company is seen as an important part of President Carlos Menem's plan to privatize a series of state enterprises, including steel, petrochemicals, railroads, and electricity.

By exchanging the companies in return for sizeable amounts of Argentine debt paper, selling now for 14 cents on the secondary market, the government hopes to drastically reduce the country's $67 billion foreign debt through the privatization scheme.

The original target date of the transfer was Oct. 8, but it was postponed when a U.S. group led by Bell Atlantic and Manufacturers Hanover Trust pulled out at the last moment.

STET and France Cables and Radio took the place of the Bell consortium, but then the Argentine government insisted on a modification of some terms of the original contract.

Last week, negotiators from the Telefonica consortium warned they would pull out of the deal unless the new contract terms provided for adequate "profitability."

According to Rinaldi, the compromise rate was 3 1/2 cents for a "pulse," meaning a two-minute phone call in the Buenos Aires area, for the benchmark date of Sept. 1.

The October and November rates would then be adjusted for inflation, which was 15.7 percent in September plus an anticipated "seven or eight percent in November," Rinaldi said.

The European consortiums had originally insisted on a rate of 52 cents for a pulse as of Sept. 1, to be adjusted for inflation, but according to Economy Minister Erman Gonzalez, in a compromise the government and the investors agreed on a lower rate provided the new companies are protected from a sudden devaluation of the austral. In that case, Gonzalez said, the companies can raise their rates above inflation to compensate for the devaluation.

Both the government and private negotiators said the rate dispute was the most serious in talks for the transfer of the phone company from state to private hands.

Other problems remaining, according to press reports, are the destiny of 1,000 Entel personnel who are employed in administering the system's fringe benefits such as retirement and health plans, and the possible collection of a tax on telephone calls to help the government's overall budget.

A 31.5 percent tax on phone calls that goes into the nation's pension system will be eliminated, Rinaldi said, but the government is seeking other ways to make up for that lost revenue.

One possible partial substitute for the pension tax would be to apply to a 15.6 percent sales tax on telephone calls - the same sales tax that is now applied to most commercial transactions. Rinaldi said the issue of a possible sales tax is still "not yet resolved."

UNITED NATIONS (OCT. 29) UPI - The U.N. Security Council ordered new measures against Iraq Monday following inconclusive Soviet-led diplomatic talks with the Baghdad government to resolve the nearly 3-month-old Persian Gulf crisis.

The Soviet peace initiative showed little sign of progress as Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Yevgeny Primakov ended his talks with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz without a commitment for an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said in Paris Sunday that ''for the moment there are not many reasons to be optimistic.'' But Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, meeting Monday in France with President Francois Mitterrand said war in the gulf is unacceptable and called for an ''inter-Arab'' solution to the conflict.

After the Soviet-Iraqi talks ended in Baghdad, the Security Council was pushed to increase the pressure on Iraq to abide by international law. Western ambassadors said Monday morning that the Baghdad talks failed to sway the determination of the Security Council to impose tougher sanctions against Iraq.

The Security Council's military staff committee planned to meet later Monday to discuss the situation in the gulf and what possible military action to take to implement U.N. sanctions against Iraq.

The meeting, for the first time at the level of army generals, was called to enhance the military role of the council in maintaining peace and security around the world. The committee assists the council on military matters.

Thirteen of the 15 Security Council members voted to adopt measures holding Iraq responsible for damage caused to Kuwaiti properties and for human rights violations as a result of the occupation of Kuwait since Aug. 2. Cuba and Yemen abstained.

The council postponed its vote Saturday for 48 hours at the request of the Soviet Union in order not to jeopardize talks in Baghdad Sunday between Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and Primakov.

Iraqi U.N. Ambassador Abdul Amir Al-Anbari denounced the measures as new attempts by ''the United States, its allies and associates ... to poison the atmosphere of international and regional peace efforts.''

Al-Anbari said the measures were meant to demonstrate that the Security Council had exhausted all peaceful options and that the ''war option is the only one left.''

Speaking for more than an hour, Al-Anbari reiterated his government's calls for an Arab solution to the gulf crisis and to link it with a resolution of the Arab-Israeli conflict.

The measures, contained in a three-page resolution, held Iraq liable under internatinal law for ''loss, damage or injury arising in regard to Kuwait and third states, and their nationals and corporations, as a result of the invasion and illegal occupation of Kuwait.''

The council demanded the immediate release of hostages and asked Iraq to stop ''mistreating and oppressing'' people living under the occupation forces.

It asked Iraq to provide food, water and basic services necessary to the ''protection and well-being'' of Kuwaiti and third-country nationals in Kuwait and Iraq, including the remaining Western diplomats in the U.S., British and French embassies.

The council called on U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to undertake new diplomatic efforts to bring a peaceful solution to the Persian Gulf crisis and use his office to carry out provisions in the newly adopted resolution, particularly the provision of food, water and basic services to foreign diplomats and third-country nationals.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 29) UPI - The Securities and Exchange Commission warned investment companies Monday to drop the terms "guaranteed" and "insured" from the names and advertising of mutual funds investing in U.S. government securities.

The terms "may lead investors to believe that the value of their shares is guaranteed or insured by the United States government even though there is no such guarantee or insurance," the SEC said.

Mutual funds are a popular form of investment. Investment companies sell shares in their funds to investors to buy stocks, bonds and short-term cash instruments, such as commercial paper.

Some funds specialize in only a single group of securities, such as bills, notes and bonds issued by the Treasury Department to raise money to keep the wheels of government churning.

Even though the government securities themselves are "backed by the full faith and credit of the United States," the funds are not. But in some cases advertising and sales pitches indicate otherwise, the SEC said.

In a letter to investment companies, the SEC warned "funds that currently have names using such terms as 'guaranteed' and 'insured' in conjunction with words such as 'United States' and 'U.S. government' should take immediate action to remove those words from their names."

"Further, all funds should ensure that advertisements do not imply that fund shares are guaranteed or insured by the United States," the letter said, noting misuse of the terms violates anti-fraud provisions of federal securities laws.

The letter also said that SEC staff lawyers "will consider recommending enforcement action" if their order is ignored by mutual fund companies considered to be misusing the terms.

TORONTO (OCT. 29) UPI - Nickel producer Inco Ltd. announced Monday plans to invest $248 million developing a large new mine and expanding an existing one at its Thompson, Manitoba, complex.

Inco said the investment was part of a long term strategy to develop its ore reserves in northern Manitoba and achieve its worldwide nickel production targets.

The money will be spent between 1991 and 1997 on new mining technologies including communication, automation and transportation equipment, the company said.

"We're in the nickel business, and in northern Manitoba, for the long haul," said Lorne Ames, president of Inco's Manitoba division. "As long as we stay on the leading edge of technological progress and dedicate ourselves to high quality and low cost, we have a bright future." Ames said the investment will help Inco maintain its annual production capability at about 110 million pounds of nickel.

The bulk of the investment will be used to develop the new 1-D ore body at Thompson Mine, the heart of the Manitoba operation. The balance will be used to expand the Birchtree Mine, four miles south of Thompson.

BRATISLOVA, CZECHOSLOVAKIA (OCT. 29) UPI - Four days after they began a hunger strike to protest a law they said does not go far enough to make their native tongue their republic's official language, four dozen hunger strikers were still camped Monday in front of the Slovak National Council.

The extremists want Slovak to be the official language in all public places. The Slovak parliament passed a more moderate law that would allow regions with 20 percent minority population to use the minority tongue officially.

About 15 percent of Slovakia's 5 million population is in the minority, speaking Hungarian, Polish, Ukrainian, German or Romany.

The Slovak nationalists' argument is that they were being discriminated against in their homeland.

''When I go to a shop in a Hungarian town, the first thing they ask me is, 'Tesek,' 'Do you understand in Hungarian?' This is my homeland,'' said Emil Kasa, a 29-year-old pipefitter who has joined the hunger strikers.

The protesters were surviving on tea with lemon and vitamins. They sprawled in the rain on a pile of olive-green army blankets, under a white plastic tarpaulin.

Several dozen onlookers stood by, some chatting with the strikers or each other, some hurling abuse at the legislators inside the national council building.

The strikers have been disavowed by their heros, the Slovak National Party, which proposed the stronger law with the Matica Slovenska Heritage Group.

''In the present situation they should stop. The legislature has passed its law. But the strike could start again if no other solution is found,'' said Anton Hrnko, a leader of the Slovak Nationalist Party.

''It was a fight for power masquerading as a language dispute,'' said Gabor Zaszlos, the Hungarian-born Slovak deputy premier, of the language law and demonstrations last week that brought several thousand people into the streets of Bratislava, the capital of Slovkia.

Zaszlos and the Slovak National Party were trying to gain legitimacy as the authentic voice of Slovak people, said Matica Slovenska.

In parliamentary elections last June, the Slovak National Party finished a strong third with about 20 percent of the vote, against Public Against Violence and the Christian Democratic Movement.

For now, Slovak leaders across the political spectrum said the language dispute has quieted, but Slovaks are still trying to find their place in the world.

The Slovaks have only briefly had their own nation. When World War I ended, it brought down the Austro-Hungarian empire and ended Slovakia's 1,000-year rule by Hungaria. But instead of independence, Slovakia was joined with the Czech lands of Bohemia and Moravia and folded into the Czechoslovak Republic.

Only for a few brief years during World War II, when Nazi Germany annexed Czech lands, did Slovakia exist as a sovereign state.

Hrnko said Slovaks are trying to affirm their national identity.

''Slovak nationalism is a reaction to Prague centralism and to Czechoslovak etatism,'' he said, referring to what many Slovaks see as an attempt by Prague bureaucrats and intellectuals to fuse Czech and Slovak identities.

The Czech and Slovak national governments are now negotiating with the federal government in Prague over devolving administrative economic and politial power to the republics.

JERUSALEM (OCT. 29) UPI - A committee of the Israeli Parliament, the Knesset, stripped an Arab member of his parliamentary immunity Monday because of two meetings with Palestine Liberation Organization officials.

The full 120-member Knesset must decide whether to allow the state attorney to bring charges against Mohammed Miari of the Progressive List for Peace party, Army Radio reported.

Miari is the first member of the Knesset to lose his parliamentary immunity because of a political act. He met with the PLO members more than two years ago.

''I have no regrets and in my opinion there is no offense,'' Miari told Army Radio. He said 20 Knesset members had met with PLO officials and none had been prosecuted.

Israeli law prohibits contacts with PLO, which is considered a terrorist organization by the government.

In a separate development, Faisal Husseini, a prominent Palestinian activist, was barred from traveling abroad for three months.

GAINESVILLE, FL (OCT. 29) UPI - Contrary to popular belief, buildings with fewer than four stories tend to have more construction accidents than skyscrapers, a University of Florida civil engineering professor said Monday.

Professor Kweku Bentil studied 1,078 accidents over five years to develop a scientific model that he said allows him to predict the number of accidents on constructions sites. He said he found that the smaller projects were more dangerous than he thought.

"Apparently, construction workers are less likely to be cautious in smaller buildings than they are at greater heights because they figure it's no big deal if they fall," Bentil said.

He said expensive projects, such as skyscrapers, with large contractors pose more of a threat to workers, but fewer accidents occur because more precautions are taken.

Bentil studied accidents at 85 commercial construction sites in Alachua, Duval Hillsborough and Pinellas counties to develop his model for predicting construction mishaps.

Even though the construction industry employs only about six percent of the industrial work force, it accounts for an estimated 20 percent of all occupational fatalities each year, he said.

According to the National Safety Council, accidents in the construction industry cause about 220,000 disabling injuries and 2,200 deaths annually, but those accidents don't normally get the kind of attention they do in other industries.

"In spite of the high number of fatalities, construction accidents get little attention because most are single incidents that do not involve large numbers of people, such as airline disasters (do)," Bentil said.

Yet construction accidents also cost taxpayers billions of dollars each year. The higher insurance premiums paid by contractors who have accidents are eventually passed on in the form of higher costs to the building owner, the store owner who leases the space and consumers who shop at the store, he said.

"Construction accidents have caused spiraling costs in workers' compensation, particularly in Florida," Bentil said. "In 1989, some Florida contractors had rate increases as high as 28.8 percent, and their premiums are double that of contractors in many southeastern states."

By predicting how many accidents are expected at a particular construction site, Bentil said his model ultimately can be used to prevent them. For example, the model would allow the construction industry to design and implement accident prevention plans tailored to specific projects and contractors.

It can also be used on a project-by-project basis to screen contractors during the bidding process and to determine the amount of reserves insurance companies should keep in case of accidents, he said.

"If we can base these rates on the number of accidents that a contractor is expected to have on a specific project rather than his past safety record," he said, "it may save thousands of dollars."

CAIRO, EGYPT (OCT. 29) UPI - At least 12 Islamic fundamentalists arrested during the weekend in connection with the assassination of Egypt's parliament speaker are also suspected of being behind an assassination attempt against a former minister, a government source said Monday.

Armed police raided the hideouts of the fundamentalists over the weekend and arrested six people, while four others were arrested after a gun battle in Cairo streets. At least two suspected extremists were killed in the exchange of fire and five policemen were wounded.

Police said the extremists belonged to Al Jihad (Holy War), a radical offshoot of Egypt's outlawed Islamic Brotherhood.

''We have evidence to support a case that the culprits arrested over the weekend were also behind the assasination attempt against (former Egyptian Interior Minister Zaki) Badr last year,'' the source told United Press International.

Rifaat El Mahgoub, the No. 2 man in the Egyptian government after President Hosni Mubark, was machine-gunned to death in downtown Cairo on Oct. 12 while heading in a two-car motorcade to meet Syria's parliament speaker.

Egyptian newspapers blamed the killing on pro-Iraqi Palestinian terrorists, but Iraq denied involvement. Security sources then pointed the finger at Egyptian Islamic Fundamentalists backed with cash and arms by a pro-Iraqi extremist group.

The Interior Ministry source said four of the Jihad extremists were still at large and being sought by police.

Police were examining six bombs, 300 rounds of sammunition, six machine-guns, explosives, gas masks and motorcycles seized during the weekend raid. Mahgoub's killers made their attack and get-away on motorcycles.

In a related development, the semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahram reported Sunday that the prime target for the extremists was not Mahgoub but Interior Minister Lt. Gen. Mohammed Abdelhalim Mussa.

Security sources told UPI last week the extremists intended to kill Mussa and not Mahgoub but gave no explanation for the mistake.

Mussa told a Cabinet meeting in Cairo over the weekend that police had arrested what he described as ''armed Palestinian infiltrators working for an Iraqi terrorist organization,'' but gave no further details.

NEW YORK (OCT. 29) UPI - A simmering dispute over the defense of a youth on trial in the gang rape of a woman jogger erupted Monday when his mother and sister refused to be witnesses in his defense.

Ripping out the heart of the defense case, the mother of Kevin Richardson, Grace Cuffee, and his sister, Angela Cuffee, angrily told defense lawyer Howard Diller that they would not cooperate with him.

After a private conference with Justice Thomas Galligan in his chambers at state Supreme Court in Manhattan, Diller said the judge told him to ''do the best with what you've got.''

Diller had planned to argue that Richardson, 16, was tricked into making a confession by police who repeatedly promised he could go home if he made incriminating statements. His mother and sister were both at the precinct on the night of his arrest and were expected to be the prime defense witnesses.

Richardson and Kharey Wise, 18, are on trial on charges they beat and raped a woman jogger, whose name has not been published because of the nature of the crime, in Central Park on April 19, 1989. They also are accused of beating and robbing two male joggers, John Loughlin, 42, and David Lewis, 32.

Three other youths were convicted of the charges last summer and are serving 5 to 10 year jail sentences.

The Richardson family's bizarre decision to quit the defense case came just days after the family fired Diller and hired C. Vernon Mason. Because the move came during an ongoing trial and Mason wanted to pick an entirely new jury, Galligan refused to allow the switch.

''It's difficult, it's unpleasant,'' said Diller, now faced with creating a new defense strategy.

''I'm here to protect Kevin's rights. If his family doesn't want to protect his rights, that's very sad. By doing what they're doing, they are hurting Kevin's case,'' Diller said.

Since firing Diller on Oct. 24, the family has been in close contact with Mason. The black activist lawyer is best known for advising Tawana Brawley, the black teen who claimed she was raped by six white men. Acting on his advise, Brawley refused to cooperate with authorities investigating her claims. A state grand jury subsequently found her story was a hoax.

Last week, Mason said the family fired Diller because he has said he would not grill the woman jogger when she testifies.

A family friend, Lamont Radcliff, also said they were upset that Diller had no plans to question why the jogger's boyfriend is not a suspect in the rape case.

During testimony Monday, Officer Robert Powers recalled tackling a fleeing Richardson and arresting him in the park. Another youth, Clarence Thomas, also was arrested but he was never indicted.

Both were on their way to the precinct in a police cruiser when a crying Thomas suddenly blurted out, ''I know who did the murdering!'' Powers testified.

''Kevin said, 'Yeah, I know who it is. And I'll tell you where he lives,''' the officer said.

The victim they were referring to was Loughlin, who was knocked unconscious in the attack, Powers said. The assailant was Antron McCray, 16, one of the teens convicted last summer, he testified.

AUSTIN, Texas (OCT. 29) UPI - A rapist who quoted Republican gubernatorial nominee Clayton Williams during an attack on a 31-year-old woman was sentenced Monday to 50 years in prison.

Travis County State District Judge Bob Perkins imposed the sentence on Chris Ronald Ausland, 34, who earlier pleaded guilty to charges of aggravated sexual assault and burglary.

Ausland's victim told police that during the attack Ausland quoted Williams' remark about rape that she should ''relax and enjoy it if it's inevitable.''

The assault took place March 29, just five days after Williams made the comment about rape to reporters who had joined him for a cattle roundup on his West Texas ranch.

Williams' quip likened bad weather to a woman being raped, saying, ''if it's inevitable, just relax and enjoy it.''

The wealthy Midland oilman-rancher, who faces Democrat Ann Richards in the Nov. 6 general election, first said he was only joking when he made the comment but later apologized for it.

But the Austin woman who was raped told reporters Monday outside the courtroom that rape is not a joking matter.

''At no point, Mr. Williams, was I able to relax and enjoy it,'' she said.

''Rape isn't a joke. It's a terrible thing.

''At the time, Clayton Williams tried to explain his comment away as a joke. Any candidate who jokes about rape shows a great insensitivity to women, and he is not likely to take a stand in promoting victims' rights.''

The woman, who asked to remain unidentified, said Williams has an attitude about rape that ''is outdated, wrong and hurtful.''

In the courtroom, Ausland apologized for the rape, saying he had a ''sexual addiction'' that he hoped will be cured in prison.

OSLO, NORWAY (OCT. 29) UPI - The three-party, Conservative-led coalition government resigned Monday because of internal differences over Norway's relationship with the European Community, and the Labor Party was poised to regain power.

Conservative caretaker Prime Minister Jan P. Syse conceded Monday night he would not be able to form a new government. His junior coalition partner, the Center Party, said it would not support Syse's Conservatives because ofdifferences over the EC issues.

''Our differences are so fundamental on the issue of the EC that we cannot support the formation of a minority Conservative government,'' said Center Party spokeswoman Anne Enger Lahnstein.

Syse, whose coalition governed Norway for little more than a year, said, ''I find it highly regrettable for the country, but such a clear statement must be taken into account.''

Under the Norwegian constitution, mid-term elections may not be held and the next regular elections in Norway are set for 1993.

The moves Monday appeared to position the Labor Party, led by former Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland, to regain power if Brundtland was asked to form a new government.

The current crisis came after the Center Party refused to support legislative changes to repeal Norwegian laws limiting foreign investment in Norway.

The so-called concession laws date back to the 19th century and were imposed to prevent foreign companies and individuals from owning too much of Norwegian society.

But in ongoing negotiations with the EC on closer economic and political ties, and even Norway's eventual membership of the Community, EC negotiators have made it clear that such laws will have to be repealed.

The Center Party, historically firm opponents of Norwegian membership of the EC, maintained it would not tolerate such a move and would resign from government if moves to repeal the laws were made.

The other coalition partner, the Christian Democrats, vowed not to stay in government without the Center party.

Norway turned down EC membership in a 1972 referendum after a bitter campaign in which the Center Party played a prominent role as an anti-EC party.

Conservative Party negotiators, beset by internal problems that include a row over Syse's personal finances, the resignation of the Conservative mayor of Oslo, and bad opinion poll figures have been unable to force their smaller partners' hand.

Commenting on the resignation, Brundtland said it remained unclear whether she would take up the premiership again.

''We have at present no idea who will form the next government. This all depends on parties other than ours,'' said Brundtland.

Latest opinion polls have shown Syse's current three government parties trailing far behind Labor in popular support, giving the administration only 29.6 percent of the popular vote while Labor polled 42.1 percent.

The Socialist Left Party, a traditional Labor support party, was given 13 percent in the poll.

DHAHRAN, SAUDI ARABIA (OCT. 29) UPI - A U.S. Navy warship and its helicopter Monday aided an Egyptian cargo vessel that reported a fire out of control.

The navy said the cruiser USS Biddle got a distress call from the ship Sea

Breeze at 9:05 a.m. (1:05 a.m. EST) and went to the area, sending its helicopter to survey the area.

Fourteen Sea Breeze crewmembers had abandoned the ship and were rescued by the pleasure boat ''Tiran'' and three commercial dive boats. The crewmembers were later transferred to a nearby Egyptian minesweeper.

One of the crewmens, suffering from shock, was transported to the Biddle and later to the destroyer USS Moosbrugger, where he was being treated and was listed in good condition.

There was no immediate word on the fate of the burning ship.

BUENOS AIRES, ARGENTINA (OCT. 29) UPI - Argentine and British negotiators are under pressure to reach a fishing conservation agreement concerning waters surrounding the disputed Falkland Islands before the squid season begins in February, a British diplomat said Monday.

The diplomat, who asked not to be named, said representatives from Argentina and Britain were holding talks on preserving fishing resources in the South Atlantic.

''There are external pressures,'' the diplomat said. ''The squid fishing season starts in February. If you're going to have an agreement, the time to conclude it is before February.''

Foreign Minister Domingo Cavallo, speaking by phone Monday on a Buenos Aires radio program, denied a report published Sunday by Clarin newspaper that said Britain was ''seriously'' considering extending its off-shore fishing protection zone around the Falklands from 150 miles to 200 miles.

''The British government has not decided anything and has resisted pressures from the islanders to extend its fishing protection zone,'' Cavallo said.

He said an extension of the fishing protection zone would ''create very grave problems for the very interests which the islanders are trying to protect, because, obviously, Argentina will not remain passive.''

Commenting on Cavallo's remarks, the British diplomat said, ''We have very little to add to what Cavallo said. We are still in the process of talking about fishing. The islanders have expressed their position, but the decision will be made by the capital (London).''

The diplomat said in 1986, Britain asserted sovereignty around a 200- mile off-shore zone around the Falklands, but through its own choice has decided to limit the area of fishing conservation to 150 miles around the archipelago.

Argentina, trying to enforced a claim dating form colonial times, invaded the Falklands in 1982 but was defeated in a 10-week battle with British forces.

The two nations on Feb. 15 reestablished diplomatic relations that had been severed during the conflict.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 29) UPI - Africa may escape "the pesticide treadmill," judging by the success of a project that enlists natural predators to combat pests mangling the vital cassava crop, researchers said Monday. Cassava is a major source of food for 200 million people in the humid tropics of Africa. It also is an important crop in South America and Asia.

"Follow-up studies ... have demonstrated that classical biological control, properly planned and implemented, can provide a timely, cost-effective and ecologically safe solution to a major pest problem," Hans Herren wrote in describing steps to combat the cassava mealybug and green mite.

The pests reached Africa in the early 1970s and have spread across most of the cassava belt, a region bigger than the United States and India combined. Huge crop losses can result from infestations.

Use of so-called biological controls frequently has been cited as an alternative to over-reliance on pesticides. The technique was mentioned in a National Academy of Sciences report last year that pointed to the potential of alternative agriculture.

"Biological control has saved Africa from the pesticide treadmill," Herren wrote in a scientific paper describing the project to combat the mealybug. He said eight applications of insecticides were needed to control the mealybug in test plots. By contrast, he said during a news conference, natural predators can become established after a single release - an attractive prospect considering the cost of chemicals.

Herren is director of the Biological Control Program established by the International Institute of Tropical Agriculture to fight the pests. The IITA was aided by a Colombia-based research center that helped track down the origin of the mealybug and its enemies.

So far, 15 of the natural predators have been released in Africa. Particularly effective has been release of a parasitic wasp that attacks the mealybug.

Anthony Belloti, of the International Center for Tropical Agriculture, said collaboration between the two institutions continues with the objective of controlling the green mite, which is a serious pest in northwest Brazil, as well as Africa.

Belloti said tests in Colombia indicated biological controls can be as effective as pesticides in suppressing the cassava green mite. Herren said the biological control program received $24 million for its work from 1979 through 1988. The parasitic wasp has been established in 25 countries covering 2.7 million hectares, the equivalent of 6.7 million acres.

Detailed monitoring in Benin, the Ivory Coast, Ghana, Malawi, Nigeria, and Zambia has shown mealbug populations were being brought under control, Herren said.

An independent analysis suggested a benefit to cost ratio of 149 to one for the project. Herren also referred in his paper to a study that showed yield increase of 2.5 metric tons per hectare, or 2,213 pounds per acre, from biological controls. The IITA recently opened a research center in Benin to work on biological controls for pests, diseases and weeds.

(OCT. 29) UPI - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev said Monday the Persian Gulf crisis must be settled peacefully and indicated his envoy to Baghdad found signs Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein may be softening his position on the conquest of Kuwait.

Saddam, for his part, said in an interview that his talks with Soviet envoy Yevgeny Primakov were ''wide-ranging, deep and very useful.'' Saddam also criticized President Bush for comparing the Iraqi leader to Hitler.

In another development, an Iraqi Airways plane was in Kuwait preparing to take off with French hostages following Iraq's decision to free French citizens held in Iraq and Iraqi-occupied Kuwait.

Gorbachev, concluding a two-day meeting with French President Francois Mitterrand, told reporters in France that war in the Persian Gulf is unacceptable and suggested Saudi Arabia work toward an ''inter- Arab'' solution to the conflict.

Primakov flew to Saudi Arabia from Baghdad Monday after an apparent failure to persuade Saddam to end his nearly 3-month-old occupation of Kuwait. But Gorbachev revealed his latest information from Primakov indicates Saddam appears to have softened his position.

''One sees signs showing that the leadership of Iraq could finally listen to good sense and the voices of the United Nations,'' Gorbachev said.

He said if Arabs find a solution among themselves, then ''the Iraqi leadership would be more ready to accept that.''

''Saudi Arabia is close, a neighbor, and has certain relations with Iraq. It could take an initiative, as well as other countries,'' Gorbachev said.

''There are inter-Arab mechanisms. They must act.''

Gorbachev said, however, there is no question of the U.N. Security Council breaking ranks, and he termed the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait as ''adventurism.''

Primakov, having arrived in Saudi Arabia, was expected to speak with Saudi King Fahd and other officials about Gorbachev's peace proposal, Arab radio stations said.

An Egyptian foreign ministry source in Cairo, reacting to Gorbachev's remarks, told United Press International that the world should have the option of military force if other methods do not push Iraq out of Kuwait.

''If the unconditional Iraqi withdrawal cannot be achieved by peaceful means, then the world community should resort to other options, '' the source said.

And Secretary of State James Baker, in a speech prepared for delivery Monday in Los Angeles, said Saddam is ''hell-bent on a revival of hot war'' in the Middle East. Baker said although the United States prefers a diplomatic solution, ''We will not rule out a possible use of force if Iraq continues to occupy Kuwait.''

Some Arab newspapers had described Primakov's mission as a ''last chance for peace.'' After the envoy left without a promise of Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait, the U.N. Security Council voted Monday for new measures against Iraq. The measures hold Iraq responsible for damage to Kuwaiti property and for human rights violations stemming from the invasion.

Primakov also spoke in Baghdad late Sunday with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz and Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat.

Egypt's Middle East News Agency quoted Soviet sources as saying Primakov discussed the continuing plight of some 3,000 Soviet nationals in Iraq.

Neither Baghdad nor Moscow has described the Soviets as hostages, and Iraq has allowed a number to be flown home. But Saddam has indicated the majority of Soviets must stay in Iraq to fulfill their contracts.

NEW YORK (OCT. 29) UPI - One out of every seven babies in the Western Hemisphere is born to a teenage mother, with young Latin American women leading the statistics by a large margin, a study showed Monday.

The annual birthrate among women ages 15 to 19 in the United States is 51 per 1,000, compared with 23 per 1,000 in Canada and 80 to 90 per 1,000 in Latin America, said a report released by the Alan Guttmacher Institute.

By age 20, about 10 percent of all women in Canada and 20 percent of all women in the United States have given birth to their first child, the study said.

In comparison, 30 percent of all women in Brazil, Columbia, Peru and Trinidad, 40 percent of all women in the Dominican Republic, Ecuador and Mexico, and 50 percent of all women in Guatemala have borne their first child by age 20.

''In much of the Latin American and Caribbean region the traditional pattern of starting af family at a young age is changing slowly or not at all,'' said the study by the reproductive health group.

The report attributed the high birth rate among Latin American teenagers to strong cultural and social pressure on young women to marry and have children, ignorance about the risks of pregnancy, and a belief that using birth control is akin to promiscuousness.

''Overall family size is declining throughout the region, not because young women are postponing the age at which they start their families, but because women are beginning to practice family planning (or are becoming sterilized) in their 20s and 30s, after they have had several children,'' the study said.

Despite such statistics, the study said ''even countries with vigorous family planning programs'' do not target sexually active teenagers as being in special need of family planning services or programs aimed at counseling them on the advantages of postponing motherhood.

The research was funded by the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation.

ANCHORAGE, AK (OCT. 29) UPI - The first regularly scheduled flights between the West Coast and the Soviet Far East begin next spring, but U.S. officials and their Soviet counterparts celebrated the new air route Monday, declaring that it signifies the ''ice curtain'' has melted.

''We are standing at the edge of an era where we're going to see regular visits back and forth between the American West Coast and the Soviet Far East '' Alaska Gov. Steve Cowper said at a ceremony marking the new route.

''I think this is truly the lifting of the ice curtain between our two nations '' Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, told officials of the Federal Aviation Administration and the Soviet Ministry of Civil Aviation attending the ceremony at the FAA Anchorage air traffic control center.

''We are melting the ice,'' Vsevolod Burkov, deputy chief of air traffic control in the Soviet aviation ministry, said through an interpreter. ''We are on the right way to establishing air transportation between the United States and the Soviet Union.''

''The red tape has now become the red carpet,'' said Ted Beckloff, FAA Alaska region administrator.

Aeroflot and Pan Am regularly fly between Moscow and New York and Washington. But for years, anyone wanting to travel between the West Coast and the Soviet Far East has had to go around the world in the other direction, taking the established route across the Atlantic. This has made it difficult for the West Coast to do business and develop relations with the emerging Soviet Far East.

A small airline in Nome, Alaska, Bering Air, has been flying charters across the Bering Strait to the Soviet town of Provideniya while aviation officials on the both sides of the border hammered out an agreement signed earlier this year to establish regular air routes between cities on the West Coast and the Soviet east coast.

Flights will link Khabarovsk and Magadan on the Soviet side to Anchorage and San Francisco on the American side. Aeroflot is tentatively scheduled to initiate flights in April, with Alaska Airlines flights beginning in June.

In June 1988, Alaska Airlines flew the first flight across the Bering Strait since Cold War politics erected the ice curtain border more than four decades earlier. Since that flight from Anchorage to Provideniya, Alaska has been seeking to establish regular air travel.

''In our day-to-day affairs we often lose sight of the fact that it is still possible to be pioneers,'' Beckloff said, ''to be the ones that do something first.''

The new flights across the Bering Sea will encourage cultural, educational, business and social exchanges as well as tourism, Beckloff said.

Implementing the flight agreements has required setting up various air traffic control procedures for the new route and the Soviets have had to find English-speaking controllers, said Frank Price, FAA manager of international procedures.

Various FAA and Soviet aviation officials were to fly Tuesday from Anchorage to Anadyr, site of a key Soviet east coast air traffic control facility, for a similar ceremony on the Soviet side marking the new route, then return to the United States to finalize technical arrangements at FAA headquarters in Washington.

''This is truly a historic occasion, something we've been looking forward to for a long time,'' said John Kern, an administrator from FAA headquarters in Washington. ''We're looking forward to the day that more routes and more destinations will be established.''

CHARLESTOWN, IN (OCT. 29) UPI - A disgruntled teenager took a teacher and students hostage at gunpoint in a classroom Monday at Charlestown High School.

Investigators said Eli Dean, 18, apparently was upset over being suspended for pulling a fire alarm lever in the school two weeks ago.

Dean, reportedly armed with a handgun, confronted the teacher and about 15 students around 11 a.m. EST and took them prisoner.

He subsequently allowed about 10 students to leave but held the teacher and five other students.

No shots were fired and no injuries were reported.

All other personnel in the school were evacuated while a SWAT team moved in and state police negotiators made contact with Dean.

Police said his demands, if any, were not known immediately.

Police said Dean's father is a weighmaster for the Indiana State Police Department.

Charlestown is located north of Louisville, Ky.

Dean confronted the students in the school with a gun, student Amanda Garr said.

''He took them into his favorite teachers classroom,'' she said.

Garr confirmed the report that Dean was ''kicked out of school. I guess it upset him.''

Still, Garr said she was stunned that Dean would enter the school and take hostages.

''Eli, to me, is the best guy anybody could ever ask for,'' she said. ''Something got in him and he's gone crazy about about. He's a very good guy. He wouldn't hurt anybody.''

Garr said she and other students at first thought a bomb threat had been received when they were told to leave the building.

''We found out it was Eli and everybody started crying,'' she said.

The evacuated students were sent home for the day.

PANAMA CITY, PANAMA (OCT. 29) UPI - Panamanian bankers and officials are angered by what they see as U.S. efforts to badger Panama into changing its bank secrecy laws, seeing a proposed treaty as a threat to the country's banking industry.

The United States has yet to release $84 million in aid because Panama refuses to sign the treaty that would allow for closer scrutiny of the country's 113 banks.

Many Panamanians say withholding the aid and charges of money laundering against a bank to which President Guillermo Endara has close ties are heavy-handed measures by the United States to force Endara into signing the treaty.

Under Endara, Panama has made some moves to fight money laundering, which is said to have flourished under former military ruler Manuel Noriega. Large cash deposits must be registered and more than 400 bank accounts have been frozen for investigation.

But the United States also wants Panama to sign a Mutual Legal Assistance Agreement giving U.S. authorities access to secret bank accounts. U.S. officials say it would help both countries investigate crimes and would improve Panama's image as a magnet for dirty money. "It is sort of like a 'Good Housekeeping Seal of Approval' saying that, 'Okay, we're serious, legitimate bankers around here,'" a U.S. official said.

Jose Torres, a local economist who supports the treaty, said "there has to be much better control over the operation of the banks." Bank secrecy was the key to Panama's growth as a financial center that provides 7,000 jobs and pumps $200 million a year into the economy.

Panama has said it will cooperate on money laundering investigations, but it objects to language in the treaty that would allow U.S. authorities to probe for tax evasion and activities not considered to be crimes in Panama.

Bankers said the treaty could lead to massive withdrawals by worried depositors. "We are not going to sign a treaty that finishes off the banking center," said Julio Berrios, treaty affairs director at the Foreign Ministry.

Edgardo Lasso Valdes, president of the Banker's Association, said bankers are also sensitive to U.S. meddling because they are struggling to recover billions of dollars taken out of Panama after the United States imposed economic sanctions in 1988 to pressure Noriega.

Charges by a U.S. anti-narcotics agent that Banco Interoceanico (Interbanco), of which Endara is a shareholder and director, is involved in money laudering have added to the controversy.

The agent tipped off the Panamanian Attorney General's Office in January that $12 million belonging to Colombian drug boss Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha was deposited in Interbanco last October.

On Thursday, Endara denied any knowledge of money laundering at Interbanco and said he submitted his resignation from the board in May. His resignation has not yet been accepted by Panama's banking commission.

Some observers say the United States is using the scandal to pressure Endara into signing the pact. "I think it is a scheme to force him into signing the treaty," said opposition legislator Mario Rognoni. "The United States is proving that it is willing to use money laundering as a political instrument. They used it against Noriega. Now they are using it against Endara." U.S. officials have declined to comment on the Interbanco allegations.

HAMDEN, CT (OCT. 29) UPI - Federal agents and state police continued digging up a suspected secret mob grave Monday, where the remains of at least three people were found buried in a garage behind a locksmith shop, officials said.

The owner of the shop, convicted bank robber Richard Joseph Beedle Sr., 58, appeared in U.S. District Court in New Haven and was ordered held without bond said U.S. Attorney Stanley A. Twardy Jr.

The bones of three and perhaps four people believed to be victims of warfare within the Patriarca organized crime family in the Hartford, Conn.-Springfield Mass., area were found in a garage behind Beedle's home, Twardy said.

Beedle was charged with being an accessory after the fact of a murder committed in aid of racketeering, which is punishable by up to 10 years in federal prison and a $250,000 fine, Twardy said.

Arrested on the same charge Monday was Salvatore ''Butch'' D'Aquila Jr. of Middletown, 48, who operates Central News, a newspaper and variety store on Main Street in Middletown, Twardy said.

D'Aquila has past convictions on state gambling and fraud charges, said Twardy.

FBI agents discovered the mass grave in a garage behind Beedle's home in Hamden on Friday after searching for weeks with the cooperation of another suspect convicted on racketeering charges.

Jack Johns, a reputed organized crime figure arrested in March in a roundup of the Providence, R.I.-based Patriarca family, told authorities that bodies had been buried in Hamden, but he could not remember the address, Twardy said.

Johns rode through the New Haven suburb with FBI agents and spotted the house Friday, Twardy said.

Beedle was arrested and federal and state investigators with a search warrant and picks and shovels dug up the remains over the weekend.

Beedle, who operated Dick's Locksmith Shop in Hamden, was convicted in a 1970 bank robbery in Allentown, Pa., and was long associated with organized crime, New Haven police said.

The grave had been disturbed earlier in an apparent attempt to remove the remains and no other fragements were found in the search which continued Monday, Twardy said.

Twardy said he could not comment on the possible identities of the victims, but a published report said one of those buried in Hamden may be William Grant an East Hartford restaurant owner who vanished in 1988.

Grant was regarded as an ally to William P. ''Billy'' Grasso of New Haven, who the government said was second in command of the Patriarca family before he was shot in the back of the neck in June 1989 and thrown into the Connecticut River in Wethersfield.

ATLANTA (OCT. 29) UPI - The nation's largest ophthalmology organization gave Bob Hope its Distinguished Service Award Monday and the comedian returned the favor with a mix of eye doctor jokes and a message of gratitude to the physicians.

''You can tell it's an eye doctors' convention just by the cars in the parking lot,'' Hope told doctors, exhibitors and other eye care workers gathered for the 94th Annual meeting of the American Academy of Ophthalmology at the Georgia World Congress Center. ''You can't read the license plates without covering one eye first and the headlights are dilated.''

Hope, who spearheads National Eye Healthcare Month each year by volunteering for public service announcements and billboard advertising, is considered one of the most charitable contributors to the cause, said Academy spokeswoman Linda Whitfield.

''It's really an age of specialists,'' Hope began another joke. ''One time, one doctor raised my eyelid with his finger. I said, 'what's next?' He said, That's all I do.'''

Hope said he once asked former President Gerald Ford if his eyes were ever checked and Ford responded, ''No, they've always been blue.''

Hope got the biggest laugh when he turned his barbs on President Bush.

''I want my eyesight improved too,'' Hope said. ''With all these budget problems, it's getting very hard to read Bush's lips.''

Hope concluded his acceptance speech on a serious note.

''I am deeply honored by this particular award,'' he said. ''Especially, coming from a group of specialists I couldn't admire more. Thank God for opthalmologists.''

Whitfield said among Hope's contributions has been his reminders to Americans to get regular eye examinations, especially after age 40.

She said the recommendation is important because many eye diseases have no symptoms, but nevertheless gradually rob people of their vision.

There are an estimated 35-to-42-million blind people in the world. Doctors believe up to 80 percent of the blindness is preventable or curable, Whitfield said.

One of the main focuses of the four-day meeting of ophthalmologists will be discussion of new programs to extend eye care to developing nations.

''We have the technology to help people deal with blindness and low vision,'' said Dr. Edward Garcia, president of the academy. ''People in other parts of the world - developing nations - most often die when they become blind because of a lack of resources.''

BEIJING (OCT. 29) UPI - A leading World Bank official said Monday the institution should normalize its lending to China, in another sign the bank was ending a punitive stance adopted last year after Beijing's crackdown on democracy advocates.

China's official Xinhua news agency said World Bank Vice President Attila Karaosmanoglu discussed the issue during a meeting with hard-line Premier Li Peng. "I hope the World Bank will pace up steps to restore loans to China, " Xinhua quoted Karaosmanoglu as saying.

Karaosmanoglu's statement followed recent comments by World Bank President Barber Conable, who said the institution's policy toward China would be relexed to reflect the wishes of leaders at this summer's G-7 summit meeting in Houston.

Conable said at a Sept. 24 news conference the bank was "moving toward a normal program in keeping with the reform program that China has," and he predicted at least one new loan in October and another in November.

The bank president said his instutition regarded the statement by the G-7 leaders, whose countries constitute the leading Western industrialized democracies, as representing an important "consensus" on loans to China.

Karaosmanoglu said the time had come for the World Bank to resume making loans to China "in a normal manner," although he stressed that China should make better use of funds it receives from the bank, Xinhua reported Monday.

The World Bank, which makes concessionary loans to developing countries for long-range development, suspended most lending to Beijing last year in keeping with widespread condemnation of the bloody June 4 crackdown that crushed China's nationwide pro-democracy movement.

The bank deferred approval of seven projects worth $780 million that were pending at the time of the crackdown, and it has lent China less than $600 million since then, with all of those funds considered urgent "humanitarian" loans. The World Bank had lent China a total of about $1.35 billion in the fiscal year that ended June 30, 1989.

Some of the political and economic sanctions imposed by the West gradually have been lifted, most recently last week by the European Community, but most defense-related sanctions remain in place.

A spokesman at World Bank headquarters in Washington said the institution never formally enacted any type of "sanctions" against China, but said bank officials had been refraining from recommending loans to China that they expected its board of directors would reject.

The spokesman, Pat Sison, said he now believed World Bank directors were ready to resume "normal" lending policies toward China, although he said he could not predict what amount of loans that would involve.

Sison noted that Conable, when quoted recently as stating the bank would approve 11 loans to China in the coming year, firmly denied the report. At the Sept. 24 news conference, Conable said, "We think we will have a fairly steady flow of loans to China."

Xinhua did not say whether Karaosmanoglu and Li discussed China's tense political climate, but quoted Karaosmanoglu as saying he had developed "a better understanding of the direction and priorities of China's reform and construction."

China is in the third year of a tough economic retrenchment program that has sharply curbed inflation while slowing the pace of industrial and commercial modernization and development.

The communist government nevertheless has been unable to curb its own massive outlays for social services, resulting in alarmingly high deficits and a scramble for new revenues.

NEW YORK (OCT. 29) UPI - The dollar shrugged off a long-expected Federal Reserve move to bring down short-term U.S. interest rates and actually gained ground in New York trading Monday, with some players citing rising war fears.

Currency traders said the perceived lowering of the key Federal funds rate to 7 3/4 percent from eight percent, effected by the U.S. central bank by the addition of reserves to the banking system, came as no surprise.

For weeks financial markets had awaited Congressional passage of legislation to cut the U.S. budget deficit, which Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan had broadly hinted would be rewarded with lower short-term rates. The Fed manipulates the funds rate, paid on short-term loans between members of the U.S. reserve system, to signal credit policy.

"Everyone had gone into that short of dollars" commented Albert Soria, first vice president and currency manager for the Kansallis Osake Pankki investment bank. After the Fed eased, players bought back dollars, he said.

In late New York dealings, the dollar traded at 1.5225 German marks, up from 1.5140 marks Friday, and at 128.50 Japanese yen, up from 128.10.

Soria added that in later trading the market focused on what seemed to be a higher likelihood of fighting in the Persian Gulf - one key development being the convening of the U.N. Military Staff Committee.

Interest rate considerations have been displaced by expectations of a clash,

Soria said. "The latest is rumors emanating out of Europe that conflict could erupt anytime between now and the middle of November," he said.

But chief trader Graham Beale of the Hongkong & Shanghai Banking Corp. said a directionless market was overreacting to headlines. "It's still a shouting match at the moment, and until something happens we'll stay in the doldrums," Beale said.

Other New York dollar rates: 1.2930 Swiss francs, up from 1.2800; 5.0925 French francs, up from 5.0680; and 1,139.50 Italian lire, up from 1,134.50. The pound slipped to $1.95 from $1.9575.

In European dealings the dollar closed mixed as markets awaited a U.S. credit easing consequent on passage of a budget package. Players also looked for some dollar-bearish economic news in the days ahead.

"Data later this week ... could mean the Federal Reserve will ease its rates between a quarter and a half a percentage point," said David Osborne, an economist with James Capel Co. He spoke before the New York Fed took action to lower the federal funds rate a quarter point. "With that in mind, the dollar is marginally weaker, especially against the deutsch mark and the yen," he added.

The dollar closed slightly lower in Frankfurt, at 1.5150 German marks against 1.5170 at Friday's close. But the U.S. unit closed higher in Zurich at 1.2820 Swiss francs compared with 1.2805.

In London, the pound continued to ease against the U.S. unit after a weekend summit of European leaders left British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher alone in opposing a single European currency, dealers said. The pound closed at $1.9525 vs. $1.9555 Friday.

The dollar ended slightly lower in Paris, Brussels and Milan, at 5.0510 French francs vs. 5.0685, 31.18 Belgian francs vs. 31.22, and 1, 130.70 Italian lire vs.1,134.50.

Earlier, the dollar slipped against Japan's yen in Tokyo after passage on the weekend of the U.S. deficit-cutting budget bill. The dollar closed at 127.35 Japanese yen, down 1.15 yen from 128.50 yen late last week.

The budget bill topped a list of concerns making for a dollar-bearish market. Dealers also cited Tuesday's release of third quarter GNP figures expected to reflect a continuing U.S. economic slump.

Gold closed lower in Zurich at $373 an ounce vs, $373.50. It also was down in London at $372.75 an ounce vs. $373 Friday.

Silver closed sharply lower in Zurich at $4.10 an ounce vs. $4.20. But it was unchanged in London at $4.16.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $374.25 an ounce, up from $371.25. The New York Commodity Exchange settled contract gold at $373.70 an ounce, also ahead from $370.90.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.145 an ounce, up from $4.08. Comex silver closed at $4.127 an ounce, up from $4.05.

CLEVELAND (OCT. 29) UPI - The powerful rhythm and blues act of Ike and Tina Turner and the Byrds, who pioneered the hybrid folk-rock and country- rock sounds, are part of the sixth class of inductees for the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame.

The 1991 class announced Monday also includes 1950s and '60s rhythm and blues star LaVern Baker, blues guitarist John Lee Hooker, the Impressions, soul singer Wilson Pickett and guitar and harmonica blues artist Jimmy Reed.

Inducted during the Jan. 16 ceremonies in New York City for the ''early influence'' category will be blues master Howlin' Wolf, and producers Ralph Bass and Dave Bartholomew will be inducted in the non- performing category.

Members of the latest class join such names as Chuck Berry, Ray Charles, Fats Domino, Elvis Presley, Bo Diddley, The Beatles, the Rolling Stones and The Four Tops among the 71 artists inducted since 1986. Construction on the hall of fame building is expected to begin next year in Cleveland.

Paul Shaffer, for the sixth straight year, will put together the muscial show for the induction ceremony, which in past years has lasted until the early morning hours with some of the greatest names in rock 'n' roll participating a jam session.

Shaffer was particularly pleased with the choice of Ike Turner, 59, and Tina Turner, 52. The team is no longer together. Ike Turner was sentenced Feb. 16 to four years in state prison in California on drug abuse charges.

''Nobody does it live like Ike and Tina Turner,'' said Shaffer, who was in Cleveland to make the announcement of the inductees. ''They defined an R and B act ... put together in a revue to kill people.''

Shaffer said he considered the Turners' 1970 remake of ''Proud Mary'' a classic.

The Byrds are credited with introducing the music of Bob Dylan to a mass audience before going on to develop their own distinctive style.

Members of the Byrds were Roger ''Jim'' McGuinn, 48, David Crosby, 49, Chris Hillman, 47, Gene Clark, 45, and Michael Clarke, 47.

''All of them went on to solo careers and remain popular today,'' Shaffer noted.

TBILISI, GEORGIA, USSR (OCT. 29) UPI - The pro-independence Round Table- Free Georgia bloc won a landslide victory that will oust the communists from power in Georgia's first free elections in 70 years, officials said Monday.

Georgian election commission chairman Irakli Zhordania said preliminary results showed the opposition group with roughly twice as many votes as the communists. Another election official estimated Round Table received 60 percent of the vote.

''This was the first time we have had multiparty elections that expressed the true will of the people,'' Zhordania said. ''This moment can be considered one of the most decisive in the life our country.''

Final official results were not expected to be available for three days, but Zhordania said enough results were in to declare Round Table the clear winner.

''I want to congratulate the Round Table and its leader Ziad Gamsakhurdia for their victory on behalf of the elction commision,'' said Zhordania, a communist whose control of the commission was criticized by the opposition before Sunday's elections.

''I hope they can fulfill all the ideas and promises for a better future of our country,'' Zhordania said.

Round Table has vowed to seek independence from Moscow, although officials from the party refuse to speculate on a timetable.

After the preliminary results were announced, several thousand Round Table supporters held a victory rally in front of the government building, closing Tbilisi's main Rustaveli Avenue.

After Gamsakhurdia spoke and the rally was breaking up, a man fired a starter's pistol with a blank, causing a brief panic in the crowd, and the man who fired the dud pistol was seized.

Because of previous shootings connected with the campaign, the obvious prank caused alarm. In the run-up to the elections, shots were fired into cndidates' homes.

On Friday, the leader of National Democratic Party, Georgi Chanturia, was wounded in the arm. The assailant has not been caught.

''We are very proud,'' said Tengiz Dikhamingia, an official of the Round Table bloc and a likely member of the new parliament. ''The first thing we will do is change the Soviet-imposed constitution.

"Eventually we hope to see the total destruction of so-called Soviet reality."

Round Table is led by Gamsakhurdia, founder of the Georgia Helsinki Watch Group who was imprisoned for two years under Leonid Brezhnev from 1977-79 as a political dissident.

But now the victory by the Round Table bloc gives Gamsakhurdia the inside inside track on becoming Georgia's president when parliament convenes.

''Nobody expected such a big advantage for Round Table,'' Zhordania said. ''Everywhere throughout Georgia, the advantage went to Round Table.''

The results vindicated the prediction of Gamsakhurdia, who said before the polls that his opposition bloc would gain a parliamentary majority if the vote counting was fair.

Pre-election polls had shown the Communists polling 30 percent with Round Table second with 21.5 and the rest of the population undecided or favoring one of the other nine blocs participating.

Half the seats of the 250-member parliament will be allocated to the blocs by the proportion of total votes received, and the other half from direct balloting for specific candidates.

Zhordania said preliminary results showed 95 percent of the vote went to either Round Table or the Communists, but he refused to give specific numbers for either group.

Tengiz Sigua, deputy chairman of the republic's central election commission, said, however, that with about half the precincts counted, Round Table had about 60 percent of the vote and ''the proportions are not likely to change.''

Zhordania said the voting and the counting processes were fair with no serious irregularities.

In the direct balloting for individual candidates, Zhordania said in districts where results were available, Round Table was winning 35 seats and Communists were ahead in 20. Thirty districts will require runoff elections, and there were no results for the remaining districts, he said.

EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (OCT. 29) UPI - British defense chief Sir David Craig Monday said he was satisfied with the chain-of-command for multinational forces in Saudi Arabia but refused to say if London retains veto power over any war plans.

Craig told reporters during a visit to the Gulf nation that he was ''absolutely happy'' with command arrangements, although he did not specify what they were.

''We have made very good arrangements now, which are totally agreed by the hosts here, with our American friends and by all the British servicemen out here,'' he said.

He would not say if British commanders had veto power over war plans, saying instead they had the ''power of national command.'' He did not elaborate.

The chain-of-command issue is a thorny one, as foreign troops are stationed on Saudi sands at the invitation of King Fahd to defend his oil-rich kingdom. The king, the United States and other forces at times all have given conflicting views of the command structure.

Asked if prior to combat a British commander could ''say no'' to plans the British disliked and the Americans proposed, Craig said, ''It's not necessarily (U.S. commanding General Norman) Schwarzkopf. We obviously must be satisfied before we go to war that the plans are good. I'm sure they will be.''

He said London must handle the question of whether additional British troops would be sent.

Craig, visiting a Royal Engineers detachment assigned to the famed Desert Rats tank brigade, also said he saw nothing to indicate Iraqi President Saddam Hussein had any plans to leave Kuwait soon.

The 61-year-old Royal Air Force veteran told reporters that economic sanctions against Iraq were the way to go and ''clearly must bite. They'll bite in time. How long it's much more difficult to estimate. We must wait and see.''

The defense chief, whose position is the equivalent in the United States to chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, America's top military tribunal, said the multinational force now arrayed against Iraq within Saudi Arabia is ''in a good position to protect Saudi Arabia, and if there's aggression, we can certainly take that on too.''

SAN FRANCISCO (OCT. 29) UPI - President Bush denied Monday that he is preparing the nation for war in the Middle East, but said the United States would have ''no hesitancy at all'' to take military action against Iraq if provoked.

Speaking to reporters at a news conference while on the GOP campaign trail, Bush answered ''no'' when asked if he were preparing the United States for a military confrontation with Iraq and was evasive when asked if he thought continued tensions would lead to war.

''I'm just doing my job as president of the United States,'' said Bush. ''I'm not preparing anybody for anything. I am determined as I've ever been that this aggression will not stand.''

The president restated that an Iraqi withdrawl from Kuwait must top any peaceful settlement of the crisis that began on Aug. 2 when Saddam Hussein's troops rolled over its tiny, oil-rich neighbor in what the United States has condemned as an act of ''naked aggression.''

''There's no way we're going to have negotiation with conditionality, '' said Bush, who added the global coalition against Saddam is united and is sending a ''very clear signal to the invader that he's got to get out of Kuwait.''

Bush said he would meet Tuesday with congressional leaders, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to discuss the crisis, including plans to possibly deploy 100,000 additional troops and the president's responsibility to notify Congress of military confrontation under the War Powers Act.

''I am working to try to get this matter resolved peacefully. We have a lot of force there and they're well trained,'' said Bush. ''They are highly motivated and that alone is sending an enormously strong signal to Saddam Hussein.''

He said that ''history is replete with examples where the president had to take action. And I've done this in the past, and certainly, somebody mentioned provocation, we'd have no hesitancy at all.''

Questions about the possiblity of war surfaced as Secretary of State James Baker delivered a key foreign policy speech that kept the military option open and as a Soviet delegation reported no progress in attempting to persuade Saddam to remove his troops from Kuwait.

Baker, in a speech prepared for delivery in Los Angeles, said Saddam is ''hell-bent on a revival of hot war'' in the Middle East. Baker said although the United States prefers a diplomatic solution, ''We will not rule out a possible use of force if Iraq continues to occupy Kuwait.''

On the diplomatic front, Soviet envoy Yevgeny Primakov returned to Moscow following a meeting with Saddam in Baghdad in what some Arab newspapers called the ''last chance'' for a peaceful solution.

After Primakov left without a promise of an Iraqi withdrawl, the U.N. Security Council voted to hold Baghdad responsible for damage to Kuwaiti property and for human rights violations stemming from the invasion.

Later, Soviet President Mikahail Gorbachev said the gulf crisis must be settled peacefully and indicated Primakov found signs that Saddam may be sofening his position somewhat.

Saddam said in an interview that the talks were ''wide-ranging, deep and very useful.'' Saddam also criticized Bush for comparing him to Hitler.

ATHENS, GREECE (OCT. 29) UPI - Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has offered to make peace with Kurdish rebels in northern Iraq, and an Iranian newspaper said Tehran could mediate between the Baghdad government and the rebels, the official Islamic Republic News Agency said Monday.

In a dispatch monitored in Athens, IRNA quoted the Tehran newspaper Kayhan International as saying Saddam has begun a new move ''to make peace with Iraq's Kurdish minority.''

The newspaper said the new move could be taken as a goodwill gesture toward 95,000 Iraqi Kurdish refugees in Iran and tens of thousands living in Turkey.

Iraqi government forces battled Iranian-backed Kurdish rebels in the north of the country during then 1980-88 Gulf war, and Saddam sent several divisions of his troops into Kurdish territory to suppress the rebellion after the Iran-Iraq cease-fire in 1988.

Peace between the government troops and Kurdish rebels in northern Iraq would enable Saddam to deploy several thousand more troops in Kuwait, where he faces possible attack by a U.S.-led multinational force asembled in Saudi Arabia.

In August, the Iraqi president hastened to clinch a peace deal with Iran, capitulating to all Tehran's conditions to secure his eastern flank when a more serious military force began building up against him in the south.

Kayhan International did not give details of Saddam's latest peace moves toward the Kurds.

In an editorial, the newspaper said: ''While the Iraqi Kurds should take advantage of Saddam's new peace offer and reach an agreement for a long-lasting peace in their region, they should remember that verbal promises will not solve their problems.''

It said ''the Islamic Republic of Iran can play a vital role as a mediator between the two sides,'' adding that representatives of the Iraqi government and the Kurdish rebels could meet on neutral ground in Tehran to come to terms.

Some 3.5 million Kurds in northern Iraq, led mainly by the Kurdistan Democratic Party and the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan, have struggled for autonomy for at least three decades.

During the 1980-88 Gulf war, Saddam sought to suppress the rebellion by uprooting thousands of Kurds from their villages and towns, especially along the borders with Iran and Turkey, and transferring them to camps in the southern Iraqi desert.

In March 1988, Saddam's forces used chemical weapons against Kurdish rebels who occupied the town of Halabja with Iranian help, An estimated 5,000 Kurdish men, women and children died in the attack in which mustard gas, nerve gas and cyanide were used.

Kayhan International urged the Iraqi president to ''declare a true amnesty for thousands of Iraqi Kurds ... and let them return to their traditional lands.''

There was no immediate word from Kurdish rebel sources on how they would react to Saddam's latest peace moves in the region. In the past, rebel chiefs have warned Kurdish refugees in Iran and Turkey against accepting amnesty offers from Baghdad.

The Iraqi Kurdish rebels have frequently threatened major Iraqi oil installations in the provinces of Mosul and Kirkuk, but their forces are mainly concentrated in the provinces of Arbil and Sulaimaniya, where they hold large tracts of mountainous territory.

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR (OCT. 29) UPI - Gasoline stations closed and buses stopped running Monday in parts of El Salvador as operators pressed demands for higher profit margins and increased transport subsidies.

''This strike is the result of a lack of willingness on the part of the government (to negotiate) and we are demanding they hear us and give us a tariff compensation,'' said Alberto Lemus, president of the Bus Owners Association.

Bus owners have demanded larger subsidies from the government in order to avoid increasing fares.

Lemus said 90 percent of San Salvador's bus traffic had been shut down temporarily, leaving tens of thousands of commuters who normally use the bus system stranded.

Bus drivers parked their vehicles on some of the highways entering the capital causing traffic jams.

In San Miguel, 71 miles east of San Salvador, gasoline stations stayed closed and owners threatened to extend the strike nationwide if the government did not do something to increase their profit margins from the current 4 percent to 7 percent.

The gas station owners said they will remain closed until their demands are met.

Speaking on a morning television program, Vice President Francisco Merino repeated the government's customary response to economic and labor problems, saying the strikes may be orchestrated by rebels of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN.

Although the FMLN has some support among workers, small businessmen such as bus and gasoline station owners have not traditionally supported them. Lemus denied any link between the bus strike and the rebels.

''With all due respect, we regret the vice president's irresponsible statements,'' Lemus said. ''Our crisis is purely economic and we have no (political) ties with anyone.''

The effects of President Alfredo Cristiani's attempts to reduce the government's role in the economy by selling state-owned businesses and removing some price controls have been aggravated by continued war- related violence and higher world oil prices.

Inflation was 27 percent from January to July, according to figures published by the Central Reserve Bank, and the increase in world oil prices is expected to boost inflation even further during the second half of the year.

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 29) UPI - A woman who battered her lesbian lover was sentenced to three years' probation Monday in the first case involving a homosexual couple in which prosecutors won a conviction after presenting evidence of ''battered woman syndrome.''

The defendant, Sherry Sperling, 25, was also ordered by Municipal Court Judge Veronica Simmons McBeth to enroll in a batterer's treatment program and provide proof of enrollment by Nov. 27. Sperling was given credit for 33 days she spent in jail following her Sept. 15 arrest.

She was convicted Friday by a Municipal Court jury of one count of misdemeanor battery.

The charge stemmed from a Sept. 13 incident in which Sperling repeatedly struck her lover - blackening both of her eyes and leaving bruises on her body - during an attack at their home.

The victim reported the incident to police, but after reconciling with Sperling, recanted her account of how she was injured.

But prosecutors pressed their case, with Deputy City Attorney Angela West calling an expert to the witness stand to testify on battered woman syndrome.

Typically, the syndrome is an emotional response in which the victim of domestic violence comes to feel that she is responsible for the violence and that the batterer's reasons for hitting her are justified, said Deputy City Attorney Alana Bowman, who heads the City Attorney's domestic violence unit.

Consequently, a victim comes to believe the batterer's version of the crime and refuses to cooperate with the prosecution in order to protect the batterer Bowman said.

''The accepted tactic in domestic violence cases involving heterosexual relationships is to bring in an expert to testify about BWS and how it may be helpful in understanding why a victim initially reports an incident to police and then later is unwilling to assist in the prosecution,'' said City Attorney James Hahn.

''We decided to use the same tactic in this case, even though it had never been successfully done in the prosecution of a lesbian batterer, because the victim was recanting in a manner identical to the pattern we experience in hetrosexual cases,'' he said.

The expert witness called to testify was Dr. Valerie Coleman, who is employed at the Gay and Lesbian Community Center to counsel lesbian batterers and their victims.

The judge initially resisted the introduction of battered woman syndrome as evidence, saying she was not convinced that it had been established as applicable to a lesbian relationship. However, after lengthy questioning of Dr. Coleman, who has done extensive research on the topic, she permitted the testimony.

Coleman testified about the similarities between hetrosexual and homosexual relationships and how battered woman syndrome is a dynamic present in lesbian domestic violence.

Jurors told West after the conviction that they would not have voted for guilt without Coleman's testimony, Hahn said.

Hahn said the case was the nation's first conviction of a lesbian batterer in which prosecutors used testimony on battered woman syndrome as evidence.

OKLAHOMA CITY, OK (OCT. 29) UPI - Shoving the budget fiasco aside and plunging headlong into campaigning for Republicans, President Bush promised Monday to clear the air of what he called Democratic falsehoods in an attempt to minimize political fallout before next week's midterm elections.

The rancorous budget war finally over, a pact to trim the deficit in hand and virtually no one happy about it, Bush opened a final campaign drive to Nov. 6, which he promised would be a lively one.

Speaking to reporters after a top-dollar fund-raising stop in San Francisco, Bush clung to optimism for GOP prospects even as administration officials were admitting that damage had been done to the party by Bush's retreat on his 1988 pledge not to raise taxes.

Angry that Democrats had successfully painted him as more favorably disposed to the rich, Bush railed: ''The opposition party - I'm used to that kind of demagoguery. And so I'm out here now on the campaign trail laying it to rest.''

Of the truth behind who really are the ''taxers,'' Bush pledged to let Americans know that the Democrat-controlled Congress is the true culprit. ''I've got to get that in focus because they've been getting away with this 'tax the rich' class warfare - the kind of garbage that they always resurrect at election time,'' he said.

And as he did over the weekend, Bush brushed aside concerns the GOP would suffer the most from the budget talks and he hinted the new offensive in coming days would be a fierce one.

''We've been under constraints because I've been trying to get a deficit deal. Now I feel free, free to go out and take this message across the country,'' he said.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater announced details of a punishing campaign schedule for the president, beginning with a speech Tuesday to party faithful in Washington, and shifting into high gear Thursday with dozens of stops scheduled in more than seven states right up to Election Day.

Bush, besides taking on Democrats, took issue with his recent plunge in popularity, declaring, ''These polls don't mean anything. ... I don't live and die by these.''

''Let's see now how we do,'' he said. ''I'm going to be out there, working my heart out for Republican candidates who feel as I do.''

Bush didn't want to talk about his fall in the polls on Sunday when the latest one registered his lowest approval rating as president.

Nor did he care to discuss the warfare within his own party caused by the budget negotiations and threatening the coming elections where one- third of the Senate and the entire House must stand for re-election.

On Monday he was forced to defend his negotiators from speculation in the press that the White House might take the blame for the budget mess.

''I expect somebody will put the blame there, but listen, so what's new? I'm looking for victory and I'm looking to take this message across the country that this class warfare, tax the rich, is really an attack on the working men and women of this country,'' said Bush.

Over the weekend, Bush indicated GOP Party honcho Ed Rollins would not be fired. He authored a memo to congressional candidates under fire on the budget issue to feel free to run from the president.

And Republicans who abandoned the president by voting against a budget package that included a tax hike - House whip Newt Gingrich, R- Ga., and others - wouldn't be punished. ''I understand Republicans defecting from a package that they don't like,'' he said. ''I think that's history now but I have no rancor about it.''

In promising combat and dismissing the polls Monday, Bush added two new elements to his campaign battle plan.

He said he will hold the line on taxes - no more new ones - stressing that he had to do it for the good of the country, and said he would promote Republican candidacies, saying if there were more GOP members in Congress there would never have been a budget crisis.

With Bush having retreated on his stand against taxes no less than three times and some GOP candidates taking Rollins' advice, top admininstration officials acknowledge the budget mess has been costly to Bush.

''He cast some of his political capital for the benefit of the country,'' White House chief of staff John Sununu said Sunday.

But Sununu, the loyal lieutenant who the president backed fully on Monday, predicted Bush's showing in the polls was temporary.

In a Newsweek poll released Sunday, Bush earned the lowest approval rating of his presidency, with 48 percent of Americans approving of the way he was handling his job.

In the same poll, only 19 percent said they trusted Bush most to set the course for the nation's economic policy, while 36 percent said they trusted congressional Democrats most and 21 percent trusted congressional Republicans most.

DETROIT (OCT. 29) UPI - General Motors Corp. will temporarily idle workers at at least 11 North American vehicle assembly plants in November as it struggles to align production with a weaker U.S. car and truck market, an industry trade journal reported Monday. The temporary layoffs by the giant automaker will reduce car and light truck production by nearly 74,000 units, the story in Automotive News said.

But the weekly publication said production at several more GM vehicle plants may be halted, causing the giant automaker to reduce output by as much as 125,000 units during the fourth quarter, according to tentative plans. GM car plants to be closed starting Nov. 5 include its Bowling Green, Ky., Chevrolet Corvette plant, for one week.

Car plants to be idled for two weeks beginning Nov. 5 include those in Wilmington, Del. (Chevrolet Corsica/Beretta); Van Nuys, Calif. (Chevrolet Camaro/Pontiac Firebird); the GM Fairfax plant in Kansas City, Kan. (Pontiac Grand Prix); and Oklahoma City, Okla. plant (Buick Century, Oldmobile Ciera, Pontiac 6000). Truck assembly operations to be idled include plants in:

- Flint, Mich. (Chevrolet Blazer/GMC Jimmy) for four weeks starting Oct. 29.
- Lordstown, Oh., (Chevrolet/GMC large vans), for four weeks starting Nov. 5.
- Pontiac East plant in Pontiac, Mich. (Chevrolet/GMC large pickup trucks), for two weeks starting Nov. 5.
- Tarrytown, N.Y., (Chrevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile minivans) for two weeks starting Nov. 5.
- Scarborough, Ontario (Chevrolet-GMC large vans), for three weeks starting Nov. 5.

GM may also close several more car and truck plants during November and December, including car plants in Baltimore; Linden, N.J.; Moraine, Ohio; and Wentzville, Mo.

NEW YORK (OCT. 29) UPI - Stocks closed broadly lower in very light trading Monday after an early rally was wiped out by a sharp rise in oil prices and concerns that slightly lower interest rates might not be enough to rescue the economy.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which sank 48.02 Friday, lost 5.94 to close at 2430.20.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 1.47 to 165.24 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost 2.83 to 301.88. The price of an average share slid 25 cents.

Declines pounded advances, 1,031-481, among the 1,965 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Volume amounted to 133,980,000 shares, up slightly from the 130,190,640 shares traded Friday.

Prices opened higher, gaining strength from news that a budget agreement had been passed by both houses of Congress. But a sharp rise in oil prices sparked selling that wiped out the gains, and the Federal Reserve move to lower short-term interest rates slightly gave little comfort to investors, who worried that it might not be enough to help the economy recover.

The Dow had been up as much as 26 points but when oil prices rallied and held those gains, stocks fell into the minus column. Crude oil for December delivery closed up $1.67 to $34.68 a barrel. The oil market was boosted by the failure of the Soviet mission to Iraq to make any progress toward breaking the stalemate in the Middle East.

But analysts said that just as important in the market's undoing Monday was continued concern about the banking sector and fears about how effective in shoring up the economy the Fed's slight cut in short-term interest rates would be.

"We started out higher because the budget had been settled," said Kenneth Ducey, senior vice president of institutional trading at S.G. Warburg & Co. "Everyone thought it would lead to lower rates, which it did, and that was bullish, it would put more money into the system. But then investors began to feel it would take more than a little money to turn things around. Many have decided we're in a recession," Ducey said.

Ducey said program selling came in to the market at that point, dragging prices down before the Dow made a slight recovery near the close. While he said the sharp rise in oil played a part in the broad decline, he said it wasn't really the most important reason. "The banks were weak, and they control the economy. If they're in trouble we're all in trouble," he said.

On the trading floor, Southern was the most active issue in dividend-related trading, up 1/4 to 26 1/8. Unisys followed, up 1/8 to 2 3/8 after plunging Friday. It reported a $357 million loss for the third quarter last week.

Chase Manhattan was third, down 1/4 to 10 3/4. Other major banks extended Friday's slide as well. Chemical Banking fell 5/8 to 10 5/8, Chase Manhattan lost 1/4 to 10 3/4, and Manufacturers Hanover skidded 1/2 to 16 1/2.

Among the blue chips, Philip Morris fell 3/4 to 45 7/8 in active trading, while AT&T was unchanged at 33 3/8, IBM fell 7/8 to 106, American Express dropped 3/4 to 17 7/8, and Merck fell 7/8 to 78 1/4.

Elsewhere, Merrill Lynch fell 7/8 to 16 3/4 after announcing a restructuring designed to keep costs under control.

Kansas Gas & Electric jumped 1 7/8 to 26 7/8 after agreeing to a $1 billion buyout by Kansas Power & Light, which lost 1 1/4 to 20 5/8.

And Chrysler lost 1/8 to 11. The No. 3 U.S. automaker reported a third-quarter loss of $214 million due to high marketing costs, a sluggish economy and a loss in minivan production. It was the company's second quarterly loss since 1982.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 168,617,180 shares, compared with 171,587,580 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices tumbled in light trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index lost 2.60 to 288.79. Declines led advances 363-180 among the 758 issues traded. The price of an average share dipped eight cents. Composite volume totaled 8,878,750 shares vs. 11,189,675 traded Friday.

Baldwin Technology Class A led the Amex issues, plummeting 1 7/8 to 4 1/8, almost a a third of its value, after reporting a 50 percent drop in earnings for its first quarter ending Sept. 30.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index slumped 3.55 to 330.81.

(OCT. 29) UPI - President Bush took a moment from his Republican campaign duties in California today to answer a firm ''NO'' when asked if he is preparing the nation for war in the Middle East. At the same time, Bush told reporters in San Francisco that he would have ''NO hesitancy at all'' to authorize military action against Iraq if Washington is provoked. The president repeated his position that Iraq must pull out of Kuwait as part of any acceptable settlement of the Gulf crisis.

The standoff with Iraq will be the topic of discussion in Washington tomorrow when Bush meets with congressional leaders, Defense Secretary Cheney and Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General Colin Powell. On the table is deployment of additional U-S troops in the Saudi Arabian desert as well as the president's responsibility under the War Powers Act to notify Congress of any military confrontation.

A student at Charlestown, Indiana, High School describes 18-year-old Eli Dean as a ''very good guy'' who ''wouldN'T hurt anybody.'' Indiana State Police say Dean is holding five students at gunpoint inside the school. Dean earlier released about 10 other students and then freed a woman described as his favorite teacher. Police say Dean has made NO demands so far. He reportedly was upset about being suspended from school twice during the last two weeks.

A new study by a Chicago management firm says corporate restructuring is NOT the cure-all corporations hoped it would be. The study looked at 27 corporations which cut anywhere from 400 workers to 27-hundred workers. It found that productivity, quality and general efficiency suffered. As one researcher put it- ''Initial cuts in payroll costs have been financially helpful, but we found that remaining managers are overworked and frustrated... and employees on all levels are often spread too thin to do an effective job.''

Jury selection began in Dallas today in the legal battle over who has the rights to sell the .38-caliber pistol used by Jack Ruby to kill Lee Harvey Oswald. The snub-nosed Colt Cobra which has been locked up for 20 years in a North Dallas bank vault. Estimates of its value range from 50-thousand to 125-thousand dollars. Ruby's brother says he wants to sell the weapon to pay off his brother's debts. But a Dallas lawyer named executor of the estate wants the right to do the same, and collect an executor's fee.

A hearing is scheduled Thursday in a lawsuit against the Republican governor of New Hampshire, who is being sued by a Democratic politician. State Representative Mary Chambers is trying to force incumbent Governor Judd Gregg to release state budget projections for the coming six-month period. Chambers says state law requires the projections be made public by October 1st... and that her written request for the figures has been denied. Gregg says he'll release the figures after the November election. Gregg says Chambers' suit is politically motivated and that she's trying to help his opponent.

It's probably a matter of opinion whether politicians ought to ''fall back'' or ''spring forward.'' And this year, Congress is completely split on the issue. According to The Congressional Record, the Senate adjourned at 2:17 a-m yesterday... and the House at 1:02 a-m, although there was only a 15-minute difference between the two adjournments. How come? Because the Senate time was recorded using Eastern Daylight Time while the House adjournment was noted officially as Eastern Standard Time.

CLEVELAND (OCT. 29) UPI - BP America Inc. said Monday it planned to lay off fewer than 100 staff employees at its corporate headquarters as part of a plan expected to call for decentralization of many of the energy company's business services. However, BP said that a number of corporate employees could be switched to its four operating divisions, which are also headquartered in Cleveland.

The U.S. subsidiary of British Petroleum Co., Ltd. outlined its plans at a hastily called afternoon news conference, following the publication of a story in Crain's Cleveland Business that the jobs of as many as 700 of the 900 corporate staff employees in Cleveland could be threatened by the company's planned restructuring.

Crain's story said James Ross, BP America's president and chief executive officer, confirmed during an interview last week that the giant multinational energy concern would soon implement a massive restructuring to trim its bureaucracy.

The story said "rumors swirling through" the company's Cleveland headquarters estimated up to 700 jobs would be eliminated and that most of the 900-member corporate staff would be either fired or reassigned to one of the company's four operating units.

When asked about the rumors of job losses, Ross said, "I'm not prepared to guess." But BP America spokesman George Jurkovich denied the rumors. "I am here to dispel two rumors - one, that we were going to release 700 employees on the street; the other was that we were leaving Cleveland. Not true on both counts," he said.

In August, British Petroleum began "Project 1990," to examine staffing levels and the structure of BP America's corporate headquarters. Jurkovich said the team's recommendation - to be presented to senior management in London Tuesday - was expected to include the decentralization of many business services to the businesses they support.

As a result, a number of employees at corporate staff will be transferred to business units - oil, exploration, chemicals, and nutrition. "The recommendations have not yet been presented," Jurkowich said. "So we cannot be certain of final outcomes, but the range of cuts implied by careless reporting have clearly been highly exaggerated."

Some 2,600 people work for BP America in the Cleveland headquarters. About 900 are corporate employees and about 1,700 work for the four BP operating units also headquartered in the building.

In March, British Petroleum Co. Ltd, BP America's parent, announced the elimination of 1,150 jobs at its London headquarters. At the time, BP had 118,000 employees throughout the world.

In May 1987, British Petroleum paid $7.7 billion to buy the 44 percent stake in the Standard Oil Co. (Ohio) that it did not already own. The third-largest merger in U.S. history placed BP fourth among world oil companies behind Exxon Royal Dutch-Shell Group, and Mobil.

British Petroleum bought a 56 percent stake in the company - founded by John D. Rockefeller - in the early 1970s so Standard Oil could finance exploitation of its vast Prudhoe Bay crude oil holdings.

BP America is now in the final stages of changing the names of its 8,000 service stations in 26 states to the BP name. They previously were opererated under the Mobil name in the Northwest, Gulf in the Southeast, Boron in Michigan, Indiana, West Viriginia, and Pennsylvania, and Sohio in Ohio.

WASHINGTON (OCT. 29) UPI - Congress chose to save money in the budget package by slashing Medicare payments to hospitals and doctors, slicing payments for cataract surgery and other ''overpriced'' procedures and increasing beneficiaries' premiums and deductibles.

But the Medicare package that finally took shape, as described Monday by number-crunching congressional staffers, also includes increases in Medicare spending for inner-city and rural hospitals, and hospital training for doctors and nurses.

Medicare's share of the $492 billion in overall governmental savings over the next five years is $44 billion.

Medicare is the federal government's health insurance program for Americans over 65. Medicaid, which will see savings of about $607 million by 1995, is the government's health insurance plan for the needy.

Of the $44 billion in Medicare reductions, $13.7 will be saved in Part A payments to hospitals and $14.2 billion will be saved in Part B payments to physicians. Also, $10.6 billion will be retrieved by increasing the monthly premium for Part B gradually from $29.90 in 1991 to $46.10 in 1995 and by raising the deductible from $75 to $100.

The package cuts the amount hospitals get for services by $11 billion by 1995.

However, payments to inner-city and rural hospitals will be increased $2 billion by 1995. Also, hospital training for physicians and nurses will be increased by $480 million by 1995.

As for Part B, which is optional but purchased by more than 90 percent of Medicare beneficiaries, the biggest savings comes from cutting payments to doctors by $3 billion.

There is a list of about 245 procedures the government considers ''overpriced.'' Doctors performing these services will see reduced reimbursements, saving the government $2.4 billion by 1995. Some of these procedures include:

-Cataract surgeries, which account for about $1.8 billion annually in Medicare claims.

-Electrocardiograms, or EKGs, which account for about $683 million annually in Medicare claims. Under the plan, Medicare will continue to reimburse for an EKG but will not pay for an interpretation of the results.

-Coronary artery bypass surgeries, which now account for about $524 million annually.

-Colonoscopies, which account for about $402 million annually.

-Hip surgeries, which account for about $185 million annually.

Another $2.2 billion in savings will come from reduced payments for durable medical equipment. An example would be for seat-lift chairs. Medicare will pay for the mechanism to lift the chair but the program will not pay for the chair.

The package includes Medicare increases for physician services rendered in community and rural health centers, nurse practitioners in rural areas, nurse anesthetists, mental health services and for an osteoporosis drug, among others.

Congress also agreed to include consumer protection-type standards for ''medigap'' insurance, which senior citizens buy to fill in where Medicare coverage leaves off.

Also, health care facilities must inform patients of their own state's law concerning living wills.

Much of the savings in the Medicaid program involves prescription drugs. In general, drug manufacturers will not be able to charge the Medicaid program more for drugs than the price offered to others.

HOUSTON (OCT. 29) UPI - Pennzoil Co. reported third quarter net income Monday of $25.4 million, or 66 cents a share, down 28 percent from $35.4 million, or 87 cents a share, in the same quarter a year ago. Quarterly revenues were $615.4 million, up from $542.3 million in third quarter 1989.

Pennzoil President James Pate said higher crude oil costs resulting from the Middle East crisis reduced operating income for the refinery segment. "Pennzoil's motor oil sales in the third quarter were at an all-time high," he said. "But we were unable to adjust product prices to fully recover the surge in crude costs."

Net income for the nine-month period was $63.8 million, or $1.62 a share, down 70 percent from $206 million, or $5.36 a share, in the same period a year ago. Included in the 1989 results was an after-tax gain of $86.8 million, or $2.39 a share, on the sale of Burlington Resources Inc. common stock. Nine-month revenues were $1.7 billion, down from $1.8 billion in 1989.

Improved oil revenues were offset by reduced gas revenues reflecting lower prices and sales volumes, Pate said. "In contrast to higher crude prices, natural gas prices and demand were down in the third quarter," he said. "Since Pennzoil is a major producer of natural gas, our earnings were negatively impacted by this situation. "However, natural gas prices and volumes are improving with seasonal demand.

SAN FRANCISCO (OCT. 29) UPI - People plagued by heartburn can get relief simply by eating less at meals, a new study showed Monday.

And patients taking a commonly-prescribed heart medicine who suffer from the gassy problem might find relief with a simple change of medicine, another report said.

The independent studies, presented at a meeting of the American College of Gastroenterology, showed heartburn is often tied to a relaxation of a muscle called the esophageal sphincter, which is located where the esophagus meets the stomach. When the muscle relaxes, stomach acid splashes into the esophagus and causes a burning sensation.

Richard McCallum, of the University of Virginia Health Science Center in Charlottesville, studied eight normal people and six with a history of gastrointestinal reflux - the medical term for heartburn.

McCallum measured the sphincter muscle pressure before and after the patients were fed ''large volume,'' 1,500-calorie meals.

All the patients suffered some heartburn. But the muscles of patients with a history of heartburn were found to relax more often than the others.

McCallum and his co-workers concluded that relaxation of the muscle is the main reason for heartburn after a large meal and that those with a history of hearburn are far more susceptible.

The second study, by Brad Gelzayd of the University of Michigan Medical Center in Ann Arbor, measured esophageal pressures and acid levels in five healthy volunteers before and after seven days of taking prescribed doses of nifedipine, a common calcium channel blocker used by people with heart disease.

The nifedipine produced a marked decrease in esophageal sphincter pressure and all five patients reported significantly increased episodes of heartburn.

Gelzayd suggested that heart patients taking calcium channel blockers and suffer from heartburn talk to their physicians about changing medication.

WARSAW, Poland (OCT. 29) UPI - Lech Walesa capitalized on his hero role as founder of the Solidarity union, while Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki tried to humanize his image as an effective but aloof leader Monday in the first presidential campaign statements televised in Poland.

Walesa, 47, and Mazowieki, 63, are the leading candidates among six men who want to be chosen Poland's first freely elected president since World War II in an election Nov. 25.

Each candidate was allocated eight minutes, 18 seconds to present a prepared statement. Walesa's was the slickest, blending footage showing him leading a huge Solidarity rally, his own statements and testimonials from supporters. He even had a slogan, ''Walesa, Yes.''

''We have a free Poland, we have an independent Poland ... but it is not so good in this Poland. There is a lot of bitterness in this Poland, discontent.

''So I am asking, what is really going on? Where are the obstacles? I travel through Poland and look for the obstacles. I am looking for them because I want our future to be better,'' he said.

Walesa, an electrician at the Gdansk shipyard, is the sentimental favorite for having led the movement that forced out Poland's communist government last year.

He was, in large part, the creator of his own biggest opponent. Mazowiecki, a key Solidarity adviser for 10 years, was made prime minister at Walesa's suggestion. He received a 57 percent positive rating for his accomplishments in his first year in office, a new poll said.

Mazwiecki, a lawyer and journalist before he became a politician, confronted his own biggest problem in his spot.

''People say I am smiling too little. It is really so with me. I have never been able to adapt myself to those artificial smiles.''

In an attempt to belie his aloof image, Mazwiecki was shown kissing a baby in an autumn-painted park surrounding Belweder Palace, the presidential mansion, and visiting relatives.

Mazwiecki said he had to adjust to his role as prime minister, telling himself ''You can't do everything, but what you manage to do will remain, will be important, will have some weight, because this is an important historical period.''

He said he is seeking the presidency ''for the sake of continuity.''

Roman Bartosze, 44, is a Slawein farmer and leader of the Peasant Party.

''As a farmer I know that nothing happens by itself. I know that evil has to be pulled out by your own hands. Nobody will bring us freedom on a tray. It must be won and pulled out from the hands of the people who stole it,'' he said.

Wlodzimierz Cimoszewicz, 40, is a lawyer who runs his farm in eastern Kalinowka.

He compared Poland to a rumbling volcano, and said the country ''is being ruled by fear not hope.'' Poles are afraid they won't have enough money to take care of themselves and their families, they are afraid for the political future of their state, of crime.

Poles must work together to ally those fears, he said.

Leszek Moczulski, 60, a Warsaw historian, apologized for being serious.

''I am sorry that I unlike others cannot smile at you. But Poland is a sad country, ... a country devoid of hope, with protests, confusion, it is a country where it is difficult to smile.''

He proposed a seven-point program to improve the nation's economy, judicial system and health care, and to punish the communists who ruled the country for 45 years.

Stanislaw Tyminski, 42, left Poland to live in Peru, then Canada. He said he has returned to his homeland ''with 20 years of growth in various countries from which I took the best, only the best.''

He said he want to put his experience to use as president of Poland.

IRVINE, Calif. (OCT. 29) UPI - Taco Bell, the nation's leading Mexican fast-food restaurant chain, announced a wide range of price cuts Monday coupled with a marketing strategy that groups menu items by price rather than by types of food.

The moves clearly show Taco Bell Corp. is trying to position itself as a low-price leader in the fast-food business, but a spokesman discounted the possibility of a price war breaking out with competitors.

The 3,160-store chain, a unit of Purchase, N.Y.-based PepsiCo Inc., had already selectively discounted several items to the 59 cent range over the past two years.

Janet Lowder, a restaurant consultant in Los Angeles, said the discounting is a wise move by Taco Bell, as it comes amid slowing sales in the fast-food industry and economic uncertainty.

''I think it's a very good strategy to keep customers at a time when everyone is worried about the economy,'' Lowder said.

The new pricing approach arranges the Taco Bell menu into categories of 59 cents, 79 cents and 99 cents, with a few higher-priced specialty items, such as Mexican pizza at $1.99 and taco salad at $2.99.

Lowder pointed out that prices at many fast-food chains have increased steadily in recent years as the major players have attempted to lure in more patrons through expanded menus rather discounting.

''Some of the prices at chains have gone sky-high recently,'' Lowder said. ''You wind up paying prices like $8 for two people to have breakfast.''

Taco Bell, based in Irvine, has placed a total of 15 items into the less-than-a-dollar category, with the chain's flagship item - the taco - cut from 79 cents to 59 cents.

Other discounts include: nachos, from 89 cents to 79 cents; pintos and cheese, 79 cents to 59 cents; tostadas, 79 cents to 59 cents and Meximelt, 99 cents to 79 cents.

The new pricing, which was inaugurated Monday at all but 160 of the chain's stores, covers about two-thirds of the items on the Taco Bell menu.

Lowder said that Taco Bell has been performing well in recent years. A leading competitor, the Del Taco chain, ranks a distant second with about 340 outlets, mostly in California and Arizona.

Taco Bell's third-quarter profits of $52.3 million were up 29 percent over the year-ago quarter, and 1990 sales are expected to hit $2.6 billion, up more than 25 percent over last year's total.

Taco Bell spokesman Elliot Bloom said the discounting is unlikely to bring about a price war among fast-food operators.

''We're just trying to emphasize the kinds of concepts that fast-food started with in the 1950s, with Kentucky Fried Chicken and McDonald's - quality food, convenience and a good price,'' Bloom said.

Bloom also said that the chain should be able to weather any potential recession. ''I think that we are very much recession-proof,'' he said.

The chain will expand to about 3,300 restaurants by the end of the year and another 150 to 200 outlets will open in 1991, Bloom said.

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (OCT. 29) UPI - Barnett Banks Inc. acquired the lease for the historic Biltmore Hotel Monday for $24 million in a bankruptcy proceeding and said it would move quickly to reopen the shuttered hotel.

Robert Stickler, a spokesman for Barnett in Jacksonville, Fla., said the purchase agreement was approved by a federal bankrupcty judge in Philadelphia presiding over the case of the previous leaseholder, Sovereign Group of Philadelphia.

The hotel closed its doors unexpectedly in July after Barnett, the major creditor, froze the hotel's operating funds.

The 275-room hotel, built in 1926 for $10 million, reopened in December 1986 but ran into financial problems almost immediately.

Sovereign Group, which filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in March, owed Barnett about $36 million, Stickler said.

The case was later converted to Chapter 7 liquidation. Stickler said Barnett's claim will be reduced to $12 million in exchange for the lease.

Barnett now plans to seek a buyer for the lease who will operate the hotel, Stickler said. The city of Coral Gables owns the hotel property. No such negotiations were underway, he said.

Asked if the hotel might re-open prior to a sale, Stickler said, ''It's an option. There are lots of options. We can't really say what were going to do.''

Stickler said ''most if not all'' litigation surrounding the case would be dropped as a result of the agreement approved Monday in bankruptcy court.

(OCT. 29) UPI - President Bush addressed a Republican Party fund-raiser in Oklahoma City this afternoon after pressing the flesh for G-O-P candidates in San Francisco earlier today. Bush told reporters at a top-dollar affair in the California city by the bay that he's optimistic the party can overcome damage done by the budget fiasco in Washington. Bush again labeled the Democrats in Congress as the ''taxers.''

In Oklahoma City, Bush promised to clear the air of what he called Democratic falsehoods. And in a spirited speech for gubernatorial candidate Bill Price, a fired-up Bush revived a keystone of his 1988 presidential race... linking liberalism and Democrats with failed policies of the past.

Secretary of State Baker is refusing to rule out use of military force against Iraq in the Persian Gulf. Baker gave a toughly worded speech to the Los Angeles World Affairs Council saying, Iraq's President Saddam Hussein is ''hell-bent on revival of hot war.'' Baker heads for Saudi Arabia later this week and will also stop in several European capitals.

267 French citizens and 10 Greek nationals are on a freedom flight to Paris. Iraq's news agency says that number of French hostages left Saddam

Radio Cairo says the jetliner also was delayed in Kuwait on its way to Baghdad because only 20 of an estimated 70 French hostages in Kuwait showed up to leave. Officials believe some Frenchmen may be in hiding in Kuwait and unaware of the airlift.

The U-N Security Council today voted to hold Iraq responsible for damage to Kuwaiti property and for human rights violations resulting from three-month occupation of the oil-rich emirate. 13 of the 15 Council members approved the resolutions, with Yemen and Cuba abstaining. They passed hours after Soviet President Gorbachev left Paris for Moscow calling the prospect of a gulf war unacceptable. Gorbachev says the Arab nations must find a solution to the standoff.

North Carolina officials say the bridge connecting Hatteras and Ocracoke islands to the mainland could be repaired by the end of the year. A storm last Friday tore a 370-foot section out of the span. The state transportation secretary and other administrators are awaiting a status report on repairing the bridge. The disruption forced hundreds of motorists to line up to use ferry service to the isolated islands.

It was hard to get around in parts of El Salvador today. Gasoline stations closed down and buses stopped running as operators staged a shutdown strike to demand higher profit margins and bigger transport subsidies. The head of the Bus Owners Association says about 90 percent of the buses in the capital of San Salvador were parked, stranding thousands of commuters. Gasoline station owners are threatening to extend the protest nationwide unless profit margins are extended from the current four to seven percent.

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (OCT. 29) UPI - The U.S. economy is descending into something more serious than a cyclical downturn and ''obstacles of crisis proportions'' in the financial sector could slow recovery, a prominent economist said Monday.

Henry Kaufman, a former managing director of Salomon Brothers Inc. and now an independent consultant with his own firm, told a financial gathering that many investments except high-grade bonds were likely to lose value.

''Another business recession is starting,'' Kaufman told the Edison Electric Institute 1990 Financial Conference. He warned that ''it is dangerous to view the ... slide merely as a typical cyclical phenomenon.''

The downturn at hand ''promises to be highly atypical'' given the fragility of U.S. financial institutions, such as banks, which have lost shocking amounts on bad real estate loans, and debt-burdened corporations.

Present crises notwithstanding, Kaufman's inclination to seeing the gloomier side of things in the past earned him the sobriquet ''Dr. Doom.''

Kaufman said U.S. debt has mounted from 1.7 times the gross national product in 1980 to 2.4 times GNP in 1989. Some 27 percent of corporate bonds are rated as high-risk ''junk,'' vs. 13 percent in 1980. Commercial banks credit standings are in shreds and savings and loans have been decimated.

These and other serious problems present ''extraordinary financial obstacles'' to a U.S. business recovery, Kaufman said. They ''imply that considerable time will be needed for financial recuperation.''

''Now, no vibrancy can return to the economy without first putting in place a rehabilitated financial system,'' a step he said will take years of rebuilding eroded bank capital and skewed corporate balance sheets.

In the meantime the United States must recover from the downturn handicapped by an outsized federal budget deficit which means ''fiscal policy does not have the flexibility to be a stimulative force'' on the economy.

As U.S. government bond prices rise, long-term yields - market interest rates - could fall to 6.75 percent to 7.00 percent from around 8.75 percent now, reopening the traditional cycle of new investment and recovery, Kaufman said.

But that dramatic yield decline won't be seen until the European and Japanese economies falter, easing upward pressure on U.S. rates, he said. ''Hopefully, by the time these two countries are in retreat economically, the United States will be in the early stages of an economic recovery.''

DETROIT (OCT. 29) UPI - Japanese carmaker Mitsubishi Motor Corp. may design and jointly build Chrysler Corp.'s next generation of Dodge Daytona autos at the two carmakers' Diamond-Star Motors Corp. joint venture plant in Normal, Ill.

Industry planners and market analysts who asked not to be identified said Monday a Mitsubishi-designed Daytona would most probably debut for mid-1992 or 1993.

Besides the Plymouth Laser and Eagle Talon already made at Diamond- Star, Chrysler depends on Mitsubishi for several of its vehicle lines, including the Colt and Vista subcompacts and a new sports car called the Dodge Stealth. All are made in Japan.

Sources said Chrysler is looking at a Mitsubishi-designed Daytona to relieve the burden on the No. 3 U.S. carmaker and its new-vehicle programs.

Those programs, for which Chrysler has earmarked $15.6 billion during the next five years, also include a small car ''P-PL'' project for mid- 1994, its LH mid-sized car program for 1993, and a C/Y luxury car program for the mid- to late 1990s.

Chrysler announced last week that along with Mitsubishi, it would jointly produce a new line of cars at the Diamond-Star plant, including a new two-door coupe, three-door sporty cars and a four-door sedan. No timetable or other details were given.

That plant, incorporated in 1985, now makes the Mitsubishi Eclipse and Mirage and Eagle Summit, as well as the Laser and Talon. Production is now 680 cars a day, or 68 percent of its 1,000 unit-a-day capacity.

The Daytona is currently made, along with the Chrysler Lebaron, at Chrysler's St. Louis No. 1 plant in Fenton, Mo., now slated to permanently close May 24, 1991.

About 2,300 hourly and salaried workers are now employed at St. Louis No. 1, Chrysler spokesman Doug Nicoll said.

Nicoll only said that plans now call for Daytona production and an undetermined number of jobs to be transferred to Chrysler's Sterling Heights, Mich., plant by mid-1991, as the St. Louis No. 1 plant is closed.

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 29) UPI - Troubled Orion Pictures, hit by a long string of box-office duds and a lowering of its debt rating, said Monday that it was seeking more funding from outside investors.

Orion, which is 70 percent owned by billionaire John Kluge, said that it had engaged investment bankers Salomon Brothers Inc. ''to assist the company in evaluating strategic alternatives including the securing of additional equity capital from interested domestic and international sources.''

Orion also said in the announcement that it would be seeking to secure such equity funding within six to nine months.

Orion has long been the subject of buyout speculation, but Kluge, who controls his stake through Metromedia Co., has continued to deny that the company is for sale. Earlier this month, he exercised an option to buy 4.3 million shares at $6 a share, a move that injected about $25 million into the company.

The company lost $2.5 million on revenues of $110 million in its most recent quarter ended Aug. 31 and is carrying more than $400 million in debt.

The studio, which was formed more than a decade ago by United Artists executives, has had a number of movies that were both commercial and critical successes, such as ''Bull Durham,'' ''Amadeus,'' ''Platoon'' and ''Throw Mama from the Train.''

But it has not had a major hit since ''Robocop'' two years ago. It had a disastrous 1989, with ''She-Devil'' and ''Great Balls of Fire'' bombing out, and its major movies this year - ''Robocop 2,'' ''Cadillac Man'' and ''Navy SEALS'' - have not performed well at the box office.

Standard & Poor's rating agency said Monday that it was lowering its rating on Orion's $265 million of subordinated debt to single-B-minus from single-B, reflecting what it called ''increased debt levels and subpar earnings.''

S&P's said that debt levels had risen due to higher film production costs and the ''disappointing'' contributions from recent releases.

The rating agency also said that Orion has almost fully drawn down its bank credit line, but added that ''promising'' winter releases could improve cash flow in the near term.

The studio's next major release is ''Dances with Wolves,'' starring and directed by Kevin Costner, due to open Nov. 9. It will also debut ''Mermaids'' and Woody Allen's ''Alice'' before the year is out.

Entertainment analyst Steven Hill of Sutro & Co. in San Francisco said that he is uncertain whether Orion can attract any new investors, given its poor recent performance.

Hill noted that Orion has amortized costs and projected revenues in a manner that benefits earnings in the current period but depresses them on down the line.

But the nature of the business, with the potential for blockbuster hits, may help Orion in this case. ''There always seems to be someone who wants to invest in movies,'' Hill said.

MIDLAND, Texas (OCT. 29) UPI - Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. said Monday it won a federal jury award of $185 million resulting from litigation over oil well services instituted against Dresser Industries Inc., Baker Hughes Inc. and BJ Services USA Inc.

The award, delivered late Friday night in U.S. District Court in Midland and announced Monday, was given on behalf of the company's various non-publicly traded development drilling partnerships formed prior to 1988 in which Parker & Parsley is the managing general partner.

At least one appeal is planned.

Parker & Parsley said the award totaled $85 million in compensatory damages and $100 million in punitive damages.

If the verdict and the damage award hold up, Parker & Parsley said its publicly traded partnership, Parker & Parsley Development Partners LP, ''will not benefit significantly.''

Rather, damages would benefit some 18,000 Parker & Parsley non- publicly traded partnership investors.

In its lawsuit, Parker & Parsley had charged Dallas-based Dresser and BJ-Titan a partnership formed by Dresser and Houston's Hughes Tool Co. and later Baker Hughes, had intentionally failed to provide materials and services paid for by Parker & Parsley. The companies then fraudulently concealed the shorting practice from Parker & Parsley, according to the suit.

The fraud charged by Parker & Parsley concerned the Midland area during 1983 through 1988, the company said.

In a separate announcement, Dresser said its legal counsel was ''shocked by the award and was reviewing appropriate actions.''

Baker Hughes, which put the amount of the damages against BJ Services at $124 million, promised to ''vigorously appeal the verdict.'' BJ Services was recently spun off by Baker Hughes.

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 29) UPI - William French Smith, a longtime confidant of Ronald Reagan who served four years as attorney general of the United States, died Monday. He was 73.

Smith, who came to Washington with the new president in 1981, died of cancer, his spokeswoman, Myra Tankersley, said.

Through his tenure as the nation's chief law enforcement officer, the wealthy, white-haired Smith concentrated on getting more money for his department, beefing up federal efforts against drug trafficking and pursuing a policy with the Immigration and Naturalization Service to bring the nation's borders under control.

But he also altered some Justice Department policies more sharply than any other attorney general, moving the department in controversial new directions in crime fighting, civil rights and antitrust enforcement.

The most controversial aspects of his tenure were attempts by the Justice Department to bring policies on civil rights, abortion and women's issues more into line with Reagan's conservative views.

He emphasized judicial restraint, noting that he had used his office as a kind of ''minibully pulpit'' in an effort to talk the courts into practicing a less activist social and political role.

Smith once commented that ''we have had the courage'' to challenge approaches to civil rights enforcement that had proven ineffective and to substitute better approaches.

Smith resigned from office in January 1984, saying he wanted to return to his private law practice and help Reagan's re-election campaign.

But his departure from public life was delayed for months while a special prosecutor investigated and subsequently cleared Edwin Meese, the man nominated to succeed him, of allegations he got financial help from friends who got government jobs.

Smith said he would stay in office until a successor was confirmed.

After leaving office, Smith rejoined the law firm of Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher in Los Angeles. He also served on the boards of major corporations and was named chairman of the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library Foundation.

While Smith was known for a low-key corporate lawyer image who never appeared quite comfortable with the press, he also ran into controversy over some of his personal affairs.

Controversy arose over disclosures about his investments in two oil and gas drilling tax shelters and his acceptance of a $50,000 severance payment when he left the board of directors of Jorgensen Steel Co. shortly before taking office.

Smith diffused those attacks by returning the severance check and limiting his tax deductions from the shelters to the amount of his actual cash investment.

Smith also drew fire for his foreign trips, which cost more than $1 million in taxpayers' money. His 1982 trip around-the-world with his wife, Jean, and an entourage of aides, alone cost more than $700,000. Smith said the trips were necessary to convince foreign governments that the United States was serious about cracking down on drug trafficking.

Under Smith's direction, the Justice Department implemented often controversial civil rights policies, tried new antitrust policies favoring business and worked toward major reforms of immigration and criminal law.

Smith enraged civil rights organizations by opposing mandatory busing for school desegregation and hiring quotas for employment discrimination - changes in direction endorsed by Reagan.

Smith played a key role in the selection process that led to the appointment of Sandra Day O'Connor as the first woman on the Supreme Court.

While diplomats talk about the standoff, Persian Gulf oil producing nations are spending money. A Gulf-nation official says in a report issued today that gulf nations are spending at an annual rate of 18- BILLION dollars to support the multi-national military force created to deter further agression by Iraq. In Washington, the Pentagon says Gulf nations have so far committed six-BILLION dollars to the effort through the end of the year.

SALT LAKE CITY (OCT. 29) UPI - A Utah federal jury has ruled a Salt Lake City investor gained $328,000 from insider trading in American Stores Co.'s efforts to acquire California-based Lucky Stores Inc., the Securities and Exchange Commission said Monday.

The SEC filed a civil complaint May 31, 1989, against Gerald C. Hellberg. Investigators claimed Hellberg and his son, David, violated the Securities Exchange Act in connection with his options investment in Lucky Stores.

The suspect's son was an American Stores financial analyst, the SEC said, and ''had knowledge of the planned tender offer'' before his father bought $15,000 in Lucky Stores stock options.

The options were purchased March 16-18, 1988, and American Stores announced the Lucky Stores tender offer March 22, investigators said. Lucky's common stock jumped from $31 a share to $45.

''Hellberg realized a $328,000 profit on the options,'' the SEC said, adding he did not have an ''economically reasonable basis for buying the options other than possession of inside information.''

U.S. District Court Judge Aldon Anderson now will decide the extent of any penalty Hellberg will pay.

His son agreed to an out-of-court settlement last January.

CHARLESTOWN, Ind. (OCT. 29) UPI - A teenager described as a ''good guy'' who ''wouldn't hurt anybody'' took a teacher and about 15 students hostage at gunpoint Monday in a high school classroom, gradually releasing his captives until the standoff ended more than eight hours later.

By midafternoon, Eli Dean, 18, who recently was suspended from school for pranks, had released all but five students from a classroom at Charlestown High School, and early in the evening released four more hostages, state police Sgt. Martin Jenkins said.

The siege ended about 7:30 p.m. EST when Dean surrendered and released the last student, he said.

The youth was armed with a pistol, believed to be a .44-caliber revolver taken from his stepfather's room, Jenkins said, but no shots were fired throughout the ordeal in Charlestown, a community of about 5, 500 people about 15 miles north of Louisville, Ky.

Dean, twice suspended from the school in the last two weeks for setting off a fire alarm and breaking a window, went to the school to speak to Melody Money, 43, a teacher who had counseled him about previous trouble at the school, the state police sergeant said.

Dean walked into Money's classroom abut 11:10 a.m. and brandished the revolver in front of her and about 15 students, Jenkins said.

The suspect was persuaded to release most of his captives soon after the siege began, but state police could not give an exact count of the number of hostages were freed.

Dean continued holding six students and Money until about 2 p.m., when a freshman, Stacy Medelli, were allowed to leave, followed soon by the teacher, Jenkins said.

Dean made no demands throughout the standoff.

A fellow student, Amanda Garr, said she believed the young gunman was ''upset'' at the recent suspensions, but expressed astonishment at his reaction.

''Eli, to me, is the best guy anybody could ever ask for,'' Garr said. ''Something got in him and he's gone crazy about about. He's a very good guy. He wouldn't hurt anybody.''

Garr said she and other students at first thought there had been a bomb threat when the school was evacuated and a police SWAT team moved into place, but later ''we found out it was Eli and everybody started crying.''

The youth's parents and stepfather, Rocky Williams, were called to the school to help police negotiators. Williams said he belives Dean took his .44-caliber revolver from their home.

Dean's father, Robin Dean, is a weighmaster for the Indiana State Police.

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (OCT. 29) UPI - Top negotiators for Chrysler Corp. and the United Auto Workers bargained Monday night toward a midnight expiration of their extended contract, but the union urged workers to remain on the job until told otherwise.

Chrysler's 67,000 U.S. hourly employees have been working since Sept. 15 under extension of a contract negotiated in 1988. On Friday, however, frustrated by the slow pace of bargaining, the UAW told the No. 3 carmaker that pact would expire at 11:59 p.m. EST Monday.

This allows the UAW to authorize a company-wide walkout, or more likely, target specific Chrysler plants like its minivan plant in Fenton, Mo., if a tentative accord is not reached.

UAW spokesman Bob Barbee said bargainers were negotiating in subcommittee sessions all day, but that no central meetings had taken place by midevening.

Last week, the union scheduled a Thursday meeting in Detroit of its 100-member Chrysler Bargaining Council, an indication that it expected to have a tentative agreement in hand by Tuesday at the latest. The council must approve any agreement before workers vote on it.

The UAW is insisting that Chrysler follow the ''pattern'' agreement reached with industry leader General Motors Corp. last month, and at second-ranked Ford Motor Co. early this month.

Chrysler, which earlier Monday posted a third-quarter loss of $214 million or 95 cents a share - its second quarterly loss since 1982 - said it cannot afford the contracts reached at GM and Ford, which contain generous pension increases and job and income guarantee packages.

Instead, company negotiators said Chrysler needs special consideration to remain competitive, with one issue being pension costs. Chrysler has the highest ratio of retirees to active workers and the oldest workforce among the nation's Big Three automakers.

But late last week, Chrysler Canada signed a pact with the Canadian Auto Workers union in Toronto that follows the CAW contracts reached at the Canadian operations of GM and Ford. That fueled speculation that Chrysler would have to accept a similar deal on this side of the border.

But industry analyst Ronald Glantz, of Dean Witter Reynolds' San Francisco office, said Chrysler's latest losses ''call into question'' the UAW's insistence on matching the GM and Ford contracts.

Those losses were aggravated by high marketing costs, a sluggish economy and a loss in minivan production during the quarter ended Sept. 30.

Chrysler is the first of the nation's Big Three carmakers to report third-quarter earnings this week. Ford was expected to post earnings of between 60 cents and $1 a share, compared with $1.03 a share in the 1989 third quarter.

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 29) UPI - Paramount Pictures said Monday ''The Godfather Part III'' will be released as planned on Christmas Day, despite widespread speculation that director Francis Ford Coppola would delay the release.

The studio was poised last week to push back the release date, which had originally been Nov. 21, to Easter. Many industry observers had expected it would be impossible for Coppola, who has often delayed other films, to agree to stop making changes in the final print.

Principal photography on the film, which has a running time of about two hours and 40 minutes, began last November in Rome.

''The Godfather Part III'' stars Al Pacino, Diane Keaton, Talia Shire, Eli Wallach and Joe Mantegna. The movie is set in 1979, 20 years after the events protrayed in ''The Godfather Part II.''

The two previous films, which debuted in 1972 and 1974, were both winners of the Academy Award for best picture and won nine Oscars between them.

All three movies are based on the best-seller by Mario Puzo, ''The Godfather.''

Coppola said in a statement, ''After one of the shortest and most intensive writing through post-production schedules in my career, I am satisfied and proud that 'The Godfather Part III' has come together as a true successor of the first two films.''

The movie is set to open in about 1,800 theaters for a minimum 12- week run.

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 30) UPI - One-time high-flyer L.A. Gear Inc., hit hard in recent months by slow sales of new styles, said Monday it will debut a line of ''high technology'' sneakers next year.

The new line features a polyurethane sole the company sats is longer- lasting, cheaper and stronger than conventional rubber soles. The new material is also recyclable, the company said.

L.A. Gear, the nation's third-largest atheltic shoe producer after Nike Inc. and Reebok International Ltd., said the new technology will first be implemented on the company's new Catapult basketball shoe line, featuring Utah Jazz star Karl ''The Mailman'' Malone.

The company said the new polyurethane compound, produced by UTI Chemicals Inc. of Irvine, Calif., represents a capital investment of one-tenth the cost of rubber. It also said the compound, called Z-thane, can be shredded and recycled for other applications, while it is difficult to do so with rubber.

L.A. Gear also said the new compound is four times stronger than the rubber used for automobile tires.

The company, which made its reputation by selling flashy sneakers to teenage girls, said that Z-thane can be used to produce soles in ''a vast array of vibrant hues.''

L.A. Gear's stock, which was trading above $50 a share five months ago, has been hammered since then by two consecutive quarters of earnings declines, despite sharply increased sales. Its Michael Jackson line of shoes has not been selling well.

L.A. Gear stock closed down 50 cents Monday at $11.875 a share on the New York Stock Exchange.

For the nine months ended Aug. 31, L.A. Gear earned $38.4 million, or $1.91 a share, off from earnings of $43.4 million, or $2.47 a share. Sales were $712.9 million, up from $450.7 million.

(OCT. 29) UPI - Americans spent more than 370-Million dollars on diet drugs and related products last year. But the money may be doing more to line the pockets of the drugs' makers than it is in helping people lose weight. The Food and Drug Administration is moving to ban more than 100 ingredients in over-the-counter diet pills. The F-D-A says there is NO proof the pills work and one ingredient may even cause choking.

Mexican authorities are negotiating with a group holding a German diplomat hostage at the German consulate in a town 170 miles southeast of Mexico City. The diplomat was taken hostage today by members of a group demanding the release of the political leader, jailed in the slayings of two security guards at a Mexico City newspaper in April.

The governor's race in Texas is NOT just a heated one... it's consuming a lot of money. Campaign finance reports filed today show spending in the race has set a new state record- topping the 30-Million- dollar mark. The figure breaks the previous 19-Million dollars spent during the 1982 gubernatorial campaign. This year, G-O-P nominee Clayton Williams has spent about 20-Million... while Democrat Ann Richards has spent about 11-Million dollars.

Officials in Philadelphia say Independence Hall's leaky roof will be fixed... thanks to the more than 650-thousand dollars in emergency funds approved by Congress last weekend. LEAWOOD, KAN. (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - The New York State Energy Research and Development Authority (NYSERDA) has awarded a $500,000 research contract to Integrated Woodchem Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Interchem (N.A.) Industries Inc., to develop a waste wood to chemicals facility in New York state.

This one-year contract will fund site selection, engineering design and permitting for the plant development. Upon completion Integrated Woodchem will build a $25 million plant to convert 100,000 tons per year of waste sawdust and wood chips into valuable commodity chemicals.

These chemicals are currently being made from petroleum which is in increasing demand. In addition to the chemicals, this project will contain aquaculture systems and greenhouses which will produce fresh food.

Interchem has developed a unique process to convert the waste wood into energy and chemicals. The wood wastes are processed through a pyrolysis (high heat) unit. Oil vapors are formed which can be processed and sold directly as fuel oil or converted into chemicals. The remaining gases are burned to produce electricity. Processing of the resources in this manner creates an environmentally safe project.

Interchem (N.A.) Industries Inc. (OTC)(VSE:IID) is a publicly traded emerging growth company specializing in the environmentally clean production of commodity chemicals and energy from waste materials.

FREMONT, CALIF. (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Netcor Inc., (NASDAQ:NTCRA) a manufacturer of network connection devices for Ethernet applications, announced Tuesday the financial results for its first fiscal quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990 in which it recorded revenue of $821,371 and a profit from operations of $1,136 compared to revenue of $256,426 and a loss from operations of $97,612 in the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1989.

The improved results were attributed to revenues from its Giltronix subsidiary acquired in December 1989, from increased sales in its Ethernet market segment and from improved utilization of overhead resulting from its consolidation of operations with the Giltronix subsidiary.

The company reported a net loss of $34,934, or $0.007 per share in the most recent quarter compared to a net loss of $96,737, or $0.02 per share in the Sept. 30, 1989 period. The loss in the recent quarter was attributed, in part, to extremely high interest charges in connection with the Giltronix line of credit.

Interest expense in the quarter was $28,508 compared to interest income of $875 in the quarter ending Sept. 30, 1989.

Management expressed disappointment with both the revenue and profit results in the quarter. The reported revenue was lower than expected due to the failure to deliver production quantities of its new Ethernet repeater product. The delay was caused by the need to extend the testing period for the product in order to assure the elimination of any design problems.

Production quantities of the new product were delivered in October 1990. As a result, revenues in October were reported to have set a new record for the company and management expects to report stronger results in its second quarter ending Dec. 31, 1990.

Netcor, a NASDAQ listed company with approximately 5,200,000 shares outstanding, trades under the symbol NTCRA.

SAN FRANCISCO (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Bank of America's community reinvestment programs have been rated ''outstanding'' by the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency.

''We're very pleased that the OCC recognized the quality and comprehensiveness of our CRA program,'' BankAmerica Chairman and CEO Richard M. Rosenberg said. ''We're proud of our CRA record, and intend to continue working with the community to make it even stronger in the years ahead.''

Bank of America is one of the first major U.S. banks to receive a public rating on its CRA programs under a new law that took effect July 1. The law requires that regulators make a comprehensive examination of a financial institution's compliance with the Community Reinvestment Act and then assign it one of four ratings: outstanding, satisfactory, in need of improvement, and substantial noncompliance.

Executive Vice President Donald Mullane, head of Corporate Community Development and the bank's chief CRA officer, said the rating reflects the strong partnership Bank of America has developed with community investment groups throughout California. ''Much of the credit for our CRA program goes to the many community groups that have helped us identify and understand the different types of economic needs that exist in California,'' Mullane said. ''Their hard work helped us develop programs and products to meet those needs.''

In 1989, Bank of America made a total of $354 million in CRA-related loans, including $231 million in mortgage loans in low-income census tracts, and over $15 million through B.A.S.I.C, a consumer credit line geared toward low-income individuals. Mullane noted that the ''outstanding'' rating ''doesn't mean we're satisfied with our CRA program. We think we can do an even better job by working harder and taking more creative approaches.'' In 1990, the bank introduced Neighborhood Advantage, which is expected to substantially increase the volume of home mortgage originations in low-income census tracts in California. Also in 1990, Bank of America established Bank of America State Bank, which is focusing on financing community development projects.

In addition to direct loan programs, the bank participates in a number of national and state community reinvestment groups, including the Local Initiatives Support Corporation, and the California Community Reinvestment Corporation, of which it is a founding member and a major contributor.

SALT LAKE CITY (OCT. 26) BUSINESS WIRE - Questar Corp. (NYSE:STR) Tuesday reported higher third quarter and nine-month earnings, reflecting primarily improved results from its oil and gas exploration and production activities.

The diversified energy company had net income of $1,655,000, or 9 cents per share, for the third quarter of 1990 ended Sept. 30 compared with $782,000, or 1 cent per share, a year earlier. For the first nine months of this year, Questar earned $35,258,000, or $1.77 per share, compared with $33,685,000, or $1.71 per share, for the 1989 period.

There were 19.5 million average shares outstanding through Sept. 30 of this year and 19.3 million a year ago.

Questar's exploration and production operations increased their combined third quarter net income 81 percent from $2,089,000 in 1989 to $3,772,000 for the most recent quarter. Nine-month earnings were 55 percent higher, $11,259,000 in 1990 compared with $7,276,000 a year earlier.

A significant factor in the quarterly and year-to-date improvement was increased natural gas production from recently acquired properties and completed wells. The companies produced 10.8 billion cubic feet (Bcf) of gas in the first nine months of this year, a 38 percent increase over the comparable 1989 period.

The average sales price was flat at $1.86 per thousand cubic feet (Mcf). Other reasons for the improved exploration and production financial results were higher returns from gas-development drilling projects, lower amortization rates related to increased reserves and higher oil prices.

The average price of oil year to date was $18.29 per barrel, 10 percent above the year-earlier level. The higher price offset a 9 percent production drop due to the normal decline of older producing fields. The impact on net income of higher oil prices due to the Middle East crisis will occur largely in the fourth quarter.

In addition, the company has entered into an agreement to sell approximately 2,200 barrels of oil per day for a six-month period beginning Nov. 1, 1990, at an average price in excess of $35 per barrel.

Questar Telecom Inc. reported losses of $1.2 million for the first nine months of 1990 and $500,000 for the most recent quarter associated with commencing specialized mobile radio operations in the western U.S.

PUEBLO, CO (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - CF&I Steel Corp. (NASDAQ: CFIP) Tuesday announced that net sales for the third quarter 1990 were $67,300,000 compared with $77,592,000 reported in 1989. Net loss for the third quarter 1990 was $7,534,000, or $1.14 per common share compared with net loss of $492,000, or eight cents per common share, last year.

Net sales for the nine months 1990 were $216,491,000 compared with $224,415,000 in 1989. Net loss for the nine months 1990 was $16,606,000, or $2.51 per common share. The comparable nine months 1989 net loss was $5,197,000, or 79 cents per common share. Income tax benfits were not available to reduce 1990 or 1989 losses.

F.J. Yaklich Jr., president of CF&I Steel Corp., stated, "The decrease in third quarter sales from third quarter 1989 was due to a decline in the rail market as a result of reduced customer demand.

"Sales for the nine months 1990 compared to nine months 1989 are to decline in the rail market partially offset by increased Oil Country Tubular Goods (OCTG) volume reflecting a stronger OCTG market. The increased 1990 losses are primarily the result of the depressed rail market and softer pricing in the OCTG market."

HUNTSVILLE, AL (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - First AmFed Corp. (NASDAQ:FAMF) Tuesday reported operating results for the fourth quarter and fiscal year ended Sept. 30, 1990.

Morris Anderson, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, announced that net interest income for the fourth quarter increased 11 percent, or $308 to $3,044 from $2,736 for the comparable quarter last year.

The increase was primarily the result of lower interest expense. Net income for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990, was $596, or 32 cents per share, as compared to $799 for the same quarter last year, a decrease of $203.

The decrease is mainly attributable to a gain on sale of investments in the prior year's fourth quarter of $285, $188 after tax, with no comparable gain for the same quarter this year and the establishment in the current fourth quarter of a $180 reserve for real estate losses on a local commercial development project.

The financial statements presented for the prior year have been restated to include the merger with Fayetteville First Federal Savings and Loan Association (''Fayetteville''), as a result, no earnings per share or average share data for the prior year are referenced because they would not be comparable to the current periods.

For the year ended Sept. 30, 1990, the company reported an increase of 15 percent, or $1,520 in net interest income over the same period of time a year ago. Net interest income for the comparable periods was $12,001 and $10,481, respectively.

Net income for fiscal 1990 was $2,821, or $1.53 per share vs. $3,035 for fiscal 1989, a decrease of $214. The largest contributing factor for the decrease was the $533, approximately $352 after tax, of merger related expenses incurred primarily during the first quarter of fiscal 1990.

Total assets were $453,404, and $470,612 at Sept. 30, 1990 and 1989, respectively, a decrease of $17,208. The decrease is primarily attributable to the repayment of $29,080 in Federal Home Loan Bank advances during fiscal 1990.

''Even after incurring the merger expenses, First AmFed Corp.'s operations resulted in another profitable year enabling the company's board of directors to declare cash dividends totaling $1,485, or 80 cents per share,'' commented Anderson.

Anderson noted also that the company's financial statements and 10-K would be forthcoming.

DALLAS (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Trammell Crow Real Estate Investors (NYSE:TCR) declared a cash distribution to shareholders of $.175 per share for the third quarter of 1990 ended Sept. 30, 1990, representing the sixth consecutive quarterly distribution of $.175 per share by the real estate investment trust.

The distribution is payable Nov. 16, 1990 to shareholders of record on Nov. 9, 1990. It is presently estimated that the entire third quarter distribution will constitute a tax-free return of capital to shareholders.

Distributable cash for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990 was $1,896,000 or $.209 per share, slightly increased from distributable cash for the previous quarter ended June 30, 1990 of $1,820,000 or $.201 per share.

Distributable cash for the comparable quarter ended Sept. 30, 1989 was $2,079,000 or $.229 per share. The decrease from the third quarter of 1989 to 1990 resulted from a slightly lower comparable occupancy level.

Distributable cash for the first nine months of 1990 was $5,573,000 or $.614 per share, compared with $7,610,000 or $.839 per share for the first nine months of 1989. The decrease in distributable cash resulted primarily from the effect in the current period of the expiration of the Trust's developers leases in mid-1989.

The Trust has identified various alternatives to maximize shareholder value and has been evaluating those alternatives. Existing economic conditions, both generally and in the real estate industry, combined with present conditions in the financial markets generally and restrictions arising out of the Trust's current capital structure, have thus far made it difficult to implement any of those alternatives.

The Trust, however, will continue to seek solutions to implementing those alternatives during the next several months. In any event, management intends to seek to continue to improve property performance through aggressive asset management.

Trammell Crow Real Estate Investors was formed in 1985, and acquired from Trammell Crow Co. entities 19 commercial real estate projects, consisting of 18 industrial properties located in California, Florida, Maryland, Minnesota, North Carolina, Texas, Washington, and Wisconsin, and one retail mall located in Colorado.

The Trust's investment objective is to maximize the total return to its shareholders through the leasing, management, and eventual disposition of its industrial and retail properties.

Net loss for the third quarter 1990 was $230,000, or 2 cents per share, compared to a gain of $11,000, or 0 cent per share for the same period in 1989. Revenues for the third quarter 1990 were $6.1 million, compared to $8.4 million for the third quarter 1989.

The third quarter loss of $230,000 included a $142,000 loss of an economic affiliate, Sooner Web and Offset (''Sooner''), the company's former printing operation and non-recurring expenses relating to the settlement of certain litigation in the amount of $175,000.

Excluding these two items, the company operated at a profit for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990.

For the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990, the company reported cash flow from operations of $3,027,000, representing an approximate 217 percent, or $2,071,000 increase in cash flow from operations for the similar period of 1989.

Additionally, the company achieved net reductions in debentures and notes payable of $2,344,000, compared to $1,351,000 for the comparable period of 1989, an approximate 73 percent increase in the amount of debt retired.

The company is not only able to meet all debt requirements but is also covering the cost of operations. As a result, the excess cash flow, after meeting debt requirements and cost of operations, should be sufficient to allow substantial growth and expansion in the future.

SAN FRANCISCO (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - First Nationwide Financial Corp., a wholly owned subsidiary of Ford Motor Co., Tuesday announced it has added $115 million to loan loss reserves, including a $92 million increase in general reserves.

The action reduced third-quarter net income by $69 million. The company said 1990 third-quarter earnings were a net loss of $44.6 million, compared with a net gain of $36.4 million a year earlier. For the first nine months of 1990, the company earned $32.6 million, compared with $44.8 million for the like period a year ago.

The company said apartment and commercial real estate loan delinquencies increased beginning early this year. The increases were primarily in metropolitan New York. Delinquencies also increased in selected Southeastern locations and moderately in California.

The company said it has taken a number of steps to respond to market conditions, including adding to loss reserves beginning in the fourth quarter of 1989 and reducing commercial real estate lending.

''Given the present real estate climate, it's logical and prudent to increase our loan loss provision,'' said Robert E. Lackovic, First Nationwide's chairman and chief executive officer. ''First Nationwide's $17.4 billion real estate loan portfolio is diversified and well collateralized. Fundamental operations, including operating costs and net interest margins, continue to improve.''

The company also stated that its principal subsidiary, First Nationwide Bank, had recently completed a routine, concurrent examination of its operations by the Office of Thrift Supervision and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. The additions to the loan loss reserves, booked in the third quarter, reflect the result of this examination.

The company noted, however, that two accounting issues not resolved during the examination could adversely affect the bank's earnings and regulatory capital. One issue is the valuation of certain mortgage securities. The other issue involves contractually related intangibles resulting from FSLIC-assisted acquisitions in 1986-87.

The bank is discussing both of these issues with its regulators and exploring options to minimize the effects. The bank believes it will resolve these issues in the next three to nine months.

The company announced it expects to receive a capital contribution of $250 million from its parent Ford Motor Co. in November 1990. The contribution would be used to strengthen the capital base of First Nationwide Bank, the company's principal subsidiary.

All of the company's savings association subsidiaries exceed capital ratios required by the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989 (FIRREA).

Assets were $28.2 billion as of Sept. 30, 1990, compared with $31.7 billion a year ago.

In addition to First Nationwide Bank, its principal subsidiary, First Nationwide Financial Corp. operates Columbia Savings, Denver; Pathway Financial F.A., Chicago; and Cardinal Federal Savings Bank, Cleveland.

Together, the company operates 263 retail branches in 11 states and 34 loan offices in nine states. First Nationwide is part of the Ford Financial Services Group.

TORONTO (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - JONPOL Explorations Ltd., PERREX Resources Inc., NORTHWAY Explorations Ltd. T & H Resources and CANE Corp. report on exploration results and plans for properties in the Vezza- Douay area, NW Quebec under option to TOTAL Energold Corp. and MORRISON Minerals Ltd.

TOTAL Energold and Morrison have completed a $450,000 exploration program of airborne EM, IP and diamond drilling on the 366 claims currently under option from the above companies. The claims are underlain by the same stratigraphy as the adjacent Vezza deposit (Agnico Eagle-Dundee-Palliser-North American Rare Metals) and the nearby Inco-Cambior-Vior discovery in Douay Township.

A new pyrite-arsenopyrite bearing alteration zone was intersected on the Jonpol-Perrex East property. On the NORTHWAY property hole 102 drilled on section 7+00W on the RJ zone returned .42 opt Au cut to 1 oz. over 11.8 feet (or 14.5 g/t (cut to 34 g/t) over 3.6 metres) and extends the RJ zone an additional 656 feet (or 200 metres) down plunge beyond hole 21 (.255 opt Au over 16.7 feet) or (8.74 g/t over 5.1 metres). A table showing all drill holes in the RJ zone completed to date can be obtained from the address below.

Elsewhere on the Northway property, sampling of existing core has delineated wide intervals of anomalous gold in the area of the South and East zones. Results include 169 feet (51.5 metres) grading .016 opt Au (544 ppb Au) and 74 feet (24 metres) grading .04 opt Au (1425 ppb Au).

Based on these initial positive results Total Energold and Morrison plan to immediately commence a second drill program which will include further drill testing of the sulfide alteration zone on the Jonpol-Perrex property and step-out drilling on the RJ zone.

Total Energold and Morrison hold an option to earn a 60 percent interest in the three properties comprising the project by spending an aggregate total of $4,250,000 and making payments of $870,000 prior to May 1, 1994.

REDWOOD SHORES, CA (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Oracle Corporation today announced preliminary performance results for ORACLE , its relational database management system (RDBMS), on Digital Equipment Corporation's new VAX 6000 Model 500 family of computers, announced on October 25, 1990.

''Digital's VAX 6000 Model 500 series offers users outstanding performance,'' said Nimish Mehta, vice president, Oracle Minicomputer Systems Group. ''We've already been able to run ORACLE performance tests on the VAX 6000 Model 500 computers over the past few weeks at Digital's engineering facility with extremely positive results. These tests demonstrate that the VAX ORACLE combination can provide a superior database engine to even the most demanding production system environments.''

''Digital is very excited about the introduction of the VAX 6000 Model 500 systems. Their capability and scalability result in significant price/performance gains,'' said William R. Demmer, Digital vice president, VAX VMS Systems and Servers. ''We are impressed with the combination of ORACLE and the VAX 6000 Model 500 and feel it provides a powerful solution to our mutual customers considering performance upgrades.''

In its preliminary performance results, ORACLE demonstrated superior scalability and overall performance throughout the full performance range of the VAX 6000 Model 500, achieving 168 transactions per second (tps) on the Model 560. Additionally, 39 tps were achieved on the single processor Model 510. In an effort to move away from TP1 methodology toward standard benchmarking methodology, significant enhancements were added to the TP1 methodology. These unaudited results are estimates of ORACLE's performance on the VAX 6000 Model 500, and are a strong indication of ORACLE's scalability on the new machine. Oracle Parallels Digital's Hardware Upgrade Program

In concert with Digital's 15 percent discount hardware upgrade program for the VAX 6000 Model 500, Oracle will offer a 15 percent discount off the standard upgrade price to its customers who upgrade their current VAX 6000 ORACLE licenses to the VAX 6000 Model 500. This offer is good from October 25, 1990 to January 25, 1991. ORACLE RDBMS pricing for the VAX 6000 Model 500 systems range from $114,000 to $213,000 depending on the model chosen. Upgrade cost varies depending on which VAX 6000 is being upgraded and to which Model 500.

Oracle is the largest independent software company in the Digital marketplace. The company has 41 percent marketshare on the VAX 6000 series according to Sentry Market Research, an independent market research firm. Digital/Oracle Sign Complementary Software House Agreement

In a related announcement, Digital and Oracle have signed a Complementary Software House (CSH) agreement for Oracle's accounting applications software families, Oracle Financials and Oracle Government Financials .

The CSH agreement supports Digital's strategy of working with third-party software vendors to provide total solutions for DEC users. Oracle Financials are a complete suite of accounting applications, including general ledger, accounts payable, accounts receivable, fixed assets, purchasing, revenue accounting, and human resources.

''This agreement helps position Oracle Financials and Digital's VMS and RISC ULTRIX products as a strong solution in the move towards distributed accounting solutions,'' said Doug Collins, director of Oracle's DEC Strategic Accounts Organization.

The CSH agreement follows the May 23, 1990 announcement of Digital and Oracle's marketing agreement to jointly promote, market and sell Oracle Financials and Oracle Government Financials families of application software products on Digital's VAX VMS and RISC ULTRIX product families. About Oracle MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Adobe Systems Inc. (NASDAQ:ADBE) and IBM Corp. Tuesday announced that the new Version 1.3 of the OS/2 operating system incorporates Adobe Type Manager (ATM) software as a standard feature.

The integration of ATM software at the operating system level provides OS/2 users high-quality Adobe Type 1 fonts for screen displays and printed output, available transparently across different application programs.

IBM is the first computer company to offer ATM software as a standard feature in a personal computer operating system, the result of a co-development effort between itself and Adobe Systems. Adobe's ATM utility provides PostScript language outline fonts that may be scaled (enlarged or reduced) to any point size.

Outline font software offer smoothness and legibility far superior to ordinary bitmapped fonts. In addition, scalable outline fonts require less disk storage space than multiple sizes of bitmap typefaces.

Adobe licenses ATM software to OEMs and software developers for inclusion in their products. The product is also available in retail versions. ATM for the Apple Macintosh was released in October 1989, and ATM for Windows in October 1990.

OS/2 Version 1.3 is a 16-bit operating system available in two editions, both including ATM software. The Standard Edition provides basic operating system features. The Extended Edition also includes relational Database Manager, network Communications Manager and Local Area Network Requestor facilities.

Version 1.3 provides improved performance in environments such as Local Area Networks. The new release requires less memory than its predecessor Version 1.2.

OS/2 Version 1.3 includes an extensive set of printer drivers, including a new PostScript language driver that allows the use of downloadable fonts. The new PostScript language driver can save output to either standard or encapsulated PostScript files. Encapsulated PostScript language is a file format that serves as an interchange standard for transferring PostScript language files between applications and hardware platforms.

Adobe Systems Inc., founded in 1982 by Dr. John Warnock and Dr. Charles Geschke, is headquartered in Mountain View. Adobe is the developer of PostScript, the industry-standard page description language for electronic printing and publishing, and Display PostScript, a device-independent graphics software component for computer displays.

GENEVA, SWITZERLAND (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Garuda Indonesia and Lufthansa have signed a wide-ranging cooperation agreement designed to strengthen passenger and cargo services between Indonesia and Germany.

Under the agreement, both airlines will be able to increase the number of flights between their two countries in 1993 and 1994 to seven times a week. Each carrier will also be allowed to serve third cities in the other's country.

The agreement was signed on Oct. 30 at the 46th Annual General Meeting of the International Air Transport Association (IATA) in Geneva by the president of Garuda Indonesia Moehamad Soeparno and the president of Lufthansa Heinz Ruhnau.

The new cooperation agreement on cargo comes in response to the continued growth in trade between Indonesia and Germany. It includes a cargo yield improvement program which has been undertaken by Lufthansa. A joint cargo market survey has already been carried out to determine the present and likely future development of airfreight potential of export commodities to Europe and other destinations.

In addition (in advance of the 1991 opening of a new Garuda Indonesia Cargo Centre at Cengkareng Airport in Jakarta) Garuda Indonesia cargo personnel will receive specialized training under the German government's Technical Assistance Program. Lufthansa will also provide a cargo consultant to coordinate the functioning of the new cargo centre during its first year of operation.

Technical cooperation is also covered in the agreement to ensure Garuda Indonesia's preparedness for the introduction of its new Airbus aircraft in 1991/92. Garuda Indonesia's engineers will receive ''on-the-job'' training from Lufthansa to gain A300, B4 and D check experience.

This will be an important step towards the Garuda Maintenance Facility gaining German certification for Airbus maintenance in Jakarta. Lufthansa will also provide maintenance support which will include the repair and overhaul of B737 engines and spare parts on behalf of Garuda Indonesia.

HONOLULU (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Pacific International Services Corp., licensee for Dollar Rent A Car Hawaii and the Pacific, announced net income of $506,992, equivalent to 8 cents per share, on revenues of nearly $20,000,000 during the third quarter of 1990.

The results represent improvements over the similar quarter of 1989 when the company generated revenues of $18.1 million and a net loss of $347,218, or 6 cents per share. The third quarter earnings bring the total nine month net income for 1990 to $133,136, or 2 cents per share.

Alan M. Robin, president and chief executive officer, in reviewing the results for the third quarter, said he was pleased with the company's performance and added that ''the benefits of steps taken during the early part of 1990 to improve fleet utilization and efficiency have resulted in the best quarterly operating earnings in the past three years.

''The cost efficiencies in fleet utilization and operations are obviously in place and beginning to show the benefits we anticipated,'' Robin said. He did however caution that the current instability in world events and the slowdown in Hawaii's tourism growth rate will probably result in lower-than-projected revenues during the current fourth quarter business period.

Pacific International's Dollar Rent A Car franchise is the second largest car rental operation in Hawaii, with a fleet of approximately 6,000 vehicles.

NORWICH, CONN. (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Norwich Financial Corp. (NASDAQ:NSSB) Tuesday reported a net loss for the third quarter of 1990 of $762,000, or 15 cents per share compared to net income of $1.1 million and 20 cents per share for the third quarter of 1989.

The loss for the third quarter was attributable to a provision for loan losses of $4.0 million which was partially offset by a Federal tax benefit of $1.7 million. Continued deterioration in economic conditions, particularly in the real estate sector, resulted in management's decision to charge-off $4.6 million of non-performing assets in the third quarter.

For the nine month period Sept. 30, 1990, the company incurred a net loss of of $14.3 million, or $2.75 per share compared to net income of $2.6 million, or 47 cents per share for the same period in 1989. The loss was the result of a provision for loan losses of $21.5 million compared to $4.5 million in the same period in 1989. Net income for the first nine months of 1990 was also affected negatively by a decrease in interest income of $3.1 million, or 6.1 percent.

Daniel R. Dennis Jr., chairman, president and chief executive officer stated, ''We are committed to maintaining an appropriate level of loan loss reserves, and will continue to monitor closely non-performing assets.'' Total non-performing assest increased $37.0 million, or 7.09 percent of total loans and foreclosed properties from $35.2 million, or 6.58 percent at June 30, 1990.

The company's ratio of allowance for loan losses to total non-performing assets was 50.8 percent as of Sept. 30, 1990 compared to 55.1 percent as of June 30, 1990. The reserve for loan losses at Sept. 30, 1990 was $18.8 million compared to $19.4 million at June 30, 1990.

An increase in non-accrual loans from $20.5 million at the end of the second quarter to $25.8 million at the end of the third quarter contributed to a decline in interest income and also net interest income since the cost of funds remained level between the second and third quarters.

Compared to the third quarter of 1989, interest income decreased by $1.7 million while the cost of funds decreased $600,000. The net interest margin (taxable equivalent) for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990 equalled 3.13 percent compared to 3.27 percent for the second quarter of 1990 and 3.72 percent for the three months ended Sept. 30, 1989.

The company's capital position remained strong with a ratio of equity to assets of 11.26 percent as of Sept. 30, 1990 compared to 11.38 percent at June 30, 1990, and a regulatory primary capital ratio of 13.76 percent as of Sept.

30, 1990 compared to 13.88 percent at June 30, 1990, making Norwich Financial Corp. one of the most highly capitalized banking companies in the state.

Mr. Dennis said, ''These ratios are well above regulatory minimums. The company's high level of primary capital provides it with the capacity to absorb losses in the disposition of non-performing assets, while continuing to maintain a high level of financial strength.''

Compared to June 30, 1990, total assets decreased $19.2 million while deposits decreased $8.0 million. Total stockholders' equity was $3.0 million less than at June 30, 1990, because of the quarterly loss coupled with the decline in the value of marketable equity securities of $2.0 million. Book value per share equalled $14.03 as of Sept. 30, 1990.

The company also announced that the board of directors declared a regular quarterly cash dividend of 5 cents per share payable Nov. 28, 1990, to stockholders of record as of Nov. 14, 1990. Mr. Dennis stated that the board of directors will continue to review dividend policy in the context of the prevailing economic and regulatory environment as well as the company's level of non-performing assets.

Norwich Financial Corp. is a registered bank holding company whose principal subsidiary is The Norwich Savings Society, a $649 million FDIC-insured savings bank which operates 14 banking offices throughout eastern Connecticut.

KAHULUI, HAWAII (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Maui Land & Pineapple Company Inc. reported net income of $1.6 million, or 90 cents per share, for the third quarter of 1990 compared to a net loss of $1.5 million, or 86 cents per share, for the third quarter of 1989.

Revenues for the third quarter of 1990 were $30.5 million compared to $32.4 million for the prior year.

For the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990, net income was $1.8 million, $1.01 per share compared to $6 million, or $3.36 per share, for the first nine months of 1989. Revenues of $79.5 million for the first nine months of 1990 were 18 percent lower than the like period a year ago.

Increased earnings for the third quarter were due primarily to lot sales at the Plantation Estates I subdivision at Kapalua.

Lower results for the first nine months of 1990 as compared to the like period in 1989 were due to lot sales at the Kapalua Place subdivision in the second quarter of 1989.

Excluding real estate sales, Kapalua's operating results were lower for the third quarter and the first nine months of 1990 as compared to the like periods in 1989.

Pineapple operations produced higher revenues for the third quarter and first nine months of 1990 as compared to the like periods last year due to a higher average unit value of sales.

Although the operating loss for the third quarter decreased compared to last year's third quarter, the nine month period showed increased losses over a year ago. Lower case volume of sales and higher costs contributed to these results.

Kaahumanu Center reported increased revenues and profits for the third quarter and first nine months of 1990 as compared to the like periods in 1989.

RUTLAND, VT (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Central Vermont Public Service Corp. (NYSE:CV) reported unaudited earnings for the third quarter 1990 of 66 cents per common share compared to 10 cents for the third quarter 1989.

The 1989 results, however, included a 28 cents per share write-off related to the Champlain Pipeline project. Included in the 1990 earnings for the third quarter was 17 cents per share related to CV Rumford's investment in a wood and coal-fired cogeneration plant located in Rumford, Maine, which began operations in June 1990.

We expect a net contribution to earnings from the Rumford project of approximately 12 cents for 1990.

For the nine and 12 months ended Sept. 30, 1990 earnings were $1.86 and $2.37 compared to $2.09 and $2.11 for the similar periods last year.

The Vermont economy, while softening along with New England's and the nation's as a whole, still shows an unemployment rate below the national average. Cutbacks in employment have largely been concentrated in the manufacturing sector and construction. Despite soft sales, we expect to earn our allowed return for 1990.

MILLBRAE, Calif. (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Homestead Financial Corp. (NYSE:HFL/HFLB) reported net income of $0.8 million, or 7 cents per share, for the third quarter of 1990 compared to a net loss of $1.5 million, or 13 cents per share, for the third quarter of 1989.

Aftertax income from continuing operations totalled $1.1 million for the third quarter of 1990 compared to $1.9 million for the third quarter of 1989. Aftertax income for 1990 was primarily the result of $1.6 million in tax benefits due mainly to the sale of several commercial notes during the quarter.

During the third quarter of 1989, the company sold $520 million in mortgage-related securities at a gain of $10.7 million. The company also recorded a $6.3 million mark-to-market loss on its high yield bond portfolio and a $6.5 million aftertax extraordinary loss due to the prepayment penalty on the early retirement of FHLB debt during the third quarter of 1989.

During the current quarter, the company committed itself to the sale of all of the assets of Homestead Land Development Corp. (HLDC), its residential real estate development subsidiary. Therefore, the company has classified this business as a discontinued operation.

The aftertax loss from discontinued operations totalled $0.3 million for the third quarter of 1990 compared to aftertax income of $3.1 million for the third quarter of 1989. HLDC sold 84 homes and 213 homes during the third quarter of 1990 and 1989, respectively.

Net interest income totalled $7.5 million for the third quarter of 1990 compared to $4.2 million for the comparable period in 1989. The primary reason for the improvement was lower loan loss provisions. Primary interest rate spread increased from 1.45 percent at Sept. 30, 1989, to 1.79 percent at Sept. 30, 1990.

General and administrative expenses decreased 9.0 percent from $11.1 million for the third quarter of 1989 to $10.1 million for the third quarter of 1990. Reduced personnel and other operating expenses contributed to the improvement.

Homestead Savings continues to place emphasis on growing and enhancing the value of its retail franchise which includes twenty-one branches in the San Francisco Bay Area. During the third quarter of 1990, retail deposits increased by $42.0 million or 5.5 percent.

Homestead Savings, the company's savings and loan subsidiary, had stockholder's equity of $43.5 million at Sept. 30, 1990.

Beginning on July 1, 1990, for the purposes of calculating regulatory capital under the 1989 savings and loan legislation, Homestead Savings must deduct from capital 10 percent of its investment in and extensions of credit to HLDC. This percentage increases over a transition period to 100 percent on July 1, 1994.

As a result of the thrift's investment in and extension of credit to HLDC, reductions of $28.5 million for tangible and core capital and $57.1 million for risk-based capital were made to stockholder's equity at Sept. 30, 1990.

Partially as a result of these reductions, Homestead Savings had negative regulatory capital resulting in shortfalls of $42.4 million, $80.7 million and $103.8 million for tangible, core and risk-based capital, respectively, at Sept. 30, 1990.

Homestead Savings is actively pursuing the disposition of its real estate assets to improve its regulatory capital position. Homestead Savings has not met certain requirements in its previously approved capital plan and filed an amendment to this plan with the Office of Thrift Supervision. Homestead Savings continues to operate under its previously approved capital plan.

STAMFORD, CT (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Devon Group Inc., Stamford, Conn. (NASDAQ:DEVN) Tuesday announced that for its second fiscal quarter sales were $46,466,000, and net income was $433,000 (6 cents per share), inclusive of a reserve of $809,000, net of taxes (11 cents per share) for the sale of The Franklin Press Inc. (Miami, Fla.), a unit of Devon's financial printing subsidiary, The Aztech Chas P. Young Co.

For the previous fiscal year's second quarter sales were $45,615,000, and net income was $3,383,000, or 33 cents per share.

For the six months ended Sept. 30, sales were $91,721,000 and net income was $1,525,000, compared to sales of $93,251,000 and net income of $7,228,000 for the same period last year.

Net income per common share for the first half was 21 cents vs. 69 cents in the comparable prior year period.

The operations and substantially all the assets and liabilities of The Franklin Press were sold on Oct. 16, 1990, to a group headed by its current president for a total consideration of $750,000.

Franklin had annual sales of approximately $4 million.

Because the Miami and the southeast markets have not developed as had been anticipated several years ago, Franklin Press incurred pretax losses of $627,000 in fiscal 1990 and $469,000 in fiscal 1991 up until its sales.

Commenting on this announcement, Marne Obernauer, Jr., chairman and CEO, stated, ''It's important to note that results at three of our four business units (Black Dot, Graftek, and Devon Publishing Group) are in the aggregate virtually even with our internal projections and expectations at the outset of this fiscal year.

The fundamental problem affecting our earnings is our financial printing unit, where an already soft market has been worsened by uncertain conditions stemming from the Middle East crisis and from a recessionary environment.

Significant steps, including staffing level reductions were taken at the end of September to reduce expense levels and increase efficiency in light of these revenue shortfalls.

This was followed by the sale of Franklin Press, which stems the losses we were incurring in that area. We are monitoring carefully our progress with these steps, and further actions will be taken as required.''

''It should also be noted that sales and income in our pre-press business fell below prior year levels in the first half as forecast due to lower demand form textbook publishers and a key retail advertiser. However, as we stated, results were in line with previous expectations, and profitability continues at very respectable levels.''

Devon Group Inc. is a diversified graphic arts company which provides the following services and products: pre-press computerized typesetting, composition, and color separation; complete financial printing; printing, binding and fulfillment to a broad base of magazine publishers; and publishing/distribution of posters, art reproductions, original art, note cards, and calendars.

Attached is a financial summary of the three and six month periods ended Sept. 30, 1990 and 1989.

SAN JOSE, CA (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Digital Communications Associates (NYSE:DCA) Tuesday announced it has begun initial shipments of IRMAtrac Token-Ring Adapter/Convertible, a new Token-Ring local area network (LAN) hardware adapter.

With IRMAtrac and network operating system software, users can construct Token-Ring LANs that enable them to communicate with network resources such as printers and other personal computers (PCs), or with mainframe computers. Network operating systems currently supported by IRMAtrac include DCA's 10NET Plus, Novell's Netware 286 and 386 and IBM's PC LAN Program.

DCA said that it intends to add specially designed software drivers that will enable IRMAtrac to support the Microsoft LAN Manager network operating system and other OS/2-based products such as the DCA/Microsoft Select Communications Server, Select Communications Workstation and 3Com's 3+Open. These drivers are scheduled to be available in the first quarter of calendar year 1991.

With its Ring Interface Modules (RIMs) -- believed to be the first in the industry -- IRMAtrac can support either 4 or 16 megabit per second (Mbps)

Token-Ring LANs from a single adapter, helping to protect users' hardware investments as their communications needs change.

In a specially designed laboratory based at DCA's San Jose, Calif., research and development center, IRMAtrac's performance was stress-tested in a multi-vendor network to ensure full compatibility with the IEEE 802.5 standard for twisted-pair wiring and interoperability with IBM Token-Ring products.

Rodwick said the large-node network testing was designed to ensure full compliance with IBM's recommendation of support for 136 nodes at 16 Mbps over 100-meter cabling. Other tests conducted by DCA included ''worst case'' cable configurations, in addition to varying test patterns and data packet sizes.

Initial shipments of IRMAtrac Token-Ring Adapter/Convertible are available now through DCA's standard distribution channel for a suggested retail price of $895.

Based 30 miles north of Atlanta in Alpharetta, Ga., DCA designs, manufactures and markets products that enhance the productivity of personal computer users.

LOS ANGELES (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Teradata Corp. (NASDAQ:TDAT), a manufacturer of high-performance relational database computer systems, Tuesday announced first fiscal quarter operating results.

Revenue for the three-month period ended Sept. 30, 1990, was $47,433,000, compared with $42,979,000 in the first quarter of fiscal 1990. The loss before extraordinary items for the first quarter was $7,611,000, or 50 cents per share, compared with earnings of $1,953,000, or 14 cents per share, in the first quarter of fiscal 1990.

The extraordinary item brought the net loss for the quarter to $8,891,000, or 59 cents per share, compared with net income of $2,419,000, or 17 cents per share, in the comparable prior-year period.

The first-quarter results include revenues of ShareBase Corp., which was acquired by Teradata on June 27, 1990. ShareBase recorded first-quarter revenues of $8,362,000.

Kenneth W. Simonds, Teradata's chairman and chief executive officer, said: ''As we previously reported, our first-quarter revenues were negatively affected by several factors. During the summer quarter, we typically have a low level of visibility on the quarter's business until near the end of the quarter.

''While we had identified enough potential business to meet our expectations, the order closure rate we normally see at the end of a quarter failed to materialize. This was especially true in our two principal European markets -- England and Germany. In particular, one of our largest European customers is undergoing a reorganization that has resulted in the postponement of expected revenues.

Teradata (excluding ShareBase) sold 495 processors in 44 transactions during the first fiscal quarter. Thirty-one of these transactions, comprising 245 processors, were expansions or upgrades of previously installed systems, and 13 were new systems.

Los Angeles-based Teradata designs, manufactures and markets high-performance systems and related products and services for relational database management.

REDMOND, WA (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Microsoft Corp. Tuesday announced MS OS/2 operating system version 1.3.

The new product is an update to MS OS/2 with improvements for low-memory systems. The new version includes improved performance of the install program and graphical file manager as well as enhancements to the shell.

Microsoft will begin supplying MS OS/2 version 1.3 to its OEM customers within 90 days. The product requires minimal adaptation on the part of OEMs because there are no new application programming interfaces (APIs) or device driver interfaces. Consequently, the update will operate with existing MS OS/2 device drivers. Additionally, LAN Manager 2.0 will support OS/2 version 1.3 on the server.

OS/2 has a steadily growing application base, to which several new and updated products have been added in recent months. Microsoft Excel, the leading graphical spreadsheet, has recently been updated to take advantage of improvements in MS OS/2 version 1.2 and above. The update, Microsoft Excel for OS/2 version 2.21, supports OfficeVision for OS/2 and UNC file names. It runs on OS/2 version 1.3 with at least 2 MB of RAM. Additionally, Microsoft Word version 1.1 for OS/2, which will be available by the end of 1990, is a full-featured, graphical word processor that conforms to the IBM CUA (common user access) standard, supports extended attributes and takes advantage of OS/2 long file names. Word for OS/2 rounds out the Word family of products, providing cross-platform word processing capability for many popular platforms.

Other companies have recently introduced OS/2 applications as well. InfoAlliance, from Software Publishing Corp., is a client/server software product which lets personal computer users on a network transparently access and manipulate data located in disparate databases. HONOLULU (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - The Federal Maritime Commission announced that the 3.6 percent general rate increase Matson Navigation Co. placed into effect on March 10 is to be reduced to 2.68 percent and that shippers are entitled to refunds, with interest.

Administrative procedures for implementing this complex, time-consuming refund task have not yet been determined. In conjunction with this rate reduction, Matson has decided to reduce the parallel increase that was filed March 10 with the Interstate Commerce Commission for certain intermodal rates and tenders for government cargo subject to ICC jurisdiction.

A preliminary estimate of revenue affected by these actions shows that refunds and interest would, at most, total $3 million.

While Matson is pleased that the FMC agreed with the company on the majority of issues related to the general rate increase, Matson is disappointed that the commission has modified Administrative Law Judge Norman Kline's initial decision, which found Matson's 3.6 percent rate increase ''just and reasonable.''

Of the key issues involved in the decision, the FMC agreed with Kline's finding that ''Matson has acquired vessels and improved its facilities in order to maintain first-rate service in response to the reasonably foreseeable needs of its customers and to maintain its position as the premier carrier serving the trade.''

The commission's decision to reduce Matson's rate increase was the result of a downward adjustment of the benchmark for rate of return of U.S. manufacturing firms.

The FMC's decision to set Matson's fair rate of return at 10.18 percent was based on ''current trends'' in rate of return of such firms during the ''test year'' (April 1, 1990, to March 31, 1991) and the commission's belief that, despite an upsurge in competition, Matson will be at ''less risk'' during this ''test year'' than the average U.S. manufacturing company.

With headquarters in San Francisco, Matson is a subsidiary of Alexander & Baldwin Inc. (NASDAQ:ALEX).

SAN DIEGO (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - ISIS Pharmaceutical and Ciba-Geigy Ltd., Basel, are to collaborate in an innovative field of molecular biology.

Therapeutic applications for use in medicine will be investigated in the first instance, prior to other applications.

Existing drugs combat pathogenic proteins after these have been formed. The new and highly specific therapy aims to block the formation of pathogenic proteins in the cell with the aid of antisense oligonucleotides but without interfering with the human genotype.

The collaboration will focus at the outset on the four molecular targets associated with, for example, virus infection, inflammation and cancer. Further possible applications exist in diagnostics, animal health and agriculture.

Over the next few years, Ciba-Geigy will commit more than $30 million to the project to which both parties will contribute their relevant research activities.

SAN FRANCISCO (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Silicon Graphics, the leader in high performance 3-D workstations, and Ithaca Software, the leading supplier of portable 3-D graphics tools for personal workstations, have jointly developed IRISVIEW, a tool for viewing DXF files.

IRISVIEW, based on Ithaca Software's HOOPS Graphics System, will be bundled with Silicon Graphics' new IRISVISION graphics board. IRISVIEW will allow IRISVISION users to view and manipulate complex DXF files in real-time on personal computers. DXF, Autodesk's open standard for geometric data, is the most widely used format for 3-D data transfer on personal computers.

The combination of IRISVISION and IRISVIEW brings the benefits of high performance 3-D graphics to the broad personal computer market.

HOOPS is a graphics development system used by software makers to produce portable graphics applications across a wide range of workstations and personal computers. As part of its agreement with Silicon Graphics, Ithaca Software has ported HOOPS to the IRISVISION graphics accelerator for the PC.

HOOPS is based on an innovative 'declarative' programming interface pioneered by Ithaca Software. Declarative programming greatly simplifies the design and development of new graphics applications. Using HOOPS, developers from Silicon Graphics, Autodesk and Ithaca Software were able to accelerate development of the IRISVIEW application.

Ithaca Software introduced the HOOPS Graphics System at ACM Siggraph '86. Since 1987, HOOPS has been licensed at more than 500 commercial and 100 academic sites. HOOPS was the first 3-D graphics development system available on X Windows, DOS, Macintosh and OS/2. It is the only system capable of producing advanced graphics applications across the entire spectrum of engineering workstations and personal computers.

HOOPS has been adopted as a 3-D graphics standard by many of the leading makers of personal computers and workstation software including Autodesk, CADAM, Mechanical Dynamics, Signal Technology, Spatial Technology, Versacad and others. In 1988, HOOPS won a Digital Review Target Award Nomination for best graphics product. In 1989, HOOPS received BYTE magazine's Award of Distinction.

Ithaca Software develops, markets and supports graphics development systems for personal workstations. Ithaca Software, incorporated in 1985, is a privately held company based in Alameda, Calif., with sales and support facilities in Dallas, Tokyo and Basel, Switzerland.

AUGUSTA, GA (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - The National Science Center Foundation (NSCF) has selected the Motorola MultiPersonal Computer as the platform for Learning Logic, a math learning software product designed to combat declining math and science proficiency among U.S. high school students.

In addition, Motorola's Commercial Systems Division (CSD), based in Cupertino, Calif., has committed to assisting NSCF in expanding the number of high schools participating in Learning Logic. As an NSCF marketing partner, CSD will provide sales and marketing expertise and substantial discounts on computers sold to the participating schools.

NSCF, a non-profit organization based in Augusta, said the Learning Logic, software is revolutionary because it is the first educational software product to deliver a complete high school course to students -- in this case, algebra I -- via a computer.

NSCF developed the Learning Logic software math course. Motorola's MultiPersonal was selected from 30 different systems as the hardware platform for field testing the first installment of Learning Logic.

The MultiPersonal was chosen because it offers the color graphics and speed needed for Learning Logic at a price that is affordable for schools, according to Dr. McLowery Elrod, director of NSCF's National Mathematics Center. A typical Learning Logic system includes the MultiPersonal Model 300 with 30 color X terminals. The computer is based on the Motorola M88000 reduced instruction set computing (RISC) microprocessor.

Designed by a team of math teachers and software experts, the Learning Logic software is an interactive, self-paced math course that operates on Motorola's high-speed computer with high definition, 256-color graphics terminal.

Students do most of their work in class on the computer, with a teacher helping individual students and determining homework assignments and tests.

Students new to Learning Logic are tested by the software to determine their math proficiency so the computer will begin the math instruction at a level appropriate to the student's ability. Students work directly on the computer, reading information and solving problems posed by the software.

Learning Logic is mastery based, meaning that students cover a new topic only when they have mastered the previous one -- thereby making learning more comprehensive.

Motorola is one of the world's leading providers of electronic equipment, systems, components and services for worldwide markets. Products include two-way radios, pagers, cellular telephone systems, semiconductors, defense and aerospace electronics, automotive and industrial electronics equipment, computers, data communications and information processing and handling equipment.

HUNTSVILLE, AL (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - If you've ever raised an eyebrow at something that came out of your faucet -- something other than cool, clear water, that is -- then you can imagine the importance Space Station astronauts will place on water purity in orbit.

Water-purity studies -- studies designed to keep contaminants out of Space Station water -- are taking place at Boeing Aerospace & Electronics in Huntsville. The studies are necessary to ensure astronauts aboard Space Station Freedom -- and eventually, in missions to other planets -- can live safely in ''closed-loop'' systems, those that must recycle water.

The studies are part of Boeing work on Space Station Freedom to build living and laboratory modules, the node structures that connect them and on-board systems including the Environmental Control and Life-Support System (ECLSS). The water purity studies support the ECLSS portion of the Boeing work, and are concerned with recycling water aboard the spacecraft.

Aboard Freedom recyclable water from urine, washing clothes, taking showers and from humidity condensation must be salvaged, since a standard eight-member crew could use as much as 40,000 pounds of water every 90 days in orbit. In other words, without the capability to recycle the water aboard Space Station, NASA would have to launch a shuttle every 90 days just to replenish the water supply.

So while some Boeing engineers are testing the recycling systems, additional volunteers are supporting the test program by exercising up a sweat, then taking showers and laundering the workout togs they wore. Others are determining what's in the wash- and shower water.

Gerald Whitman, Boeing Space Station lab manager, said that the Huntsville chemistry and microbiology lab is responsible for analysis of water from the environmental systems proposed for use on the station.

Test water is collected in the ECLSS subsystems area at Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville. Systems that collect and recycle water there are similar to those planned for Space Station.

Recently the Boeing lab achieved a cumulative 95-percent accuracy rate in identifying and quantifying contaminants based on blind samples sent to them by NASA during a three-month period. The space agency ''spiked'' every 10th sample and required Boeing to give a detailed report of everything that was in every sample -- even if it was simply good old water.

Boeing has approximately 1,000 employees in Huntsville working on NASA's Space Station Freedom.

GUERNSEY, CHANNEL ISLANDS (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Insituform Group Ltd. (''IGL'')(NASDAQ National Market: IGLSF (shares) and IGLWF (warrants)) Tuesday announced that it has signed a new Insituform license agreement with Stabilator AB, a major Swedish company in the construction and pipeline industry.

Prior to this agreement, Stabilator AB had been an Insituform sub-licensee of IGL's Norwegian licensee. Now, as a full licensee, Stabilator will be in a better position to draw upon the technical, sales and marketing talents and resources of IGL. Under the new agreement, Stabilator AB will pay IGL royalties amounting to 8 percent of net contract volume.

Commenting, Stabilator's managing director Bjorn Emt, stated, ''Working in direct collaboration with IGL should accelerate the expansion of our Insituform activities in both the municipal and industrial markets.''

John Deacon, IGL's Vice President and General Manager for European, Middle East and African operations said, ''Sweden, which up to now has been an underdeveloped market for Insituform, should become an important one. We are confident that this new direct link will benefit both companies in developing our business in this affluent and environmentally-aware market.''

In addition to its Insituform business, Stabilator AB is engaged in the reconstruction and rehabilitation of structures and foundations, engineering, and soil and rock stabilization. It has a workforce of 900 and annual sales of Sw Kr 650 million (U.S. $113 million). Stabilator is owned by Skanska, the largest construction company and real estate owner in Scandinavia, and the fifth largest in Europe. Worldwide, Skanska employs 29,000 and generates Sw Kr 30 billion (U.S. $5.217 billion).

Insituform Group Ltd., through its wholly-owned subsidiaries, owns the world-wide rights to a system of pipeline and conduit rehabilitation known as the Insituform (R) Process. With more than 18,000 successfully completed contracts in over 40 countries, Insituform retains market lead, having renovated in excess of 4,000 km of pipeline to date.

By eliminating the need for disruptive excavation, the Insituform Process provides a cost-effective solution to the problem of deteriorating pipe systems. A flexible non-woven fiber tube (Insitutube (R)), impregnated with a liquid resin, is inverted by water pressure through the damaged pipe and is forced firmly against the inside of the pipe. The resin is then cured, either by hot water or high frequency light, creating a durable new structural pipe within the old.

Net income for the first three quarters of the year was $10,306,000, or 74 cents per fully diluted common share, compared with income before extraordinary item of $7,690,000, or 59 cents per share in 1989. Net income for the thirty-nine weeks ended Sept. 30, 1989 was $9,598,000, or 71 cents per share, which included and extraordinary item of $1,908,000.

Per share amounts for 1989 and 1990 have been restated to give retroactive effect to the company's 100 percent stock dividend distributed to stockholders on Oct. 1.

The increase in earnings for the quarter was primarily the result of strong sales growth accompanied by a higher gross margin and lower interest expense when compared to the like period in 1989. These improvements were partially offset by a somewhat higher ratio of selling, general and administrative expenses to sales and a higher income tax rate.

TORRANCE, CA (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - MDT Corp. (NASDAQ:MDTC) Tuesday reported that sales and earnings of $26 million and $382,000, respectively, for the second quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990, represented increases of $1,475,000, or 6 percent, and $252,000, or 194 percent, respectively, over sales and earnings for the same quarter a year earlier.

The company also reported that bookings of $27.5 million for the most recent quarter represented an increase of $4.42 million, or 19 percent, over bookings for the same quarter a year earlier.

Additionally, the company reported that gross profit margin of 30.9 percent in the current quarter compared with 30.6 percent and 28.9 percent in the quarters ended June 30, 1990, and Sept. 30, 1989, respectively.

Thomas Hein, vice president for finance and chief financial officer, said that bookings for the current quarter reflected solid demand for products recently introduced and improved demand for hospital equipment generally.

He said that sales for the quarter reflected continuing slower shipments of new products, which are increasingly replacing established products in the order mix and which are not yet contributing to improved gross profit margin. Hein continued that the second quarter report to stockholders would be mailed on or about Nov. 12, 1990.

COCONUT GROVE, FLA. (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - WATSCO Inc. (ASE: WSOA) Tuesday announced record revenues and earnings for the third quarter and nine months ended September 30, 1990.

In the third quarter ended September 30, 1990, revenues increased to a record $28,422,000 from $27,135,000 last year. Net income increased 52 percent to a record $816,000 from $536,000. Primary earnings per share increased to 40 cents from 28 cents, while fully-diluted earnings per share increased to 35 cents from 25 cents in the prior year's third quarter.

In the nine months ended September 30, 1990, revenues rose to a record $79,706,000, up from $71,615,000 in the first nine months of 1989. Net income increased 22% to $1,948,000 from $1,596,000 last year. Primary earnings per share increased to 98 cents from 84 cents, while fully-diluted earnings per share increased to 86 cents from 76 cents.

It should be pointed out that last year's third quarter operating results included a loss from discontinued operations of $234,000 (12 cents and 10 cents per share, respectively, on a primary and fully-diluted basis) and for the nine months, a loss of $157,000 (9 cents and 6 cents per share, respectively, on a primary and fully-diluted basis).

Revenues in both the climate control and personnel services operations increased in the third quarter and nine months as compared to the prior year. Operating income increases in climate control more than offset lower operating income in personnel services caused by the weak economy, especially in the New England area, and start-up expenses of new offices opened during 1990.

Commenting on the fourth quarter and on Watsco's recent acquisition, Albert H. Nahmad, Chairman and President stated, ''Watsco's fourth quarter results should benefit from the Company's recent investment in Heating & Cooling Supply, Inc. Fifty percent of Heating & Cooling's earnings, from the date of investment, will be reported by Watsco under the equity method of accounting. Heating & Cooling, California's largest independent distributor of air conditioning and heating products, was acquired by Watsco and Rheem Manufacturing Company on October 15, 1990.

''In 1989, Watsco acquired 80 percent and Rheem acquired 20 percent of Gemaire Distributors, Inc., the largest independent distributor of such products in Florida. With the acquisition of Heating & Cooling, Watsco is now an industry leader in California as well as Florida, the largest markets for air conditioning and heating products in the United States. This growing presence in the climate control industry has enabled Watsco to achieve record revenues and earnings thus far in 1990, despite the existing well-known problems in the national economy. An economic recovery, particularly in Florida and California, should increase operating results even more dramatically in the future.''

Watsco participates in the climate control industry through various manufacturing and distribution subsidiaries. In addition, the Company participates in the personnel services industry through its Dunhill Personnel System Inc. subsidiary.

BEACHWOOD, OHIO (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Horizon Financial Services Inc. (NASDAQ:HFIN) reported sharply higher earnings for the third quarter and nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990.

Net income for the quarter was $328,364 or 20 cents per share compared with $113,936 or 7 cents per share in the third quarter of 1989.

For the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990, net income was $917,093 or 55 cents per share compared with $489,403 or 30 cents per share during the like period in 1989.

The increase in year-to-date earnings also reflected improvement in two other factors: lower operating expenses and higher non-interest income. Through September, operating expenses declined $136,619 while other fees and income rose $342,899. Fritzsche commented, ''We've been successful at containing expenses and increasing non-interest income this year. The cost of running a savings and loan has risen significantly since regulations were imposed mandating increases in deposit insurance premiums, supervisory and examination costs, and declines in FHLB stock dividends. Our earnings could have been even higher (by nearly 9 cents per share) if not for those factors.''

In other developments, chairman of the board, Donald S. Manning, reported that Horizon's investment banker, McDonald & Company Securities Inc., advised the board that the deteriorating stock market has diminished acquisition interest in financial institutions.

McDonald was retained by Horizon in March 1990 to advise the company on strategies for maximizing shareholder value. Those strategies included the sale of the company as well as expansion through internal growth, acquisition, merger or branch purchases. Following a review and solicitation of acquisition proposals, McDonald concluded that until the general market atmosphere and particularly the market valuation of financial stocks improves, the ability to arrange an acquisition of Horizon at reasonable terms appears to be difficult. The board of directors has decided to cease active solicitations of acquisition interest at this time and to have McDonald continue to monitor the markets and opportunities for Horizon. Manning commented, ''Our obligation to explore all strategic issues and options for the company is unchanged.''

NATICK, MASS. (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Prime Computer Inc. Tuesday announced the addition of two entry-level systems which extends the company's new generation of 50 Series systems -- the 5000 Series -- to four models announced since September.

The 5310 system and the 5330 system are self-contained, desk-side models which provide a lower-priced entry point into the firm's new powerful 5000 Series. The systems deliver approximately 47 percent better price/performance than the 2850 system and the 2950 system they replace, and support up to 64 and 128 directly-connected users, respectively.

The 5310 system and the 5330 system join two other models within the 5000 Series family -- the 5320 system and the 5340 system -- based on state-of-the-art complementary metal oxide semiconductor (CMOS) technology. This technology allows the entire CPU logic of 5000 Series systems to be contained on one board instead of up to five, as required with the systems they replace. The result is up to 83 percent increased performance with the need for less power, less cooling and approximately half the floor space.

Packaged in the 5000 Series new ''No Trade In Required'' modular packaging, system capability can be increased incrementally by re-orienting the systems from vertical to horizontal and snapping on additional modules for greater configuration flexibility. The 5310 system can be upgraded by ''swapping in'' a more powerful 5330 or 5340 system CPU.

The 5310 system and the 5330 system are available immediately.

''These new systems are impressive solutions to users who require superb multi-user performance,'' said Richard B. Snyder, president and general manager of Prime's Computer Systems Business Unit. ''They also provide a new low-priced entry point to users who want to take advantage of the benefits delivered through CMOS technology and the modular packaging available in the firm's new 5000 Series systems.''

Prime Computer Inc., with headquarters in Natick, Mass., is a worldwide supplier of integrated system solutions for proprietary-based and open systems applications to selected end-user markets. NEW YORK (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Borden, Inc. (NYSE:BN) Tuesday reported 1990 third quarter net income of $107.8 million, or 73 cents per share, compared with a 1989 third quarter net loss of $303.4 million, or $2.05 per share.

Income in the 1990 third quarter increased $6.9 million, or 6.8 percent, and earnings per share rose by 7.4 percent from the prior year, after excluding a $570.7 million pretax charge ($404.4 million after-tax, or $2.73 per share) in the 1989 third quarter to cover the cost of a corporatewide reconfiguration program. Sales declined 1.8 percent to $1.94 billion, from $1.98 billion in the 1989 third quarter, primarily due to the divestment of several domestic businesses.

For the first nine months of 1990, Borden reported net income of $261.3 million, or $1.77 per share, compared with a net loss of $160.5 million, or $1.08 per share for the same period of 1989. Excluding the 1989 reconfiguration charge, the Company posted improvements of 7.1 percent in net income and 7.3 percent in earnings per share for the nine-month period versus the same period of 1989. Nine-month 1990 sales were up 0.9 percent to $5.74 billion, from $5.68 billion for the nine-month 1989 period.

Operating income in the 1990 third quarter was up 8.3 percent to $225.0 million from $207.7 million in the 1989 third quarter.

The Grocery and Specialty Products Division increased operating income 7.3 percent in the 1990 third quarter. Sales of $559.3 million were down 4.6 percent from $586.3 million in the prior year period, reflecting the divestments of the Krylon and Galloway-West businesses. The division had improved third quarter sales and earnings in its North American pasta operations, led by strong advances in the Creamette and Prince pasta units. The division also had sales and income gains in its niche grocery products, led by Borden and Lite-line cheese, ReaLemon lemon juice, None Such mincemeat, Wyler's and Steero bouillon, and Mrs. Grass dry soup mixes.

In the Snacks and International Consumer Products Division, 1990 third quarter operating income increased 5.7 percent, and sales of $500.7 million were up 12.9 percent from $443.6 million in the prior year period. North American snacks earnings benefited from improved sales volumes and reduced manufacturing and administrative costs. Advances were posted by the Wise Foods Humpty Dumpty, Clover Club and Moore's snack units. The division also reported higher sales and income from Sooner Snacks in the United Kingdom, its German sweet baked snacks business and the Gallina Blanca joint venture in Spain that nation's leading producer of bouillon and soups.

In the Dairy Division, operating income was up 24.6 percent from the depressed 1989 third quarter. Sales were down 17.1 percent to $436.0 million from $525.9 million in the year-ago period, reflecting the withdrawal from selected geographic markets and the 1989 divestment of the butter business. The division had income gains in nearly all of its ongoing regional dairy businesses as its restructuring and reconfiguration efforts continued to improve operating efficiencies.

For the worldwide Packaging and Industrial Products Division, third quarter 1990 operating income was up 6.6 percent; sales of $446.6 million were 5.9 percent higher than $421.7 million in the 1989 third quarter. There were significant sales and income improvements in European wallcoverings and plastics packaging, including the FIAP Group acquired in September 1989. Worldwide specialty resins and foundry materials also reported higher third quarter sales and earnings.

Borden, Inc. is a worldwide producer of foods, non-food consumer products, and packaging and industrial products, with worldwide sales of $7.7 billion in 1989. ZAANDAM, NETHERLANDS (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Koninklijke Ahold NV, one of Europe's largest food retailers and one of the top ten supermarket operators in the USA, announced that at its Extraordinary General Meeting of Shareholders held Tuesday, the shareholders adopted the Board's proposal to cancel all Koninklijke Ahold preferred stock. The holders of Ahold's preferred stock had previously given their approval.

At the same meeting it was proposed to split Ahold Dfl 5.00 par value common shares into two Dfl 2.50 par value shares. Since the quorum required for voting on this proposal was lacking, a new meeting has been convened for Thursday, November 22, 1990. The stock-split proposal is connected with the intended listing of Ahold shares in the United States.

At the meeting the Ahold Board confirmed its earlier statement that in the third and fourth quarters net earnings will continue to rise, but that the growth rate will be less than for the first two quarters of 1990.

For 1990 as a whole, the Board maintains its expectation that net earnings will be well in excess of the comparable 1989 figures. On November 29, Ahold will publish its results for the third quarter.

Ahold's shares trade on the Amsterdam Stock Exchange and may be accessed on the Reuters Equities 2000 service under the symbol AHLN.AS and on Quotron under the symbol AHOLN.EU. They also trade in ADR form in the US (symbol 3KAHLY on the electronic OTC Bulletin Board).

CHATTANOOGA, TN (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Dixie Yarns Inc. (NASDAQ/NMS: DXYN) Tuesday announced sales for the third quarter ended Sept. 29, 1990, of $137,241,000 compared with sales of $138,199,000 for the third quarter of 1989.

Net income for the quarter was $1,988,000, or 21 cents per share, compared with net income of $2,654,000, or 26 cents per share, which included $162,000, or one cent per share, from the sale of two plants, for the third quarter of 1989.

Sales for the first nine months of 1990 were $430,372,000 compared with $440,954,000 for 1989. Net income was $5,372,000, or 55 cents per share, compared with $9,989,000, or 95 cents per share, for 1989, which included $162,000, or one cent per share, from the plant sales.

Chairman Daniel K. Frierson commented, "The third quarter results reflect a continuation of the weakening textile economy experienced in prior quarters and margin pressures from a slowing general economy. The company continues to focus on specialty products and niche markets while improving its operations and reducing costs.

"We are looking forward to the positive results of our expanded capital expenditure programs of the last three years. We expect 1991's expenditures to reflect more nearly the level of our depreciation.

"The recently announced Ten-Year Revolving Credit and Term Loan arrangement totaling $225 million, of which approximately $20 million is being used, will provide the company with the flexibility necessary to support future strategic programs.

"Although we do not see any meaningful improvement in market conditions in the near term, Dixie is well positioned to take advantage of opportunities as they occur."

Dixie's business consists of four product categories: specialty yarns, industrial sewing threads, knit fabrics, and carpet and rug yarns. The company manufactures and markets yarns and threads from a variety of natural and man-made fibers and also processes yarns into knit fabrics.

Its products are used in the apparel, carpeting, domestics, drapery and upholstery, hosiery, industrial fabrics, transportation, and other industries.

CHESTNUT HILL, MA (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - General Cinema Corp. (NYSE:GCN) and The Neiman Marcus Group (NYSE:NMG) Tuesday announced that they have executed a definitive merger agreement under which General Cinema will acquire all the outstanding shares of The Neiman Marcus Group common stock which it does not already own at a price of $14.40 per share in cash.

Under the merger agreement, General Cinema will make a cash tender offer for all outstanding shares of The Neiman Marcus Group common stock not owned by General Cinema at a price of $14.40 per share. The tender offer is expected to commence on Nov. 5, 1990. General Cinema will not purchase any shares under the tender offer unless a majority of the shares of The Neiman Marcus Group common stock not owned by General Cinema are tendered.

The Neiman Marcus Group currently has 32.7 million shares of common stock outstanding, of which approximately 16.3 million are held by General Cinema and 16.4 million are publicly-held. General Cinema also holds an issue of convertible preferred stock of The Neiman Marcus Group.

If General Cinema converted the preferred, it would increase General Cinema's total equity interest in The Neiman Marcus Group common stock to approximately 60 percent.

If the tender offer is consummated, in a subsequent merger transaction The Neiman Marcus Group will become a wholly owned subsidiary of General Cinema and the remaining public shareholders of The Neiman Marcus Group will receive $14.40 in cash for each of their shares. The tender offer and the merger have an aggregate value of approximately $240 million.

The merger agreement has been approved by the boards of directors of both companies. In addition, a four-person Special Review Committee of the board of The Neiman Marcus Group, consisting of all of its directors who are unaffiliated with General Cinema, has unanimously approved the tender offer and the merger, determined that the terms of the tender offer and the merger are fair to and in the best interests of the public shareholders of The Neiman Marcus Group, and recommended that The Neiman Marcus Group's public shareholders tender their shares in the tender offer.

General Cinema, which operates one of the nation's largest theatre circuits in addition to its involvement in specialty retailing, recently announced that it expected net earnings for its fiscal year ending Oct. 31, 1990 to exceed $105 million, or $1.45 per share.

FAIRFIELD, NJ (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - The Union Corp. (NYSE: UCO) Tuesday reported revenues and earnings for the first fiscal quarter ended Sept. 30.

Revenues for the quarter were $21,422,000 compared with $16,266,000 for the prior year, an increase of 32 percent. Net income was $2,412,000, or 31 cents per share, compared with income of $1,883,000, or 25 cents per share a year ago.

The average number of common and common equivalent shares outstanding for primary earnings per share were 7,784,843 and 7,438,287 for the three months ended Sept. 30, 1990 and 1989, respectively.

The outlook for the industry continues to be promising as consumer debt remains at high levels, the issuance of credit cards has increased and installment debt continues to rise. Although the present recessionary environment may make it more difficult to collect amounts due from debtors, it will also increase consumer delinquencies and the demand for effective third party collection services such as those provided by Transworld Systems and Capital Credit.

Based on these factors, Cooper added, the prospect for Transworld Systems and Capital Credit is encouraging for the remainder of fiscal 1991. The company's financial condition continues to be extremely strong and liquid, which will enable Union to fund internal growth as well as to pursue acquisition opportunities as they develop.

The company provides accounts receivable management and debt collection services on a fixed rate and contingency fee basis to a wide range of institutional, commercial and government customers through its Transworld Systems Inc. and Capital Credit Corp. subsidiaries.

GREENWICH, CT (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - The Fund American Companies Inc. (NYSE: FFC) reported consolidated net income of $120 million, or $2.34 per share on a fully diluted basis, for the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990, compared to $89 million, or $1.54 per share, for the like period in 1989, an increase in net income of 35 percent.

The growth in income for the 1990 year-to-date as compared to the similar prior year period is due primarily to increases in realized investment gains and mortgage operations revenue.

Net income for the third quarter of 1990 was $12 million, or three cents per share on a fully diluted basis, compared to net income of $7 million, or a loss of five cents per share, for the third quarter of 1989.

Book value per common share as of Sept. 30, 1990, was $34.53, a decrease of $1.68 from the $36.21 reported as of Dec. 31, 1989, and a 47 cents decrease from the $35.00 reported as of June 30, 1990.

The reduction in book value is attributable to a year-to-date decline in appreciation on the company's investments in equity securities and unrealized losses on Fireman's Fund's trading portfolio of fixed maturities during the third quarter of 1990.

Income from continuing operations was $75 million, or $1.47 per share on a fully-diluted basis, for the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990, compared to $64 million, or 99 cents per share, for the like period in 1989.

For the third quarter of 1990, income from continuing operations was $8 million, or a loss of 12 cent per share on a fully diluted basis, versus income of $35 million, or 64 cents per share for the comparable 1989 period.

Revenues from continuing operations were $262 million for the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990, compared to $228 million for the like period in 1989. Revenues were $60 million for the third quarter of 1990, compared to $97 million for the like period of 1989. Year-to-date income and revenues from continuing operations improved due to increased realized investment gains and mortgage operations revenue.

Realized investment losses versus prior year gains caused the declines in third quarter income and revenues. Net investment income from continuing operations for the first nine months of 1990 was $102 million, compared with $107 million for the like period in 1989. In the third quarter, net investment income was $27 million for 1990 and $36 million for 1989.

The decline in net investment income reflects a reduction in the size of Fund American's continuing operations' portfolio of common equity securities during 1990. Pretax realized investment gains totaled $54 million for the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990, as compared to $35 million in the like period of 1989.

HOUSTON (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Enron Oil & Gas Co. (NYSE: EOG) Tuesday reported net income of $8.5 million, or 11 cents per share, for the third quarter of 1990. The company reported a loss of $3.3 million, or five cents per share, for the like period a year ago.

Enron Oil & Gas reported net income of $25.3 million, or 33 cents per share, for the first nine months of 1990. The company reported a loss of $8.2 million or 13 cents per share, for the same period a year ago.

Net operating revenues were $78.5 million in the recent quarter, compared to $64.4 million for the third quarter of 1989. The significant increase reflects the benefits of wellhead gas sales volumes being up 24 percent, other natural gas marketing volumes being up more than 180 percent and crude oil and condensate prices being up 37 percent in the third quarter of 1990 compared to a year ago.

"Revenues increased in spite of wellhead natural gas prices being 20 cents per thousand cubic feet (Mcf) lower in the third quarter of 1990 compared to the same period a year ago," said Forrest E. Hoglund, chairman, president, and chief executive officer of Enron Oil & Gas.

Operating expenses increased due to costs associated with new operations, higher production volumes and higher domestic dry hole and offshore lease impairment expenses, Hoglund noted. As in the second quarter of 1990, Enron Oil & Gas reported gains on property sales, with the third quarter gain being approximately $20 million pre-tax.

"These transactions reflect our willingness to sell non-core properties when the price received exceeds our expected present value of continuing to operate the property," Hoglund said. "However throughout 1990, the net of acquisitions and dispositions has added to EOG's reserve base." EOG continues to benefit from a lower effective tax rate reflecting the increased utilization of a net operating loss carryforward.

Although discretionary cash flow decreased slightly to $46.4 million for the third quarter of 1990 compared to $49.8 million a year ago, nine months discretionary cash flow totaled $159.9 million, up 27 percent from $125.8 million for the comparable period of 1989.

"Given the low wellhead natural gas price environment, we have continued the curtailment of production from shorter-lived fields," Hoglund said. "Total wellhead natural gas production for the quarter averaged 394 million cubic feet per day (MMcf/d) compared to 318 MMcf/d in the prior year.

DALLAS (OCT. 30) BUSINESS WIRE - Spurred by strong growth in both its traditional and General Motors business, EDS registered a 16 percent increase in net income and a 17 percent rise in earnings per share in the third quarter and experienced the best sales period in its 28-year history, the global information technology services company announced Tuesday.

EDS, which is based in North America and has operations in 27 countries, said that for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990, net income rose $17.5 million to $128.4 million, compared to $110.9 million in the corresponding period last year.

Third-quarter revenue increased from $1.37 billion a year ago to $1.53 billion in 1990, an increase of $160 million, or 12 percent.

The earnings of EDS (Electronic Data Systems Corp.), a wholly owned subsidiary of General Motors Corp., are used to calculate the earnings per share of General Motors Class E common stock (NYSE: GME). Earnings per share increased 8 cents in the third quarter, from 46 cents a year ago to 54 cent in 1990.

''The third quarter was extremely successful, not only in terms of the financial numbers, but also because we were able to add to our business base and widen its reach into a number of promising new areas,'' said Les Alberthal EDS chairman, president and CEO.

The quarter was highlighted by the signing of nearly $6 billion in new contracts during a record, mid-summer sales surge that brought EDS' business commitments over the next decade to more than $17 billion from non-GM customers alone. EDS currently has more than 7,200 customers around the world.
